"CRITICISM"

A PIECE entitled "A Theory of Criticism" written by Mr. Benjamin R. Crisler, reviewer, appeared as the leading article of the motion picture department of the New York Times of Sunday last. It is on the whole so objective and even tempered that perhaps Mr. Frank Nugent, editor of the section, should be reading it on his return from his vacation. In fact, it might be well for Mr. Crisler also to read it himself, from time to time.

Mr. Crisler advances as "the film reviewer's first practical tenet" the assertion "that if a film is consistent with itself, if it lives and stirs the onlooker on its own terms, however fallaciously . . . then it must be rated as good cinema. If it fails to meet these modest requirements—which, we repeat, certainly have nothing to do with art—then, for all its budgetary pretensions, the reputations of its stars, director, writers, etc., it is our duty to label the result spinach, in language unambiguous, although, of course, as elegantly euphemistic as possible . . ."

If the critics of the lay press would steer by that, progress would be had—not perfection, mind you, just progress.

The next step would be, it would appear, quite too much even for Mr. Crisler. That would require that the reviewer put enough of the picture under consideration on paper so that the reader might make his own judgment by his own standards.

What may be spinach to Mr. Crisler, for instance, might be asparagus to someone else or artichokes to another.

THE basic question is, does the New York Times, magnificent newspaper that it is, intend to sell Mr. Nugent, Mr. Crisler et al as entertainment in print, columnists deriving their subject matter from the screen, or is it seeking to serve its readers with information about the motion picture? Probably it intends a bit of both. It is possible that the readers may be mostly interested in the pictures.

It takes quite a knack of reporting to put any reasonably accurate representation of a motion picture on paper. It is far from a job of setting down one-man opinions about it.

Maybe it is not a one-man job, because conspicuously, in New York, the reviewing most representative of the consumers is done by women, including Kate Cameron of the Daily News, Eileen Creelman of the Sun, Rose Pelswick of the Journal-American and Bland Johaneson of the Mirror.

The difficulty, or part of it, seems to be that the young women attend the pictures intending to see the show as a show and tell about it, while the young men, when they get back to the typewriter, being bored a bit the while from too many movies, seek escape in their art of composition and in adventures of analysis too often dreadfully irrelevant to what the customers want to know.

WHEN reporters get bored with the news, they are not permitted to change the subject or pick the events apart. Take one of those reporters and assign him to look at a piece of entertainment and he becomes immediately a pontificating expert, and an editorial writer besides.

Mr. Crisler, in the same outgiving, gets a way into the question of "What is the relation between 'art', in the culture-club sense, and the films? The answer which we have finally arrived at, after years of close personal observation, beginning with 'The Perils of Pauline', which was poor art but swell cinema, is none at all."

Let us proceed to remark that the relation between art and art "in the culture-club sense" is also none at all.

The persistent and absurd general procedure of the commentators is to assume fixed positions and standards for art and to move the consumers or patrons thereof backward and forward in the scale. The consumer and patron is the authority, the arbiter, the final authority. If it's art to him, it's art. Entertainment seems to become "art" in the Crisler-sense at about the point where its importance as entertainment is invaded by cultural or other irrelevant considerations.

May we not say, again, that it is the purpose of the motion picture to be "your best entertainment"?

"FOUR DAUGHTERS"

A LONG with the marked box office success of "Four Daughters" come some especial values demonstrated by Warner Brothers. This highly successful piece of entertainment arrives without any of the golden trappings of super-picture routine. Its array of competent and pleasing personalities is made up of persons relatively unknown up to this advent. Its address to the interest of the patron is not spiced and sprigged with garlic of the abnormal, exotic or erotic. The picture has not been presented with cost sheet publicity. The public is not told how many millions it cost, if any, and nobody cares. The larger interest is in what it is worth, which is certain to prove for all concerned considerably profitable.

Of special interest is this aspect: all too commonly picture making is a process of assembling pieces and tokens of ready-made success, while in this one the success is all new made, original, on its own as to material. It is a utilization of the skills of Hollywood, without obeisance to formulae of budgeting and casting.

Speaking of "new faces"—"Four Daughters" indicates the way to get them.

It is being repaired with funds made available by the Emergency Appropriation Act. Since the job cannot be done with a shovel, it is being handled by the Parks Service.

Self-Regulation

Conferences behind closed doors followed by public statements indicating that action is imminent warranted the conclusion that producing-distributing companies shortly will take steps to carry out, at least in part, the program of self-regulation of trade practices study of which was begun early this summer but the execution of which was delayed by the filing of the Government's anti-trust suit. Charles C. Pettijohn, general council of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, speaking in Milwaukee, said one of two roads along which the industry must travel leads to self-regulation, the other inevitably toward control by "a policeman whose beat is changed so often he can never learn the business."

Developments are rehearsed on pages 12, 13 and 14.

Levine Returns

Nat Levine who left his berth as a producer on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot about six months ago without producing a picture has made a deal to return to the same studio as producer of from eight to 10 pictures for the new season. Mr. Levine recently moved into rental quarters at the Selznick International lot and will remain there for activities.

May Resume Talks

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox, declared this week that it was likely to reopen business conversations with Gaumont British later this year. He indicated he will return to London later in the year and at that time is hopeful of meeting Mark Ostrer, GB head, who now is away from London on vacation. Mr. Schenck refused to discuss the details of the proposed negotiations, which may concern product only. However, there was a strong intimation that the conversations would cover wider ground. Mr. Schenck declared Twentieth Century-Fox is still in the market to do business, presumably referring to GB. A deal whereby Mr. Schenck's company and Loew's would take over control of GB collapsed some time ago.

Before sailing on the Queen Mary for New York Wednesday, Mr. Schenck also declared that the English accent is the greatest handicap to British product. Otherwise, he said, England has everything but climate and stars. He also reiterated that his company will make five films at Pinewood, to cost a total of £500,000 ($2,500,000). They will be all-British, he said.

Fox Records

The wife and two daughters of William Fox have made a new offer to remove their All-Continent Corporation from the fight over his $9,535,261 bankruptcy. They are now ready to deliver the books and records of All-Continent and subsidiaries at once to Hiram Steelman, trustee of the bankrupt's estate for audit and examination, it was revealed in Atlantic City Wednesday by Allen B. Endicott, Jr., federal referee.

Mr. Endicott authorized Mr. Steelman to begin the inspection and to file a written report of his findings. The report will be shown to creditors of William Fox at a hearing October 10th when a $5,000,000 compromise to settle a suit against All-Continent again will be considered.

New Grand National

The merger of Educational Pictures, Inc., with Grand National was approved by the federal court, Los Angeles, this week and thus a new corporation, New Grand National Films, Inc., was created. Only one creditor, an attorney, voiced opposition at the hearing which lasted three hours. Under the merger plan, E. W. Hammons, head of Educational, became president of the new corporation, and Edward A. Alperson, co-trustee for Grand National, became vice-president and general manager.

Educational Service

With the resumption of school in September, March of Time will initiate a new type of educational service in the form of a current affairs quiz for classroom use, Louis de Rochemont, producer, said this week. Similar to those published semi-annually as supplements to Time magazine, the test will afford exhibitors an opportunity to make a direct tie-up between theatre and school, since the test will be so prepared that a viewing of the film will be essential to the answering of quiz questions, Mr. de Rochemont added.

Decision was based on returns from questionnaires sent to 2,500 teachers.

New British Problem

To the immediate problems harrying the film industry in Britain has been added the necessity of studying in the near future the problem of television and its place in the entertainment scheme. The necessity has been forced by the increase in public interest in the medium, by trade opposition to the rental of feature films for television programs and by the showing in theatres of televised pictures of important sports and other outdoor events.

Upturn Predicted

A sharp upturn in profits of a majority of the motion picture companies is anticipated during the final months of this year, according to the Wall Street Journal. "A good list of box office attractions is ready for release," the financial newspaper continued, "and, equally important from a profit standpoint, they are, in the main, films costing considerably less to produce than last year's program." The prediction continued by pointing out that with the approach of fall the industry is feeling its normal seasonal pick-up. Cooler weather and the launching of the new films have combined to boost revenues of exhibitors and producers, the article added. "The current upward trend comes," the Journal explained, "on the heels of a summer season during which earnings of a majority of the amusements companies fell materially under the same period a year ago. Generally poor business conditions and extreme heat cut theatre attendance, a situation made more pronounced by a dearth of good films. Even those pictures which drew well were handicapped as earners by the high level of production costs."

No Pact Quest

The National Broadcasting Company this week issued a statement denying that a representative of the corporation had approached the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers regarding preliminary discussions for a separate contract with the networks.

"It is the policy of the National Broadcasting Company in any discussion of licensing arrangements with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, to make no move independently but to work in the closest cooperation at every step with its affiliated stations, the Independent Radio Network Affiliates and the National Association of Broadcasters," the statement said.

Capital Opening

A preview showing of the Alexander Korda-United Artist, "Drums," was held Tuesday night at the Rialto theatre, Washington.

The theatre was opened especially for the occasion and among those who attended were:

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Dr. Roswell Magill, Acting Secretary of War General Mailin Craig, Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, Postmaster General James A. Farley, Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson, Assistant Secretary of the Interior Ebert K. Burlew, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Assistant Secretary of Labor Turner W. Battle, Rear Admiral A. B. Cook,

Broadcasters, Irked by Newspaper Campaign, Issue Ultimatum to Films

Resentful of the fact that newspapers will obtain all advertising in the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign, Ed Kirby, director of public relations for the National Association of Broadcasters, this week issued an ultimatum that film companies will have to pay for radio time in the future if they expect continued help from broadcasters in the publicizing of new films.

The radio industry feels its contributions to the motion picture business deserve "some economic return, the same way in which the newspapers justly charge for and earn a fair return for the services they render in the visual field," Mr. Kirby informed Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and chairman of campaign advertising committee.

Radio in the past, Mr. Kirby reminded the film industry, has been extremely generous in plugging songs, actors, and pictures on a charity basis. Broadcasters are "at a loss to follow the logic" behind the campaign committee's decision to use only newspapers in advertising the campaign and establishing good will, Mr. Kirby said.

Mr. Kirby supported his ultimatum with the suggestion that the film industry's plan may disturb radio advertisers who spend large amounts for film talent.

"In the light of past cooperation, the statement of your committee is most disappointing and in view of future relations between radio and motion pictures it is most alarming," Mr. Kirby told Mr. Dietz.

It also was pointed out that the National Association of Broadcasters already is "reviewing all practices, relations, and cooperative connections" between the film and radio industries.

The report of Paul Peter, research director of the NAB, will be the basis for adopting policies to guarantee that the privileges radio has been giving films "will not be abused or ignored," Mr. Kirby added.

Meanwhile, large advertisements in some 2,000 newspapers throughout the country this week launched the film industry's campaign. Latest developments in the million dollar drive are recorded on page 15.

Rear Admiral George Pettingill, Major General Thomas Holcomb, Colonel Julian Smith, Brigadier General Clayton B. Vogel, and Major General Walter L. Reed.

Among the highlights of a campaign planned for the picture by Lynn Farnol, United Artists advertising and publicity director, is a $60,000 magazine advertising campaign. There will also be co-operative newspaper advertising reaching 40 million readers.

Paramount Dividend

At a meeting of the board of directors of Paramount Pictures, Inc., held August 29th, the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share on first preferred stock and the regular quarterly dividend of 15 cents per share on the second preferred stock were declared. These dividends are payable on October 1st to stockholders of record at the close of business on September 16, 1938.

25th Anniversary

The RKO Palace, Broadway at 47th Street, New York, which at one time was generally regarded as the leading vaudeville house of the world, celebrated its 25th anniversary this week.

The theatre, where an appearance virtually guaranteed professional recognition, was built in the spring of 1913 by Martin Beck, who was then president of the Orpheum circuit, but was taken over by E. F. Albee on September 1, 1913, to become the pivotal theatre of the B. F. Keith circuit.

It was in 1933 that the Palace first changed to a two-a-day motion picture house, with Eddie Cantor's picture, "The Kid from Spain." Shortly after the house adopted a picture-vaudeville policy but this was dropped in 1935. A straight policy was then inaugurated and has been continued since.

MAJORS PLAN TO PROCEED WITH SELF-REGULATION AFTER TALKS WITH U. S.

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Within the next three weeks the motion picture business will determine its procedure pending final outcome of the Department of Justice's sweeping anti-trust suit.

The major companies, all defendants in the trust action, are preparing with the utmost secrecy to return to their original plan of self-regulation for distribution-exhibition. First, however, they intend to determine from the Department of Justice their position in any self-regulation moves in relation to the pending suit. But, regardless of the tenor of these conferences, the majors intend to take steps toward self-regulation. This is the plan, according to authoritative sources.

The Government is about to provide a new factor affecting motion picture procedure, pending outcome of the suit, by moving for a temporary injunction to restrain the five distributor-exhibitors from any further theatre expansion. The move will be made immediately should the five companies refuse to "voluntarily" agree to refrain from such expansion when the companies and the Government meet in Washington this month at a conference called by the Department for the purpose.

Two strong pleas were made Wednesday in behalf of self-regulation as against industry rule-by-law, one by Charles Clyde Pettijohn, general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the other going out from national headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America over the signature of Edward L. Kuykendall, president.

Said Mr. Pettijohn:

"We are at the fork of two roads. One road is self-regulation. The other provides us with a policeman whose beat is changed so often he can never learn the business."

Said Mr. Kuykendall:

"What about the long-suffering independent exhibitor? Should he wait for the outcome of this litigation? What we want is a practical, effective solution now. And there is only one way we can get it—self-regulation with the cooperation of the distributors."

Evidently moving with realization that the Department of Justice already is deep into motion picture probings, Washington indicated this week that the investigation of monopoly in "big business" by the Administration's O'Mahoney committee will only touch films "lightly," if at all.

The chief concern of the major companies in connection with the resumption of joint conferences on self-regulation is whether the

"LOCAL" REGULATION PROPOSED ON COAST

Action pointing to one of the first local self-regulation moves to be proposed in the field in years was taken this week when the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California, in Los Angeles, took under advisement a proposal of Charles Skouras, Fox West Coast head, for creation of a three-three board of arbitration for the mediation of trade practices and grievances between independents and the circuit. Mr. Skouras addressed a meeting of Los Angeles unaffiliated theatre owners Tuesday, as called by Albert Galston, president of ITO, and declared he and his aides stood willing at any time to listen to proposals for bettering the atmosphere between circuit and independents, and asked the organization to appoint three members to meet with three executives of FWC to iron out future difficulties which might arise.

The situation in California between Fox West Coast and independents has been a sore spot in the industry for years, with exhibitors frequently complaining against the circuit's so-called "aggressions" and alleged "unfair" advantages obtained by the Fox affiliate from distributors.

Government will construe such joint discussions as conspiracy under federal anti-trust statutes. Lawyers of the distributors have for years advanced such a possibility, creating a timidity in the minds of many of the distributors that precluded enactment of a program. This was disregarded, however, some months ago, and leaders in distribution took the initiative of undertaking discussions to formulate a trade program. Much progress was reported by the distributors' committee, headed by Sidney R. Kent, Nicholas M. Schenck and Leo Spitz. Then the sudden filing of the Government's suit, on July 20th, caused the companies to abruptly suspend activities, Mr. Kent making the following formal announcement:

"I am informed substantial progress has been made, but it now seems definite that meetings with exhibitors cannot be held until after Labor Day. The problems facing the various companies, which now can only be met after consultation with their counsel because of the Government suit, are so important that they must be studied carefully before anything is done.

"Right after Labor Day, and after counsel have given their opinion, it can be said definitely what the position in regard to meetings with exhibitors will be, or it can be said whether conditions because of the pendency of the Government suit make it impossible to meet the exhibitors at all."

The distributors' decision making the adoption of self-regulation questionable came as a surprise. Previously, on the filing of the Government's suit, Mr. Kent as the distributor spokesman had said, "We share the general industry belief that the most intelligent and satisfactory solution of our problems eventually will be reached through self-regulation, rather than through litigation."

Will Regulation Talks Constitute Conspiracy?

Apparently it was that same legal apprehension over the possibility that they may jeopardize their position in the Government's trust suit by entering into concerted agreements for the self-regulation of trade practices that led to the decision of the majors to postpone self-regulation while their lawyers studied the plan.

Now it seems that with certain important corporation heads and distribution executives holding the opinion that self-regulation would be particularly advisable at this time, closely held discussions are about to result in the distributors seeking an opinion from the Department of Justice as to their position in the matter.

The companies are understood to realize that the Department can not give them any official or written decision, but they do hope to obtain at least an oral, informal assurance that the Department will not take advantage of the majors by later holding up any renewed self-regulation conferences as a typical example of the "concerted manner" in which the majors allegedly operate, in attempting to show that a conspiracy does exist in the business. They seek to guard against the specific act being used against them.

Action Due After Labor Day

So far as is known there have been no official arrangements made by either side providing for talks between the Department and the distributors on the particular subject, nor has any definite manner of approach or date been set by the companies.

It was indicated, however, that the move is expected to be made immediately after Labor Day, and will constitute the distributors' very first action toward a return to their original plan for self-regulation. This would seem to have verification in Mr. Kent's statement that, "Right after Labor Day, and after counsel have given their opinion, it can be said definitely what the position" of the distributors will be."

Suggestions for moulding the industry program to conform in some respect to the Government's 23,000-word legal petition will not be asked by the distributors, nor is it expected that the Department will make any.

The present move pointing toward self-regulation

lation also is prompted by the opinion held in some quarters that while the Government hopes to eventually establish through court decision the status of certain trade practices under existing trust law, the motion picture business must continue to operate in the interim, and, therefore, an industry program will go a long way to re-establish harmonious relations now between buyer and seller.

Also it is felt that if the organized industry does not get its house "in order" now, they will find it doubly hard later, some executives boiling their conclusions to the point where the industry must either operate under its own regulations or be interfered with by continuance of attacks in the form of independent exhibitors' individual trust suits, state "divorcement" and anti-chain legislation and block booking and other proposed controls by Congress.

Meanwhile the distributors are keeping their line of approach quiet, to guard against any upsets, of which there already have been many, as evidenced by the original threat to the trade practice program when the Government filed its suit July 20th.

Of significance, however, was the statement made last week in New York by William F. Rodgers, general manager of distribution for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and a member of the Kent committee on self-regulation, who said he earnestly hoped that the committee will proceed with its work because a program is urgently needed.

Injunction Would Halt Circuit Expansion

Distributor spokesmen in New York report they are aware of the existence of papers already drawn and ready for filing by the Department of Justice for a temporary injunction against any further distributor-circuit expansion pending outcome of the suit. Whether the Department will feel it necessary to apply for the order depends on the outcome of a conference this month between the five major circuits and the Government at which the Department will ask the circuits for a "gentlemen's agreement" to refrain temporarily from such expansion.

The Federal suit seeks to divorce exhibition from distribution, and apparently the Government feels that expansion now of the defendant circuits' holdings would complicate the complaint, which cites theatres controlled up to the time of the writing of the petition.

While there has been no open indication of the major circuits' intentions, it appears, significantly or otherwise, that virtually no theatre acquisitions have been made by them since the complaint was filed last July 20th, possibly other than commitments on new theatres, acquisitions or leases that were made prior to the entering of the government's action.

The Department, it is expected, will not look for any joint agreement from the five, but rather will seek individual commitments and will act individually against any one or more, if necessary.

Overtures for a "standstill" agreement from the circuits came last Wednesday in a letter from Thurman Arnold, Assistant United States District Attorney at Washington, to Loew's, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Paramount, Warner Brothers and Twentieth Century-Fox (National Theatres).

Mr. Arnold's request for a conference was construed in some distributor quarters as a step by the Government possibly toward sounding out the defendants on a consent decree. Others, however, asserted that a consent decree "all depends on what the government would consent to," adding that the majors could not consent to the complaint in its present form and still stay in business. It is argued that a consent decree would be a virtual confession of guilt.

Films "Don't Need Courts, Don't Need Laws"

In one of the most pointed expressions to be uttered by an officer of the organized industry on the subject of self-regulation as against rule-by-law, since filing of the suit, Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the MPPDA, told a gathering at Milwaukee Wednesday that, "The welfare of the industry now is at stake."

The occasion was a two-day meeting and reunion of virtually all of the Wisconsin motion picture business, at Milwaukee's Schroeder Hotel, and at which Mr. Pettijohn was a principal speaker. (A report on the meeting appears on page 29.)

Sounding a keynote that the rejection now of self-regulation will result in "outside" control, Mr. Pettijohn warned that no one in the business is "going to get anywhere unless we all approach the problem of trade practices with a desire not to gain selfish advantage but to promote the success of the industry as a whole. We must see the forest," he added, "not just the tree."

"The motion picture has risen from rags to riches by methods typically American," he stated. "It was developed by small business men who had the vision and the courage to grasp and improve their opportunities."

ALLIED SET TO FILE SUIT AGAINST B & K

Allied of Illinois and individual members of the organizations, after weeks of discussions and conferences, will file an anti-trust suit against Balaban and Katz within the next few days, according to Rosenberg, Stein & Rosenberg, Allied Counsel. Final corrections in the papers are now being made. The independent exhibitors have demanded that B&K abandon double featuring or accept a reduction of its clearance schedules.

In Oklahoma City, A. P. Murrah, federal district court judge, this week set September 29th, as the date for a hearing on arguments on a motion to strike out the petition of A. B. Momand, Shawnee, Okla., theatre operator, who accuses major distributors and the Griffith Amusement Company of violating the anti-trust act. Mr. Momand is asking approximately $4,-900,000 damages.

Patrick T. Stone, federal judge, will hear Edward Ruben's petition for dismissal as a defendant in the $1,500,-000 damage suit filed by La Crosse Theatres, Inc., on September 7th, in the United States district court, Superior. Mr. Ruben, one of six defendants in the action, contends the court has no jurisdiction because he is a resident of Minnesota.

"It had no traditions to influence it, no charted course to follow."

"In 22 years I have noted the astounding vitality which has enabled this business to surmount obstacles and barriers and to live through devastating civil wars within its boundaries. I have seen the wise men in this business accept the truth all wise men know—that peace is more profitable than war."

"But in these days it is the fashion to rush to courts and legislatures with any real or fancied grievance that may exist. It is old-fashioned and passe to sit around a table together and handle our own affairs in an honest and sincere way."

"In these days it is the fashion to blacken each other and to utter reckless denunciations of our merchandise and the industry that supports us all," said Mr. Pettijohn, continuing:

"We are at the fork of two roads. One road is self-regulation. If we follow that road we can continue to conduct our own business. The other road provides us with a policeman whose beat is changed so often he can never learn the business. If any of you are thinking of taking this road I beseech you to reflect just for a moment on the fate of other industries which have felt the throttling grip of political control."

"We are still free to choose the road we shall travel. I am old-fashioned enough to believe that self-regulation is the correct course."

"We haven't long to make up our minds, and by 'we' I mean all of us—exhibitors, distributors and producers. We can't just stand still and do nothing. The forces, in and out of the industry, which would put us under thumb are on the march. And we need a united front."

"Live and Help Live"

"The first necessity in self-regulation of our trade problems is to adopt the principle of live and help live," he declared. "This industry cannot operate successfully under any system which would give one group unfair advantage over another. Every group must have equal opportunity to do business and to stay in business."

"The solution is simple. All that is required is good faith, integrity and common sense. If we have the will to act, the methods of self-regulation are easy to find. To help us make up our minds we don't need courts and lawsuits, we don't need legislatures and laws. Exhibitors, distributors and producers—the people who run this business—must make the decision for themselves. Once that decision is made, it can be promptly determined what procedure is necessary and most efficacious."

"If the structure of this industry ever falls, it will not be from assault from without, but by destruction from within. Exhibitors, distributors and producers must live as good neighbors."

"They must discuss their own affairs calmly and settle them justly and amicably. I am a lawyer, but I tell you that no lawyer and no legislator and no self-appointed second-Moses can lead you to a promised land of plenty."

"Bounden Duty"

"Equitable agreements are never impossible unless they are made impossible by the attitude of the persons concerned. No two elements in the motion picture industry can quarrel without public interest being involved. I tell you that the important factors of which this industry is constructed have a bounden duty in the direction of fair covenants honestly arrived at," he said.

"Nor can I in frankness conceal my disappointment that certain things have not moved faster in the direction of self-regulation. I shall not try to place the blame.

"It is so easy to say that the other fellow is at fault. But let's not delude ourselves. We aren't going to get anywhere unless we all approach the problem of trade practices with a desire not to gain selfish advantage but to promote the success of the industry as a whole.

"If we reject self-regulation, we'll get some form of outside control that cannot help, but will only wreck our business. Good intentions aren't enough. We need good faith. We must have an earnest determination to work out our own problems among ourselves.

"We already have adopted self-regulation of production and advertising. When those early efforts were made I remember that a few people, blind to realities, shook their heads sadly and predicted all manner of dire disaster. How wrong they were! These are achievements in which we can all share pride.

"Perhaps it is only timidity on the part of a few that is holding us back from pursuing a similar course with regard to trade problems. Maybe a few people are still blind to the realities of today and of tomorrow. We should not let these few deter us: The welfare of an industry is at stake. The opportunity to do is now. The time to act is short."

"Self-Regulation Is Desperately Needed"

"Disaster for the whole business lies in the attitude of the distributors on trade practice negotiations," in the opinion of Edward L. Kuykendall, MPTOA president, who, on Wednesday, issued from MPTOA's headquarters in New York a lengthy statement deprecating "self-styled leaders" of independents who now are "gleefully celebrating" what he caustically refers to as "the three outstanding victories achieved for independent exhibitors in the past three months," meaning passage of the Neely anti-block selling and anti-blind buying bill by the U. S. Senate, the North Dakota theatre "divorcement" law as upheld by a lower court in a suit brought by the majors to have the law declared void and unconstitutional, and the Department of Justice's charges against the organized industry.

"They were achieved through years of agitation and fighting, through campaigns reputed to have cost many thousands of dollars collected from one faction of small independent exhibitors for the purpose of promoting these ideas, through persistent and aggressive effort on the part of the leaders who represent the independents in these matters," he charged, adding:

"For some peculiar reason the rank and file of independent exhibitors do not seem to rejoice as much as they should over these events. The enthusiastic celebration of their self-styled leaders is obviously not shared by the more sober but inarticulate rank and file who have on their shoulders the responsibility of managing theatres. Can it be that the exhibitors themselves have failed to receive any tangible, actual benefit from these great victories? Maybe the independent exhibitors have been doing a little thinking for themselves instead of following the party line as laid down in the prepared propaganda that is handed to them.

"Probably the worst thing that could happen to the independent exhibitor would be a real victory that would see the Neely Bill finally enacted. Those who are not blinded by prejudice and propaganda, and who take the trouble to study the Bill for themselves, know that it will unquestionably wreak great damage on their business," continued the MPTOA president.

"Independent exhibitors," he charged, "are almost unanimously opposed to compulsory block booking. Effective and practical removal of this abuse through an unconditional option to cancel a reasonable number of pictures in every contract has been blocked, at least in part, by those who profit from the prolonged agitation for such legislation."

"Divorcement" Cited as No Remedy

Turning to theatre "divorcement" laws, Mr. Kuykendall holds that despite such laws, "the large theatres now operated by the affiliated circuits will still be there, will still provide competition for the smaller opposition theatres. Independent exhibitors and promoters of this legislation who hope to acquire these properties at bargain prices on a forced sale are just kidding themselves. Only a few of the independent theatres in the country are in actual competition with any affiliated circuit theatre anyway. The other theatres could not possibly benefit from such a law.

"For those who are in actual competition, it merely means a change in ownership at the opposition theatre, and that the new management will not have any of the restraint on competing policies that comes from the fact that they also have pictures to sell to independent exhibitors. Does anyone think that will bring them any fairer competition?" he asked.

In the matter of the Department of Justice suit, Mr. Kuykendall declared that, "Years of delay and refusal on the part of distributors (we understand on the advice of counsel) to meet or seriously try to meet the demands of organized exhibitors for reasonable reforms in business practices to remove abuses and prevent injustices made such action inevitable. For many years MPTOA has fought and pleaded with the distributors to take care of the trade practices and grievances covered by the suit just as a matter of good business, but to little avail. If the complaints and grievances of merit in this business are not attended to, litigation and legislation is inevitable. The distributors brought this upon themselves, in the face of continuous warnings from exhibitor organizations," he charged.

After describing the Department's bill of complaint as "complex and confused," Mr. Kuykendall likened a majority of the Department's complaints against distributor-exhibitor trade practices as similar to those listed by the MPTOA in its three-year-old proposal to distributors for self-regulation by means of a so-called "ten-point program."

An Effective Solution Desired Now

"In the meantime," he continued, "what is the industry going to do? Are we going to let the abuses, grievances, complaints and irritations run wild? What about the long suffering independent exhibitor? Should he be forced to sit by and wait for the outcome of this litigation? What we want is a practical, effective solution of our problems now. There is only one way we can get it—self-regulation with the cooperation of the distributors.

"The distributors, by their attitude on trade practice negotiations with exhibitors can very easily throw the sympathies of every independent exhibitor in the country on the side of the prosecution by refusing to proceed with a voluntary trade practice program on account of the suit. That will force the exhibitors to look to the courts and the legislatures as the only possible way to satisfy their grievances. There lies disaster for the whole business.

"The industry must realize that there are other serious attacks and problems that are not affected by a Department of Justice suit. There are 48 state legislatures that are not enjoined or influenced in passing legislation to tax and regulate our business by this suit. And, in the meantime, there is nothing to prevent Congress from legislating as they please. This suit does not interfere in any way with the filing of any number of private anti-trust suits, triple damage actions, etc.

"In fact, such a spectacular, widely publicized anti-trust suit charging monopoly, conspiracies and other dire misdeeds, greatly encourages such things. As long as the irritations and grievances that cause lawsuits and demands for rigid regulation, as well as for reprisals, remain, the sore spots will continue to fester and break out. Why don't we get down to business and do the job that should have been done three years ago? The responsibility for stopping the program that was under way rests entirely upon the distributors. Will they have sense enough to resume the job before it is too late?" Mr. Kuykendall asks.

The MPTOA president will arrive in New York September 10th from his home in Mississippi to confer with the eastern officers on a trade practice program.

Position of Films in New Deal's Monopoly Probe

Investigation of monopoly by the Administration committee headed by Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming, is not expected in the capital to be directed to any great extent to motion pictures.

Some members of the committee are understood to hold the opinion that its activities should be confined principally to fields which have not been explored exhaustively by Government agencies.

These members are said to believe that the Department of Justice has made a thorough study of conditions in the motion picture industry and can quickly and easily supply any information which the monopoly committee desires.

The Department files, it has been said and not denied by anti-trust division officials, contain a complete compendium of all the activities and developments in the industry over a long period of years, while the Securities and Exchange Commission, in its investigations of reorganizations and protective committees, gathered the full story of the rise and fall of motion picture "empires," and through registration statements has detailed data on the financial set-up of the companies, and the Federal Communications Commission, in its investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company developed another side of the story, that of patent monopoly.

With all of these agencies interested in motion pictures, it is pointed out, any investigation undertaken by the O'Mahoney committee would, of necessity, largely traverse ground that has previously been covered and would probably develop very little or nothing that would add to the findings of the others.

Furthermore, it is contended that the Department of Justice has outlined what it describes as its cure for monopoly in the film industry, in its pending civil suit in New York—the divorce of production and distribution from exhibition and the outlawing of various practices by which independent producers and exhibitors are alleged to have been discriminated against.

It is pointed out that if the Government is not successful in that suit, Congress will be asked to enact legislation prohibiting the practices which it is attacking.

PARADES, PROCLAMATIONS AND ADS SIGNAL OPENING OF INDUSTRY DRIVE

Barrage of Newspaper Advertisements Carries "Greatest Year" Message to Public in 1,460 Communities in U. S.

"MOTION PICTURES ARE YOUR BEST ENTERTAINMENT." From the pages of nearly 2,000 daily newspapers in 1,460 communities scattered throughout the United States and Canada, the slogan blazed forth to millions of readers this week as the industry, after weeks of intensive preparations, plunged into its million dollar advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign, a drive that is expected to make this the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year."

In conjunction with the launching of the industry's first concerted effort to swell box-office attendance, exhibitors in cities, towns and hamlets banded together for the staging of celebrations, demonstrations and special events that were designed to win public attention for the drive. Proclamations were issued by mayors in many cities, while in other communities the inauguration of the drive and its $250,000 "Movie Quiz" contest was marked by parades and similar events. Campaign officials estimated that approximately 9,000 individual theatres are taking part in the drive.

Present plans are for Will H. Hays to speak on the campaign on C. B. DeMille's Lux hour, September 12th, over CBS.

On Wednesday the committee announced that pledges from independents representing 8,500 theatres had been received, assuring the completion of the $1,000,000 quota. It was decided to admit houses operating four days or less a week at five cents per seat.

The national advertisements, 11 of which already have been prepared by some of the nation's topmost advertising men, are scheduled to run in small town papers during the next two weeks while in the larger cities they will be spread over the next four weeks. The course of action to be followed by the national committee after that has not been decided upon as yet but it is expected that the campaign will have gathered sufficient momentum by then to be carried on by local advertising campaigns.

Although the drive did not open officially until Thursday, in a few of the larger cities such as New York, Chicago, and Boston, the initial advertisements appeared in some evening papers on Wednesday. Distribution of the "Movie Quiz" booklets containing a list of the 94 pictures which form the basis of the quarter-million dollar contest also started on Thursday.

To Continue to December 31st

The drive and the contest will continue until December 31st, and, by that time, the campaign committee expects, some 200,000,000 booklets will have been distributed to the theatre-going public in United States and Canada.

Although no specific order is being followed in the insertion of the national ads, for the most part the initial advertisement was one entitled "The Average Movie-Goer Speaks His Mind." This ad measures 14 1/4 inches by 260 lines. Only in cities where more than five newspapers operate will there be any duplication of advertisements. In other locations each newspaper will run different ads. It is planned, however, to equalize the amount of space taken in the various newspapers. Paul Gulick, coordinator of the drive, explained this by pointing out that the newspapers receiving the larger ads in the beginning will get the smaller ads during the course of the drive.

GERMAN AWARD AT VENICE PROTESTED

Harold Smith, European representative of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Neville Kearney, British delegate to the International Venice Film Exposition, this week protested the award of the Mussolini Cup by the Exposition committee to the German film, "Olympia", on the ground that it was not a feature but a documentary film. They contended that politics dictated the award.

The advertising, it is estimated, will cost from $500,000 to $600,000. Although no official figures as to expenditures have been released by the campaign committee, the budget tentatively is broken down in this fashion:

Advertising .....	$600,000
Contest prizes.....	250,000
Operation of Contest.....	50,000
Accessories .....	50,000
Administration .....	50,000

TOTAL .....$1,000,000

Donahue & Coe is the advertising agency handling the preparation and execution of the advertising material and placements but it has obtained cooperation from other agencies which service motion picture distributors. They include Biow Company, Inc., Blaine-Thompson, Buchanan & Company, J. Walter Thompson, Lord & Thomas, and the Kayton-Spiro Company. All will share in the 15 per cent commission which will be paid to Donahue & Coe and then distributed on the basis of the amount of business the various agencies do with film companies.

Newspapers Cooperating

The newspapers are being paid on a "run of the paper" rate but the cooperation of the press is being sought and in numerous cases the advertisements are appearing on the amusement pages. The ads, set in 14 point Garamond bold face type, are characterized by informality and broad reader appeal. The first 11 were selected from a total of 35 drafted and submitted to campaign officials. All ads call attention to the contest and direct readers to local theatre for entry blanks. Under a heading of "Watch for these new season pictures at your favorite theatre," each ad carries a list of new season pictures of the participating producing companies with the names of those starred or featured in each production.

Under the committee's plan, ads will appear from Monday through Friday, with no space being used on Saturdays, Sundays or holidays. In the first group are the following ads, with sizes: "The Average Movie-Goer Speaks His Mind," 14 1/4 inches by 260 lines.

"Four Walls That Hold a World," 12 3/16 inches by 222 lines.

"200 Million People Can't Be Wrong," 12 3/16 by 208 lines.

"What Is Your 'Stake' in Motion Pictures?," five columns by 235 lines.

"It Could Only Happen in the Movies," five columns by 200 lines.

"Joe Doakes and His Girl Want the Earth—and They Get It," 12 3/16 inches by 266 lines.

"One Tornado and Three Hopi Indians... Please," six columns by 236 lines.

"276" (Reference to the number of arts, crafts and professions which unite in making motion pictures). Six columns by 216 lines.

"A Message to You From All Those Who Make Motion Pictures," six columns by 214 lines.

"You Are Your Own Best Movie Critic," five columns by 228 lines.

"The Unseen Hand," (Audience tastes guiding production). Six columns by 232 lines.

Also shipped out this week was the third section of the campaign committee's newspaper size press book. Included in the publicity section—the third section—are by-lined articles by notables in the film industry. Featured on the cover is a composite sketch of a motion picture studio described as "showing an average layout embracing the principal departments of the sort of vast establishments that form cities within the city of Los Angeles and its suburbs, and giving an idea of the vast resources assembled to make 'The World's Best Entertainment.'"

S. Barret McCormick, advertising and publicity director of RKO, produced the publicity section of the press book. The first two sections, sent out two weeks ago, covered advertising and exploitation. Monroe Greenthal, United Artists, had charge of the exploitation section while the advertising section was handled by Howard Dietz, MGM advertising and publicity director and chairman of the campaign's advertising committee.

A feature of the third or publicity section is a full page, illustrated article by Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. The article is entitled "Miracles That Mark the Progress of Cinema Art," and in it Mr. Ramsaye traces the progress of the motion picture, pointing out "how the world's dominant entertainment medium paralleled the broad advance in popularity of the press, but reached a rapid climax of grandeur under the stimulus of the modern age."

"The two greatest bargains available to the man-in-the-street, the common people, are the motion picture and the newspaper," Mr. Ramsaye wrote.

Mr. Ramsaye calls attention to the fact that the average admission price is 22 cents.

"Just as the newspaper with its increasing services of world coverage, tremendous improvements in printing, rotogravure, color, pictures, have so vastly multiplied in values to the buyer without increases in price, so has the motion picture poured the public's millions back into better theatres, better entertainment, better art."

Authors of other articles in the section include Will H. Hays, Frank Capra, Grover Jones, Archie Mayo, Robert Sisk, Cecil B. De Mille, William Keighley, George Stevens, Frank Lloyd, Wesley Ruggles, W. S. Van Dyke, Fritz Lang, Bryan Foy, Walt Disney, and several stars such as Cary Grant, Bette Davis, Jean Arthur, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., James Cagney, Claudette Colbert, Lionel Barrymore, Carole Lombard, Pat O'Brien and Jacqueline Wells.

Scheduled for release at the end of this week is Trailer No. 6 on the "Movie Quiz" contest. The trailer features a running comment by Ed Thorgeron, sports newsreel commentator. The film opens with montage shots with dialogue showing public reaction to news of the contest, fades into a close-up of Mr. Thorgeron talking and then switches, with the commentator's voice doing the explaining, to illustrations indicating what to do in order to enter the contest.

As indicative of the amount of detail work involved in lining up nationwide forces behind the drive, the campaign committee pointed out that on Thursday of last week the peak of the pre-campaign drive was reached with the sending of 26,740 pieces of mail. Of the total more than 20,000 went to exhibitors, and others directly connected with the drive, and 2,000 went to newspapers.

In Hollywood it was announced that Samuel Hinds, Dorothy Peterson, Anne Shirley, Johnny Walsh and Charles Grapewin will replace the Hardy Family players originally cast for short subject, "The World Is Yours," which will be used in connection with the drive. Basil Wrangell will direct in place of George B. Seitz, originally announced. Peter Ballbush of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Gordon Jennings of Paramount are handling montage and special effects.

Accessory Cost Low

Accessories and their costs were the subjects of a statement issued this week by George J. Schaefer, executive chairman of the drive.

"Exhibitors should understand," Mr. Schaefer said, "that the amazingly low price of campaign accessories, banners, posters and other materials, is made possible only by the fact that they are being offered by the dealers at the absolute cost of manufacture.

"A simple comparison of these accessories with the customary cost of similar materials will reveal that in many instances the price has been reduced by as much as two-thirds. For this we must express our thanks to the generosity of the dealers, and to the voluntary contributions of the exchanges handling the materials, which eliminated handling costs.

"The low price of the booklets is below the normal actual cost of that sort of job, and has been reduced because of the tremendous quantities ordered."

Silverman Predicts Chicago's Quota Will Be Oversubscribed

The quota for the Chicago territory will be oversubscribed by the end of the first week of the campaign, Eddie Silverman, who is in charge, predicted this week.

Balaban & Katz, under the guidance of William K. Hollander, advertising head, is making a special effort to capitalize on the contest and campaign activities. At Essaness theatres Herb Elisburg was kept busy planning for the completion of the most elaborate advertising campaign the circuit as a whole has undertaken.

The Warner Brothers theatres have arranged for decorating the houses and for special advertising.

80 Omaha Exhibitors Pledge $2,400 to Drive

A preliminary check in the Omaha territory showed that 80 exhibitors have pledged $2,400 to the campaign, exclusive of 45 circuit houses. The list includes Nebraska, South Dakota and Iowa exhibitors. C. E. Williams and D. V. McLucas are contacting exhibitors.

Delaware Theatremen Hear Final Plans

State and city officials, managers of circuit-operated and independent theatres throughout Delaware and leading distributors from cities near Wilmington met at the Hotel DuPont, Wilmington, Friday night to hear reports on final plans for the state's participation in the drive.

Richard C. McMullen, governor, and Walter W. Bacon, mayor of Wilmington, were among the guests and speakers. Carter Barron of Washington, division manager of Loew's, was toastmaster.

Entertainment has been a necessity since time immemorial and the motion picture industry is doing all in its power to fill this need, Mr. McMullen declared.

Harry Goldberg, Philadelphia, director of advertising for Warner Theatres, also spoke.

Theatre representatives present included A. J. Vannie, Philadelphia zone manager, Warner Theatres; Jack Mulhall, Warner district manager, and the following managers: Benjamin Shindler, Edgar Doob, Benjamin Seligman, A. J. Deflore, John O. Hopkins, Lewis S. Black, Sidney Hunter, John Harding, Arthur Cohn and Earl G. Finney.

Unlimited Support Pledged in Portland

Unlimited support to the film industry's advertising campaign was pledged when 100 exhibitors in the Portland, Oregon, territory met at the Multnomah Hotel, Portland.

Drive Seen as Challenge To Producers of Films

S. H. Falk, spokesman for independent exhibitors in Toronto, this week described the industry's advertising campaign as "a challenge to Hollywood to make movies the public's best entertainment."

"A new era should be ushered in with this campaign," Mr. Falk stated in an article published in the Canadian Independent. "The campaign slogan should help. But what would help more than anything would be a good slogan or code for Hollywood. Condition yourselves to honest production along a wider front of adult interest. Condition the public mind to believing that movies are its best entertainment and conditions will recondition themselves.

"The campaign, while addressed to the public, is really a challenge to Hollywood to make movies the public's best entertainment."

It also was pointed out in Toronto that exhibitors are actively supporting the drive and have no intention of demanding the inclusion of British films in the "Quiz" contest. Pledges from Canada now total more than $30,000, according to J. J. Fitzgibbons.

New England Exhibitors Hear Talk by Franklin

Harold B. Franklin, business manager of the campaign, addressed a group of 60 New England exhibitors at Hotel Statler, Boston, and informed them that if the drive is successful it may become a permanent industry setup. Mr. Franklin also declared that a contest similar to the "Movie Quiz" contest may be a part of next year's "Fiftieth Anniversary of the Motion Picture."

M. L. Levenson, circuit owner and divisional drive chairman, presided at the meeting.

Serving under Mr. Levenson are Martin Mullin, Harold Stoneman, George Ramsdell, Julius Joelson, Ralph Snider, Stanley Sumner, Ed Fay, Tom Bailey, Herman Rifkin, Russ Cropper, John Dervin, Maurice Wolf, Nate Furst, William Kelley, Harold Rogovin, William Erbb and Samuel Broidy.

Immediately following a campaign committee meeting in Connecticut, Bridgeport exhibitors formed a Showmen's Club. An organization meeting will be held about September 15th.

Proclamation Issued By Cleveland Mayor

Harold H. Burton, mayor of Cleveland, this week issued a proclamation that September 2-8 be designated as Motion Picture Week in Cleveland. Everett Steinbuck, manager of Loew's, was given credit for having had the proclamation issued.

At a regional meeting in Cincinnati unanimous support and financial pledges of 10 cents per seat were voted for the drive by Arthur M. Fredenfeld, division manager of RKO Midwest; Maurice White, president of United Theatres; F. W. Huss, Jr., president of Associated Theatres; Tracy Barham, general manager of Southio Theatres, Inc., and approximately 100 independent exhibitors.

Broadway Managers Plan Promotional Campaign

Meeting in the office of Howard Dietz, chairman of the campaign advertising committee, Broadway theatre managers and publicity men agreed to their first cooperative promotional campaign for the Times Square area.

Ben Serkowitz of the Capitol was designated chairman of the Times Square committee. Others at the meeting were Hazel Flynn and Neil Folwell of the Music Hall; Homer H. Harmon, Roxy; Jack McInerney, Paramount; James Dunne, Rivoli; Irving Windisch, Strand; Phil Laufer, Criterion; Oscar Doob, Loew's, and Buck Harris, RKO. Ben H. Atwell, former publicity director for the late Samuel L. Rothafel, will handle publicity.

Fabian Conducts Albany Meeting

Members of the Eastern New York regional committee met in Albany Tuesday with Si Fabian, president of the circuit bearing his name, presiding. Mr. Fabian outlined to the theatre managers and local branch managers the part each is expected to play in the drive.

Harold B. Franklin of the national committee, was the principal speaker.

Co-chairmen for the region are Meyer Schine, M. J. Kallet, William A. Smalley, Moe A. Silver, Louis R. Golding and Phil Fox.

WB To Pay Costs Of Ad Campaign

Warner Brothers this week disclosed plans for "the largest cooperative advertising campaign in its history" in conjunction with the national release of "Four Daughters."

The campaign, the cost of which will be borne entirely by Warner Brothers, will run in 33 first run key city engagements and will be a duplicate of the series of 1,200 line ads used in New York newspapers for the picture's engagement at the Radio City Music Hall.

The ads take the form of a statement from Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production.

In addition to the newspaper campaign, the company will launch a national fan magazine campaign in the November issues of 14 magazines. The full page magazine ads, Warner Brothers estimated, will reach a total of 18,000,000 readers.

U Campaign Under Way

Universal's national exploitation campaign for Deanna Durbin's picture, "That Certain Age," got underway this week with the branch office release of a disc recording which ballyhoos the music and high spots of the new film.

1939

In the past, most motion picture advertising in the national magazines has simply featured current releases. On the pages that follow you will see how Paramount has created and developed its new "TIME-FLO" INTERMESHING Advertising Technique.

Special "Tailor-Made" copy is written to fit each magazine. Each "TIME-FLO" advertisement plays up one big current release in large space. (For example, the September 3rd Saturday Evening Post advertisement gives most of its space to "Spawn of the North.") Then, by means of "COLUMNS," each advertisement tells—in newsy manner—something about the Paramount Pictures which have just been released and those which are to be released in the near future. (In the case of the September 3rd Saturday Evening Post advertisement, the other pictures featured are "Sing You Sinners," "If I Were King," and "Men With Wings.") As each picture approaches its national release date, it moves up into the "No. 1 Spot," while the newer (and slightly older) product moves into the "Columns." Thus—

Month after month, in intermeshing manner, Paramount sells today's show for you, whether yours is a first or a subsequent run theatre—while you are playing the pictures. At the same time, Paramount advertising will get your patrons ready for the pictures which are to come.

This is Completely NEW . . . It is an Entirely DIFFERENT kind of moving picture advertising. And—IT WILL HELP YOU SELL MORE TICKETS WHEN YOU PLAY PARAMOUNT PICTURES!

Paramount's Roaring Drama of America's Last Frontier . . .

IT'S a busy day on the big Paramount lot in Hollywood. Director Henry Hathaway, famous for his ability to bring the drama of primitive emotional conflict, of thundering action, to the screen, is guiding Paramount's "Spawn of the North" through the final stages of production. On the set are such famous players as George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Barrymore, Louise Platt and Lynne Overman. Beautiful Dorothy Lamour has forsaken her famous tropic sarong for the rough dress, the laced boots of a daughter of the northern wilds. Raft and Fonda are wearing oilskins. For "Spawn of the North" is set in Alaska of 1908, when feud law ruled as brother fought brother, friend fought friend for the priceless rights to the silver horde... King Salmon.

We ask permission to take a few candid camera shots to show our Post friends. Permission is granted and we snap away. The results speak for themselves. You can see Henry Hathaway has a picture to rank with his "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," his "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer." But Paramount Producer Albert Lewin insists we visit a pro-

"ARKANSAS TRAVELER"

"PARAMOUNT'S 'Arkansas Traveler,'" writes Bing Crosby's radio buddy, Bob Burns. "is the story of a very lazy man, which is me. In fact, he's so lazy he makes the ordinary lazy man look like a bundle of nerves. Yet he's got a lot of common sense. For where the hard-workin' teller has it easy on account of when work is offered him all he does is take it, the lazy teller has got to figure ways of gettin' around workin'. And that takes a heap of sense. Paramount has handed me Fay Bainter for team-mate in this 'Arkansas Traveler' picture. And you know Fay's just about as fine a gal as there is in pictures. Then they've gone and handed me another person, you'll be glad to hear about. He's a ringer. He ain't a real picture actor like me. In fact, he used to turn out some pretty lancy writin'. But he's got a lace on him that's like my Uncle Snazzy's. Once you've seen it and recovered from the shock, you'll never forget it as long as you live. His name is Irvin S. Cobb."

"MEN WITH WINGS"

When they called the roll of stunt flyers assembled on the Paramount lot for the breath-taking plane fights in "Men With Wings," Paramount's Technicolor cavalcade of American aviation, they discovered this was the biggest bunch of air aces to hit Hollywood since Producer-Director William Wellman's first aviation triumph, "Wings."

601,369 PAY $266,896 TO SEE 'RAGTIME'

The chart shows the attendance at the Roxy theatre in New York during the first three weeks of Twentieth Century-Fox's "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and a comparison with the attendance during the first three weeks of Fox's "In Old Chicago." The total attendance at "Alexander's Ragtime Band" for the first three weeks was 506,196 against a normal attendance for the same three weeks of 256,320. Total receipts for three weeks and five days were about $266,896 with an attendance of 601,369. Indications are that by the end of the fifth week, the Irving Berlin musical will have played to 675,000 persons and grossed nearly $300,000 at the single Roxy booking. The fifth week will be the last at the theatre because of congested bookings.

"Ragtime" Held In 44 Locations

"Alexander's Ragtime Band" has had additional playing time in every key city where it has opened, raising the total of holdovers and "move-overs" to 44, it was announced this week at the home office of Twentieth Century-Fox.

As at the Roxy Theatre, New York, the picture set a new engagement record at the Chicago Theatre, Chicago. The picture went into its third week whereas previously no picture had played more than two weeks.

In 11 other key cities, the picture so far has entered the third week of its first run engagements either by being held over or by being moved to another theatre in the same city.

In Atlantic City, it played two weeks at the Apollo, setting a new house record for business, and then moved to the Strand, where it has been set for at least two additional weeks. In Boston, it has entered its third week at the Metropolitan, and is scheduled to continue its first-run for additional weeks by moving to another theatre. At Cleveland, it ran two weeks in the Hippodrome, and then moved to the Allen, where a minimum of two additional weeks has been decided upon.

The picture is now playing the third week of its first-run engagement in Dallas at the Tower Theatre, having moved over following a first week at the Majestic. In Houston, it has started its third week at the Majestic—the first three-weeks run in the history of that theatre. In Los Angeles, after two weeks at the Chinese and the State, it has been shifted to the United Artists and the Wilshire to continue its first run. At Portland, Ore., it is in its third week at the Paramount, and the same is true of the Stanley at Philadelphia, the Alvin at Pittsburgh, and the Texas at San Antonio.

The picture has been held for two weeks at Akron, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Detroit, Indianapolis, Louisville, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Montreal, Providence, San Francisco, Seattle, Toronto, Worcester and Youngstown.

In Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Denver and Baltimore, it is expected the film will have a minimum run of five weeks.

Fifth Roxy Week Sets New Record

With daily, opening morning and weekly attendance records already to its credit, "Alexander's Ragtime Band" set a new engagement record at the Roxy Theatre, New York, this week by entering its fifth week. During the first four weeks of the run, which ended Thursday night, more than 625,000 persons paid over $275,000 in admissions.

During the 11½ years the Roxy has been operating only six pictures have had four-week engagements: "Street Angel" (1928), "Cock-Eyed World" (1929), "Common Clay" (1930), "Baby Take a Bow," (1934), "Happy Landing," and "In Old Chicago," (1938).

The figures for the fourth week were:

Friday . . . . .	15,902	Sunday . . . . .	21,301
Saturday . . . . .	25,749	Monday . . . . .	14,977
Tuesday . . . . .	17,244

The gross for the first three weeks and five days of the fourth week was $266,896 and the gross attendance 601,369.

WISCONSIN GROUP HONORS THOSE IN FILM BUSINESS QUARTER CENTURY

Tribute Paid to 120 at State-wide Conclave in Milwaukee; Chas. Trampe Guest of Honor; Industry Notables Speak

Twenty-five years of progress in motion pictures were observed Tuesday and Wednesday by the industry in Wisconsin, with virtually all hands present and all factional lines erased in one of the most unusual film get-togethers ever held. The gathering was attended by 700 persons.

They called it a "Jubilee" and the "Wisconsin Motion Picture Industry Reunion". It was a tribute, too, to those pioneers who have rounded out a quarter of a century in films in the state.

The guest of honor was Charles W. Trampe, an independent distributor, handling Monogram pictures in the territory, and both major and independent distributors and affiliated and unaffiliated exhibitors applauded him for his 25 years of service to the screen. Tribute was also paid to 120 others who have been 25 years in the business in the territory. Each was presented with a bronze plaque at the banquet Wednesday evening.

The two days were spent mostly in festivities, but on Wednesday afternoon at the only business meeting, Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the MPPDA, struck the serious note. He suggested that all in all branches of the industry everywhere should recognize that "The welfare of the industry is now at stake," and strive to ward off "outside" interference by adopting self-regulation.

Specific topics of conversation included conciliation, arbitration, legislation and litigation. Also Mr. Trampe announced that Wisconsin had over-subscribed its quota of $5,000 for the Motion Pictures Greatest Year Campaign.

"Motion pictures don't need the courts, don't need the laws" to conduct its business, he said. (Mr. Pettijohn's remarks are published in full on page 12, in a report on a plan of the majors to proceed with self-regulation.)

Steffes, Golden Attack Majors

Al Steffes, Northwest Allied States Association leader whose speech followed that of Mr. Pettijohn, said, "Mr. Pettijohn gave the right speech but to the wrong audience. It should have been made to Will Hays and the distributors. We wanted self-regulation but we couldn't get the major companies to cooperate. We were driven to the courts for regulation to protect ourselves."

He criticized the major companies' policy of delay in the formulation of a policy following the recent Government action and insisted that "Now is the time to get together." Declaring that what the industry needs is a "czar, not like Will Hays who acts only for the majors," he pledged his support to anyone qualified to be "supreme arbitrator" of the business.

Edward Golden, sales manager of Monogram, criticized the major companies and their executives, who, he said, were "intellectually incapable of self-regulating the film business." He added that the salvation of the industry was for exhibitors to support the smaller production companies.

Headquarters for the reunion were Milwaukee's Schroeder Hotel. From there the program was conducted. Registration was at 10 Tuesday morning, followed by a review of exhibits, including pictures which span the last quarter century and souvenirs gathered from all corners of the state to recount the manner in which the industry has risen from the nickelodeon to its present position.

Tuesday evening all hands sailed Lake Michigan, aboard the S.S. Illinois, returning for a continuance of Variety Club's open house. A midnight preview was held for the Alexander Korda-United Artists production of "Drums" at the Warner theatre.

Registration and review of exhibits continued Wednesday morning and at noon separate luncheons were given to ladies and to men delegates, the former at West Wisconsin, the men gathering at the Schroeder Hotel.

The Schroeder's Crystal Ballroom was the scene Wednesday afternoon of the business meeting, where addresses were made by Mr. Pettijohn, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Golden and the other guests. The business session was concluded just prior to the big event of the two days, the banquet at the Schroeder, Wednesday evening, where acts and entertainment galore was furnished by the local industry.

The banquet brought out the keynote tribute to Mr. Trampe, who was selected as exemplifying the pioneer spirit of achievement and fair dealing which have raised the standards of the industry from its early days. The bronze plaques were then presented to his colleagues who, too, could count a quarter century in films in Milwaukee and elsewhere in the state. Names of those so honored appear elsewhere on this page.

At the end, Mr. Trampe, speaking for the Wisconsin industry, observed that, from the business session, "We have ironed out the few small difficulties among ourselves and promoted a better understanding with other members of the motion picture."

HOLLYWOOD GUILD DISPUTE TO LABOR BOARD AS PEACE TALKS FAIL

Regional Board Opens Hearings on Petition of Directors; AFL Refuses to Rule on Control of Theatre Employees

In the fields of unionization and worker organization, the motion picture and its allied branches were confronted this week with some rather significant developments:

After both were apparently moving toward accord, studios and the Screen Directors Guild suddenly called off a discussion in the matter of collective bargaining, and the fight again found its way to the National Labor Relations Board, which started hearings Monday.

The American Federation of Actors moved for a wages-and-hours agreement for stage players in motion picture theatres.

The conflict over jurisdiction over box-office and front-of-the-theatre workers in film houses was returned by the American Federation of Labor to the warring factions: the Theatrical Managers, Assistants and Treasurers Union and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

A special committee of IATSE members arrived in Hollywood this week to study operations and conditions in the West Coast studio locals. The study is being made at the suggestion of George Browne, IATSE president, who proposed it at the recent Cleveland convention.

Consolidated with the Directors Guild's petition that it be declared the collective bargaining agency for directors, assistants and unit managers were charges that 10 major studios violated the Wagner Act by failure to bargain collectively and by alleged intimidation and coercion of employees.

Before the opening of the hearing on Monday before William R. Ringer, trial examiner, the studios and the guild had carried on negotiations pointing toward an amicable settlement of their differences. Darryl F. Zanuck, Sam Briskin and E. J. Mannix represented the producers, and Howard Hawks, W. S. Van Dyke and Rouben Mamoulian, the directors, but the negotiations were called off abruptly Saturday morning when the two sides were unable to agree upon the inclusion of unit managers as part of the guild. The producers remained adamant in their contention that the guild is not properly qualified to represent the unit managers. This point has been the major dissension factor throughout the negotiations which started a year ago.

At the hearing Monday the names of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the Association of Motion Picture Producers, First National Pictures and Pat Casey were dismissed as respondents in the NLRB action.

Mr. Hawks, called by William Walsh, board attorney, was the first witness. He told of the production of pictures, detailing duties of directors, assistants and unit managers. The duties of assistant directors and unit managers, he said, are virtually the same.

The hearing on Tuesday was featured by a clash between attorneys for producers and the guild over disclosures of salaries paid to directors, assistants and unit managers.

SEEK TO OUTLAW THE "QUICKIE" STRIKES

The signatures of some 92,000 persons have insured the placing of Initiative No. 130 on the ballot in the State of Washington. It is designed to end "quickie" strikes, presumably including those in the state's motion picture business. The Insurance Agents League of Washington took a leading part in its being put on the ballot.

The bill provides that a strike may be called only after written demands have been served on employers, including exhibitors and other film employees, and a 30-day truce period ensues in which time every effort must be made to settle controversies amicably. If, at the end of that period a strike is to be called, the final determination must be made by the employees through the medium of a secret ballot conducted by the county auditor.

asked Mr. Mamoulian, second witness for the SDG, questions about the amount of money he received for directing Paramount's "High, Wide and Handsome." After the objections of Barry Brannen, Guild attorney, had been overruled, Mr. Mamoulian said his recollection was that he had received $145,000. Although the witness pointed out that the picture was shooting 26 weeks and required more time and effort than two ordinary pictures, Mr. Schwartz managed to bring out that while Mr. Mamoulian was receiving a high salary his assistants and unit managers were receiving a top salary of $150 a week.

Seeking to make a legal point, as required under NLRB rules, that stopping of work by directors would affect materially the flow of interstate commerce, Mr. Walsh elicited from Mr. Mamoulian that assistant directors and unit managers are incapable of carrying on a director's work should the director become incapacitated.

Following Mr. Mamoulian, Herbert Biberman testified that 40 per cent of the directors at the studios formerly were unit managers and assistants. He gave further details concerning the work of each classification.

The first step in the AFA move to obtain a wages-and-hours agreement for stage players in film theatres was taken when Harry Calkins, AFA organizer, prepared to formally present his organization's demands at a meeting with Frank Phelps of Warner Brothers, with regard to the Strand, New York City. The Strand last week inaugurated a stage band policy with Ben Bernie's band as the opening attraction.

The agreement being sought by the AFA would provide for a minimum of $60 per week for principals and $40 per week for members of the chorus. The union also is demanding a maximum of four shows a day or 28 per week, asking that any additional shows per week be paid for on the basis of one-twenty-eighth of a week's salary per show. The union has succeeded in acquiring the membership of all those employed on the Strand's stage at present.

Union officials declared that this is the first serious attempt to standardize working conditions of vaudeville performers in 21 years.

Announcement of the conflict over box-office and front-of-the-house workers in film theatres being returned to the warring factions was made by William Green, A. F. of L. president, at the same time he indicated that he believed the two theatrical labor groups could settle the differences between them.

Quick Action Predicted For New York Union Deals

Labor negotiations with theatres in the New York metropolitan area this fall will be consummated without much difficulty, it was predicted this week as Local 1, New York stagehands, started conferences with Major L. E. Thompson of RKO. Under an agreement reached last fall, the union was granted a six per cent increase with another six per cent raise promised for this fall. The circuits, however, are understood to be requesting that the union postpone the raise because of business conditions.

The circuits also are requesting a two-year contract. The union is seeking to have relief men listed on the payroll instead of being paid indirectly through the union.

Injunction Sought Against Pickets

D. Seltzer and T. Parker, who operate the Oregon Theatre, Portland, Ore., have filed suit in circuit court to enjoin the Motion Picture Operators' Union and the Central Labor Council from picketing their theatre.

They contend that they want to operate their projectors and can't pay scale.

Laboratory Technicians Picket Loew's Building

Local 702, laboratory technician's union, picketed the Loew's State Building, New York, for a brief period this week as part of its demonstration against Du-Art Laboratory, involving the union's current strike.

The affiliate of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees began its demonstration against the laboratory's customers last week by picketing the Godfrey Building, which houses Columbia's home office.

Projectionist Negotiations Open in Chicago

In Chicago Wednesday Allied States Association, acting for independents, and Balaban and Katz officials opened negotiations with projectionist unions for a new contract. Exhibitors jointly are refusing operators' demands for an increase in wages and indications are the discussions may continue for several weeks.

Penn Newsreel Theatre To Open in New York

The Penn Newsreel Theatre, located in West 34th Street, opposite the Penn Station, New York, will open next Thursday under the management of Joseph Steiner, who built the house in association with Stanley Heller and William Klein. The house has 456 seats and was constructed by Tischman Realty Corporation from plans executed by Roche & Roche, theatre designers.

Issues from the five newsreel companies will be used on the opening program along with a novelty single reel, "The Memory Lingers On." "March of Time" will be presented once each month, Mr. Steiner said.

NEW GRAND NATIONAL CREATED BY MERGER WITH EDUCATIONAL

Federal Court Approves Plan for New Production and Dis- tribution Unit; Hammons Re- serves Non-theatrical Rights

New Grand National Films, Inc., came into being this week following the federal court approval in Los Angeles Saturday of the merger plan for Educational Pictures and Grand National Films. The court's sanction was given after a three-hour hearing during which only one Grand National creditor voiced opposition to William P. James, federal judge.

The single creditor protest came from Jules Goldstone, attorney, representing himself in his claim of $17,500 against Grand National Films, Inc., and Grand National Studios, Inc., which several months ago went into reorganization under Section 77B.

The new corporation will have approximately $1,510,000 cash available for financing a production at the outset, Mr. Hammons said Wednesday. He admitted the late announcement of the company's product would present a problem to the sales force but pointed out that this would be offset to some extent by the retarded film buying noted in some sections. Mr. Hammons indicated he will produce "four or five" features and short subjects at Eastern Service Studio at Astoria, Long Island, and might make several additional features at the west coast studio.

Mr. Hammons declined to discuss a proposal made by Louis Jackson, London financier, which would involve reciprocal distribution here and in England. Mr. Jackson is an emissary of the newly formed Anglo-American Films Company of London. His mission in the United States is to line up American product for distribution in England.

Mr. Hammons said it would take a week or 10 days to complete the new corporate setup and that directors and officers other than Mr. Alpersen and himself would not be nominated until then. The underwriting of the new company's securities has been arranged with two brokerage houses which Mr. Hammons said he could not identify until final financial arrangements have been filed with and approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Educational's $50,000 check to cover the cash payment to Grand National provided for in the merger agreement was mailed to Mr. Wright Tuesday, Mr. Hammons said.

In his notice to stockholders, Mr. Hammons pointed out:

"We plan to turn over to this new subsidiary all theatrical assets for which Educational receives 1,100,000 shares of the new subsidiary's stock and also 550,000 warrants."

Non-theatrical Plan Mentioned

In listing the assets which will not be turned over to New Grand National, Mr. Hammons cited "non-theatrical rights in motion pictures."

"We propose in the very near future," he explained, "to engage actively in supplying schools and non-theatrical users with motion picture films, which, we feel, can be made substantially profitable to Educational."

He continued with his explanation of the plan by stating: "Educational's proposed new subsidiary . . . will acquire on what your man-

ONE-FEATURE POLICY FAVORED IN DALLAS

James Owen Cherry, Dallas manager of Interstate Theatres, visiting in Hollywood this week said that pictures playing single bills in Dallas do half again as well as the same pictures on double bills in other cities of the same population.

Many times, he said, he has out-grossed double feature billings in other cities of 300,000 by two to one. Certain short subjects get billings and marquee space with the feature picture. He said that Warner Brothers musicals, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's crime subjects and Pete Smith Specialties, and Disney cartoons are the most popular as draws.

agement regards as a most reasonable basis, assets of the existing Grand National Films Corporation that Educational greatly needs. . . . The most important of the assets . . . is a system of 29 fully equipped motion picture exchanges which we will operate and which will give us an outlet for all of our theatrical productions. The building up of this distribution system cost the old Grand National Company in excess of $1,500,000 during the past two years."

The final phases of the agreement, looking to the immediate start of the new corporation are scheduled to be decided upon following the arrival in New York late this week of Mr. Alpersen. He, with Mr. Hammons, will complete production plans and the management setup of New Grand National in coming conferences.

Under Mr. Alpersen's contract with the new corporation, if the president is paid in shares of the new corporation's capital stock, Mr. Alpersen will be entitled to receive as added compensation for the same period a like amount of such stock. Employment of Mr. Alpersen under the contract will be terminable by either party at the end of any year by giving six months notice.

Significance Cited

The significance of Educational's acquisition of the Grand National exchanges "can be more fully appreciated," Mr. Hammons pointed out, "when it is considered that the distributing arrangement for our pictures with the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation expired July 31."

During the hearing on the plan in Los Angeles, Mr. Goldstone challenged Mr. Wright's contention that the creditors of Grand National would receive less if the company liquidated rather than merging with Educational. He declared he did not believe Educational would have sufficient security to purchase back $200,000 preferred stock to be given creditors for 66 2-3 per cent of the claims. The new corporation, he contended, would be embarrassed by a lack of working capital and would be burdened by heavy obligations and administration expenses. Mr. Goldstone made his statements after cross-examining Mr. Wright on details of the plan. (The details were revealed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week.)

In addition to Mr. Wright, William Ncary, assistant Grand National treasurer, testified at the hearing. He disclosed the financial figures.

Approval Sought For RKO Claims

The Irving Trust Company, as trustee for RKO, yesterday filed a petition in the United States district court with the consent of RKO Orpheum Corporation, asking the court to settle claims held by RKO Orpheum against RKO totaling $1,726,983 for $50,000, and to approve an agreement between RKO and RKO Orpheum, whereby the claim would be satisfied in return for the satisfaction of claims held by RKO against RKO Orpheum. The petition stated that the book value of the assets of RKO Orpheum were approximately equal to debts owed by RKO Orpheum to RKO and that the former desired to create a capital surplus by a reduction of its indebtedness.

Irving Trust also stated that under the proposed agreement it would take steps to reduce the total fixed indebtedness of RKO Orpheum now evidenced by a $2,644,655 six per cent non-cumulative income note held by the Chemical Bank & Trust Company as trustee to $2,000,000. In return, the petition declared, RKO Orpheum Corporation has agreed to increase its preferred shares from 673 to 1,143, and will issue to Irving Trust an additional 470 shares of this class.

The $1,726,983 in claims now held by RKO Orpheum against RKO originally belonged to the Publix Indiana Corporation and were later assigned to RKO Orpheum Corporation.

Depinet Drive Winners To Receive $15,000

Approximately $15,000 will be distributed by RKO among the employees of the leading exchanges as supplementary prizes in the Ned E. Depinet Drive. These are in addition to the capital awards previously announced by Jules Levy, general sales manager.

The Buffalo office, headed by C. Boasberg, was the major victor.

Film History in Film

John Hay Whitney, president of the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art, said this week that the library will produce for general release an as yet untitled feature length film which will portray the history of motion pictures from the beginning of the medium to the present time. John Abbott, director of the Film Library, left New York for Hollywood this week to seek the cooperation of the major studios. Directors of the Museum are A. Conger Goodyear, Nelson A. Rockefeller, Mrs. John S. Shepard, Samuel A. Lewisohn, Cornelius N. Bliss, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Stephen C. Clark, Mrs. W. Murray Crane, Lord Duveen of Millbank, Marshall Field, Edsel B. # TELEVISION CLAMORS FOR PLACE AMONG BRITISH TRADE PROBLEMS

Public Interest, Theatre Showings and Question of Program Control Combine to Force Study of Medium in Near Future

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

Problems of past and present are not the only ones with which British exhibitors presently are concerning themselves. They are occupying their minds—at least being asked to occupy their minds—with one of the looming problems of the future, the problem of television as a factor in contemporary entertainment.

A direct and unequivocal lead was given British exhibitors at the Annual Conference at Folkestone this year, when they were advised, not under any circumstances, to enter into contracts for picture theatre television apparatus, until they were so recommended by their General Council. Now, at the September meeting of that General Council, High College of Cardinals of the exhibitor denomination, the whole question of television and its relations to the picture theatre is to be examined and discussed, and, in all likelihood, a lead given to the rank and file.

The British trade has lacked a concrete and coherent policy, not so much from essential difference as from sheer inertia and indifference. Certain vivid and inescapable developments which have come to the forefront of the contemporary scene have stirred a slight but significant feeling of uneasiness, and the mood of indifference is likely to change to one of concern.

In the Public Eye

Television has come more dramatically to the public eye of recent weeks than ever before. The increasing use of the British Broadcasting Corporation's mobile broadcasting unit, at such public events and focal points of popular interest as the Derby, the Trooping of the Color, the Football Cup Final and the Test Matches, all of which have been or are being televised with exceptional technical brilliance is significant. These have been, by special dispensation of the Portland Place Hierarchy, received and shown, in private, on a large screen in the Tatler Theatre, Charing Cross Road, shown with a technical polish and ease previously possible only with direct motion pictures.

The opening this week of the 1938 Radiolympia show, annual shop window of the Radio Manufacturers Association, one of the few trade shows with a considerable popular appeal, has been concentrated predominantly on television. Receivers for the not unreasonable low price of £30 ($150), an increase on the BBC's outside broadcasts, expansion of the televising hours and of the entertainment offered, and the regular daily broadcasting of feature films are straws in the wind.

There is not, however, much preoccupation in the exhibitor mind in regard to the competition of domestic television, little fear that it is as yet, if ever, going to keep people from the picture house, and fix them inextricably by the fireside and the television receiver. The price is, as yet, in the prohibitive class. Very few of the plebeian picture house patrons whose shillings and six pences make up the bulk of the industry's revenue can afford thirty pounds for a luxury instrument, especially one the uses and services of which are limited to a very few hours a week. Still less can they afford the highly priced receivers which embrace radio as well as television, and which market for £150 ($750) and over.

MERGER OF ENGLISH CIRCUITS REPORTED

Although not officially confirmed, it is reported that recent London conversations have been held pointing toward a consolidation of the Gaumont British theatre circuit, the Odeon circuit and the theatres owned by Sidney L. Bernstein. The negotiations are understood to be among the Ostrer brothers, heads of Gaumont British; Oscar Deutsch, head of the Odeon group, and Philip Hill of Philip Hill & Partners, financial house.

The proposed merger, probably backed by the Hill resources, would form a solid booking bloc in opposition to Associated British Cinemas, Ltd., headed by John Maxwell, the country's dominant theatre owner. The merger reported under discussion would bring together a group of more than 550 houses. The Ostrers and Mr. Deutsch would direct the combination and Mr. Bernstein would retire, it is understood. There has been a booking arrangement in effect for some months between Odeon and G.B. United Artists holds a 50 per cent interest in the Odeon circuit.

There are geographical limits, too, for though the BBC service is technically excellent, the range of Alexandra Palace's high powered transmitters does not go safely beyond the fifty mile radius, and only with absolute certainty operates within the twenty-five-mile limits. There is tentative and nebulous talk of a transmitter at Birmingham, in the center of England. Other provincial areas must for some time stay without.

Programs Indifferent

A further fact is the very indifferent nature of the entertainment provender offered the public. Money is apparently being spent rather on technical developments than on securing star performers—many of whom of course are debarred from television by their vaudeville contracts. Programs at this stage are very "itsy bitsy," with mediocre cabaret acts, fashion lectures, occasional demonstrations of ju jitsu and similar pastimes, dissertations on gardening, an odd interview with obscure celebrities and so forth. The outside broadcasting of events, however, is increasing, not only in the range of its material, but in the excellence of its transmission. Not least significant of the considerations is that of physical inelasticity. Radio, by the elasticity of sound permits movement about a house without physical concentration, and withal complete enjoyment. Television demands concentration, and prohibits movement, and is thought by many likely to get no further as a vogue than amateur cinematography or auction bridge.

These are the considerations which are swaying exhibitor reactions currently, but which will not dissuade them from expressing objection to and combating the supply of entertainment films in the impresarios of television.

Far more concentratedly are they concerned with the place of television in the picture theatre. Wisely the conviction is spreading and intensifying that the time is now ripe to beat the televisionaries at their own game, and to combat potential competition by using the medium to their own commercial ends.

Theatre Showings Held Practical

The G. B.-Baird demonstrations have shown that picture house television is a practical proposition. The screen used at the Tatler is as yet limited to the seven foot by eight dimension, but the light quality has so improved, and the definition so sharpened, that the average newsreel and magazine house can use it with safety and assurance. So far, however, the question of program supply has remained the crucial one. A completely adamant attitude on the part of the BBC has maintained a flat refusal to let cinemas or anyone at all for that matter rebroadcast on screen or otherwise, the programs transmitted by them. Newsreel and other houses which would have in the Test Match broadcasts, for instance, a ready made showmanship factor, are debarred from offering the public the service. Even should Baird wish to operate their own television service they are still debarred from doing so by the monopoly the BBC own and exercise over the appropriate wavelengths. The BBC, in fact, has still a complete monopoly over English broadcasting, whether it be in sound or in image. Protracted conversations between Isidor Ostrer and the BBC have so far not met with the success one might have hoped for, and television as a result still rests outside the cinema.

Exhibitors, however, may be even more concerned just now with the dangers of a trade monopoly, and it is not unlikely that the CEA will watch the marketing of apparatus as carefully, and with as jealous an eye, as they did the invasion of the cinema field by talking picture apparatus. At present but two organizations, Baird and Scophony, have picture theatre systems on the market. The one, of course, has an immediate link with the mighty Gaumont British group, has sets not only in the Tatler but in the Marble Arch Pavilion and the Tivoli, and has its own headquarters at the Crystal Palace. Scophony, on the other hand, are directly linked with the Odeon chain, talk of a screen even larger than that offered by Baird and are, they claim, preparing for installations in many, if not all, of the country's Odeons. There remains the problem of what both of these enterprising groups are going to show when their apparatus is placed on the market in quantities.

British film houses have an earning capacity of $55 per seat as compared with America's $100 per seat, Simon Rowson, British film executive, said this week in London.

"Even if allowance is made for the higher average cost per seat, in America," Mr. Rowson said, "annual earnings there would still be 60 per cent higher. If seats were occupied here as frequently as in America the net box office receipts would be increased by £25,000,000 annually," he said.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Fervour

It is characteristic of New Yorkers to feign a contempt for the city they love, and Hollywood is more like New York, emotionally, than any other place. Nobody anywhere spoofs the motion picture so heartily as those who live by, with and for it in its home town, nor loves it more.

Typical of Hollywood has been its frivolous vocal attitude toward the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign. Maybe some of the gags tossed about the lots have got into print. Irresponsible commentators on the Hollywood scene have given currency to the thought that Hollywood is skeptical about the whole thing. Don't believe a word of it.

Proof to the contrary abides in the record of goings-on behind closed doors of the committee room housing the studio representatives handling this end of the operations, notably the production of the short to be known as "The World Is Yours." So eager and earnest was the committee when first convened that cast, director and personnel were announced forthwith—just like that. But so much more eager and earnest did these gentlemen become, as the campaign began to take on definite shape, that many thought second thoughts and, finally, spoke them. After that there was more speaking, some of it loud, and Gabe Yorke, chairman, found himself face to face with just such a problem as Solomon met up with only more so.

Now Chairman Yorke would be the last to lay claim to Solomon-like wisdom. But he did a Solomon-like thing. Just how he did it is not among the things talked about beyond the committee room, much, but the upshot of it is that "The World Is Yours" will appear with a cast drawn from all the studios cooperating in the drive, instead of one. When that many studios fight to get their stars into a picture, to work gratis—that's fervour!

More Fervour

Production stepped up from 37 to 42 during the week, 14 pictures starting and 9 being turned over to the cutters. A sudden hot spell (confidentially) made some of the sets unfit for man or beast, but actors and directors, perhaps scenting the smoke of the M.P.G.Y. campaign, strove undismayed.

Paramount had 8 pictures shooting at week-end, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal 6 each, Warner Brothers 5, with 3 in work at RKO-Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox and Republic. Columbia had 2 in front of the camera, Walter Wanger, Selznick-International, Monogram, Hal Roach and Principal Productions 1 each. There were 61 finished films in the editing stage and 14 in preparation for early call.

Twentieth Century-Fox finished "Submarine Patrol" and "By the Dawn's Early Light." Paramount brought in "The Aransas Traveler," that Robert Burns picture, and "Thanks for the Memory," inspired by the song. Universal finished "Youth Takes a Fling" and "The Guilty Trail." Columbia completed "Thoroughbred" and "In Early Arizona." RKO-Radio polished off "A Man to Remember."

Columbia started "Call of the Trail" and "South of the Rio," Universal went to work on "Prairie Justice" and "The Storm," while

CAROLE LOMBARD "HAPPY" OVER TAX

Carole Lombard emerged from a welter of complaints about taxes this week to say that she was glad to give the government more than four-fifths of her $465,000 annual income, and was content to live on the remainder. She earns $150,000 a picture, and made three last year plus three radio broadcasts at $5,000 each.

"Funny thing about all that money," she said, "was that I got only $20,000 of it for myself, directly, I mean. The government spent most of the rest of it for me on general improvements on the country, and I really think I got my money's worth."

A government tax official in Washington on hearing the story said that Miss Lombard was apparently way off when it comes to figures. He drew the conclusion that either she had generously overpaid or else her press agent had got tangled up in a surtax.

Paramount put "Say It In French" and "The Frontiersman" before the lens. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer started "The Shining Hour," RKO-Radio "Miracle Racket," Hal Roach got going on "Mr. Topper Takes a Trip," Selznick-International on "Made for Each Other" and Walter Wanger on "Trade Winds."

Fourteen shorts were in production.

Wait

More than the average annual influx of exhibitor visitors to Hollywood this summer has had the inevitable effect. Fewer than usual have got into a studio. The rush is still on and the Legion convention is not yet, wherefore shutters are up at studios fearful of setting dangerous precedents in the hospitality department. Full many a company will be on location while the doughboys are here.

So, ladies and gentlemen of show business, if you've been thinking of taking a little respite and dashing out here for a look at the wheels going around, put it off a while. The correct time to visit Hollywood, any year, is between November 1 and April 31. Don't come now.

Personnel

OLYMPÉ BRADNA will sing in "Say It In French," Paramount.

PRISCILLA LANE and JEFFREY LYNN are to be developed as a starring team by Warner Brothers, on account of their work in "Four Daughters."

LUCILE WATSON, of the stage, will be in Selznick's "Made for Each Other" with CAROLE LOMBARD and JAMES STEWART.

CHEYENNE INDIANS who attacked the pioneers in "The Plainsman" will ride again in "Union Pacific," which CECIL B. DEMILLE is getting ready to shoot for Paramount.

GALE SONDERGARD, Academician, joins double Academician LUISE RAINER in "Dramatic School," M-G-M.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN, explaining why he signed ROBERT RISKIN to write for him under a contract that gives him a percentage of the profits on all Goldwyn pictures: "Give me unknown actors and a great screen play and I'll promise you a great picture. Give me great actors and a poor screen play and I'll be helpless."

DOROTHY LAMOUR will swing it in "St. Louis Blues," the picture Paramount had a raft of trouble with before it started.

ROGER CONVERSE, recently conspicuous for ability in M-G-M shorts (films, that is), steps up into features with a role in "The Shining Hour," Joan Crawford vehicle.

MAXWELL ARNO, 6½ years casting director at Warner Brothers, joined Selznick-International Monday of this week and has the casting of "Gone With the Wind" as his first chore.

JEANETTE MACDONALD and RAY BOLGER do a wooden shoe Dutch routine in M-G-M's "Sweethearts."

CLAIRE MORTENSON, away just now making personal appearances, will be back in time to start a series of westerns for Sovereign Productions, which gets going Sept. 15.

GEORGE BANCROFT will play JACKIE COOPER's father in "Gangster's Boy," Monogram, first of two Cooper films for the company.

MADLINE CARROLL, FRED MACMURRAY and SHIRLEY ROSS will head the cast of "Cafe Society," Paramount's treatment of that strange social sector.

JOAN BLONDELL returned to work at Warner's this week, slimmer and trimmer than ever, to co-star with PAT O'BRIEN in "Unfit to Print."

CHARLES CHAPLIN is credited with the discovery of DOROTHY COMINGORE, whose screen debut is a speaking part in Walter Wanger's "Trade Winds," the comedian having noticed her around Carmel-by-the-Sea, where he's still working on that script, and given her a letter of introduction to Hollywood, where his judgment of film femininity is still held in high regard. She'll be known as LINDA WINTERS from here in.

Carroll Sax has been appointed to succeed Joe Gilpin, resigned, as business manager of Warner Brothers studio. Mr. Sax, long with the company as assistant director and elsewhere, will function under the supervision of Tennant Wright, production manager. Robert Ross has been named a unit manager at the studio replacing Mr. Sax.

Edward Sedgwick, director, has joined the Harry Rapi unit at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to aid in developing a series of outdoor action melodramas to star Dennis O'Keefe.

Lionel Atwill has been signed by Twentieth Century-Fox to a four-way contract. It provides that he shall serve as actor, writer, director or associate producer.

Carefree

(RKO Radio)

Musical Comedy

TO THE EDITOR:

Anyone who's been around show business as long as your westernmost correspondent is likely to become a little overexposed to the illusion that is its chief merchandise, so I suspect I'm not the only one between Hollywood and Times Square who has been taking this "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" talk with a slight helping of salt. A good idea, yes, and undeniably timely, for a number of reasons, but I didn't know it was on the level. That is, I didn't know that this year's pictures really were going to be greater than last year's. Did you? Well, anyway, they are, I've seen half a dozen of them, three in the past week, that are so far ahead of anything previously done by the same personnel as to convince even skeptical Hollywood that 1938-39 product is something else again. And now here's this "Carefree," which you can see for yourself downstairs at the Music Hall in a couple of days, a picture that makes all the previous Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers films look like trailers.

If there are others you know about who haven't been taking this "Greatest Year" thing seriously, you'll be doing them a favor by sending them to give it a look-see. This is no mere reunion of two stars who never should have been separated. This is no carbon copy of anything they or anybody ever did before. It does reveal a ripening of their talents, and it does give them to do the things in which they are expert, but it also brings to the screen a new font of humorous entertainment—psychoanalysis, of all things—and out of this flows an incredibly credible sequence of amazingly comic incidents. (If the quest for series material is still on, RKO-Radio could make a pip out of the doctor Mr. Astaire portrays here.)

I have said that the film reveals a ripening of the co-stars' talents. That requires proof, since they were long since declared perfect by showmen who kept them up among the top 10 in the HERALD's Money-Making Stars poll, and the picture provides it. In this thing they do one of their ballroom dances in slow motion, a device employed to show that it happens in a dream, and if they've looked good in normal tempo they look impossibly so when slowed down. In a solo dance executed with golf stick and culminating in a series of rhythmically timed shots—every drive a honey—Mr. Astaire demonstrates that up until now he's been only kidding. In a mesmeric interlude during which her inhibitions are supposed to be in abeyance Miss Rogers lets down her hair, artistically speaking, and goes way back to Mabel Normand for a minutes-long sequence not equalled since that comedienne's demise.

While these and a great many other things are going on, visibly, one Irving Berlin is adding new lustre to his just now particularly celebrated name by way of music that is neither in the "Alexander" vein nor out of the known Berlin ballad drawer. His numerous numbers for this range from the breakneck "Yam" sung by Miss Rogers and danced by both stars and a setful of followers—to delicate sentimentalities written just below chamber-music standards. The radio will be telling you which of the numbers are going to lead the Hit Parade first. If youngsters do the voting it'll be the "Yam" and they'll be trying to dance it.

Next to the stars in screen importance is Ralph Bellamy, playing a part comparable to the one he had in "The Awful Truth," and alongside him is Luella Gear, an unfamiliar but extremely effective player. Clarence Kolb, of "Merrily We Live," plays a judge, merrily, and Franklin Pangborn does more than usually well with less than is usually given him to do. A great many others are in and out of the picture, all very distinctly belonging.

The whole thing, is as you know, a Pandro S. Berman production. As you also know, the job of putting this pair of stars back together again without incurring that "just another" verdict, and without letting the idea get around that the picture subordinated one to the other, was one of those assignments some producers leave town to duck. Mr. Berman not only got away with it—he can date a new renown from here. So can Mark Sandrich, who here touches a new directorial high.

The story material is, as previously noted, something to think about, new stuff from new sources. Credit for it is due, in what proportion probably no man now can tell, to Marian Ainslee and Guy Endore, who had the original idea, to Dudley Nichols and Hagar Wilde, who made a story and adaptation of it, and to Allan Scott and Ernest Pagano, who prepared the screen play. Maybe one thing wrong with most pictures is that they aren't written by enough writers.

Hollywood got its first look at this picture on the evening of August 24th, when proud RKO-Radio previewed it for the press at the Pantages theatre and all the topflight talent in town turned out to see if it could be any good. Plain people who had managed to buy seats early in the morning and sat through several shows to be on hand for it were also present. But you couldn't tell for sure whether it was the profession, the press or the laity that was laughing hilariously, applauding spontaneously or sitting in awed, unbelieving silence as the stuff came across. It was, as a matter of fact, all of them.

Yes, this is the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year." This is the greatest Astaire-Rogers picture. "Greatest" have been popping up in previews regularly for the past ten days and the end is nowhere in sight. It's tough on a guy like me, who has to dig up words to describe them, but it's pretty sweet for exhibitors across the country enrolled in the big drive. This, my dear Editor, would be a year to have a theatre.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced and distributed by RKO-Radio. Producer, Pandro S. Berman. Director, Mark Sandrich. Screen play by Allan Scott and Ernest Pagano. Story and adaptation by Dudley Nichols and Hagar Wilde. ## My Lucky Star

(20th Century-Fox)

Sonja Henie Vehicle

Well down toward the end of this film Miss Sonja Henie eclipses all previous skating exhibitions for the camera in a costumed and tinted ice ballad based on "Alice in Wonderland." Earlier in the picture she has executed some new and involved demonstrations of what ice and steel blade are for, each a stunning exhibition of athletic artistry, and all through it she has worn a storeful of swank winter garb. These are the items of news about the picture most likely to prove profitable when conveyed to the people who buy the tickets.

Next in importance as an entertainment factor are the several sequences in which Joan Davis and Buddy Ebsen sing, dance and clown. These are surefire. It is increasingly profitable, also, to mention the names of Mack Gordon and Harry Revel in connection with pictures for which they bat out the tunes. They did four for this one.

Billy Gilbert steals the picture for one of those restaurant routines of his, not unlike one he used in a previous film but fitted out with new words. Cesar Romero plays an irresponsible son of a fussy owner of a Fifth Avenue department store. George Barbier plays the merchant. Louise Hovick appears briefly as the golddigger the boy married one night and who wants money. Arthur Treacher portrays an indulgent secretary.

The story is by Karl Tunberg and Don Ettlinger, the screen play by Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen. It has to do with a merchandising idea conceived by the department store owner's son as a means of getting a blonde out of town so his wife can't name her in a suit for divorce. The blonde, innocent, is played by Miss Henie, and the idea is to send her to college with a complete line of the store's fashionable winter sports attire and under instructions to parade it before the coeds.

This gets the girl to Plymouth University (pennanted, and pronounced, P U) where she meets a handsome senior and gets herself starred in the college ice carnival. Photogs for Life magazine shoot her and the student body for a "Life Goes to College" feature and the gold-digger identifies her picture on the cover. So they bring the show to the store and it's a hit and the golddigger cut her price from $100,000 to $50,000 which the merchant figures is about right and pays. The salesgirl-student-skater goes back to college and everybody's happy.

Roy Del Ruth directed the picture for Harry Joe Brown, associate producer, with Darryl Zanuck in charge of production. One of a number of things uncommonly done in pictures is their liberal allotment of prominence to a single periodical of general circulation, Life, which is identified frankly and repeatedly in dialogue, favorably, and in close-ups of the cover. Unless Time, Inc., is just as uncommonly unappreciative, plenty of favorable reference to the picture should appear, at an appropriate time, in Life, Time, and Fortune. While their combined circulations is, of course, materially less than that of a Sonja Henie feature, their influence is doubtless a factor to be taken into consideration by showmen who play the picture.

Previewed August 26th at the Village theatre, Westwood, Calif., which is situated near the

The Road to Reno

Satire with Music

"The Road to Reno" returns to active participation in entertainment fields Hope Hampton in a vehicle molded to exploit her thespian and singing talents. The blonde actress-singer participates in a satirical comedy based on the activities of the well known Reno divorce mill. She sings four songs—from grand opera to a cowboy song.

Sharing the lead opposite her is Randolph Scott. Supporting are Helen Broderick, Alan Marshall, Glenda Farrell, David Oliver, Samuel S. Hinds, Spencer Charters, Charles Murphy and Ted Osborne.

S. Sylvan Simon directed the screenplay of Roy Chanslor and Adele Comandini. It was from a story by Charles Kenyon and F. Hugh Herbert based on the novel of the same name by I. A. R. Wylie. Edmund Grainger was associate producer.

The preview audience thought the picture highly entertaining. The laughs, most of them based on dialogue and situation, were scattered throughout the entire 68 minutes of the film.

"Linda Halliday," opera singer, goes to Reno to divorce her rancher husband. He refuses to give her the divorce so that she can marry "Crawford." So she, conniving with "Aunt Minerva," lives on "Steve's" ranch to pester him into agreeing to the divorce. However, complications which arise with the arrival of "Crawford" force her to give up the Reno plans.

Three Loves Has Nancy

(M-G-M)

Metropolitan Comedy

Treason—that's what it is. Or sabotage. Putting all those marquee names under a title long enough to crowd half of them out of the billing. Of course a shorthand showman could cut it down to "3 Love Nancy" and still be accurate. He'd be the sort who'd add: Gaynor—Tone — Montgomery — Kibbee — Dodd — Grapewin — Owen — Dunn. And he'd do a nice bundle of business, too, unless the paying guests who caught the picture at the Hollywood preview came in just to roll in the aisles for exercise.

The story these notables and the others listed below tell the customers is about a New York author and his publisher who live in adjoining apartments and fall in love, competitively, with an unspoiled miss from the not too deep South. It isn't a great story to tell, but the telling is the thing. Mr. Tone plays the publisher, who doesn't get the girl; Mr. Montgomery, the author, who does, and Miss Gaynor the girl who doesn't suspect sleep-walking gentlemen in pyjamas who never sleep-walked before. She's even more naive and charming than that, about gangsters, about man-servants and what not, which is why so much diverting incident and dialogue occur when she moves into the wealthy literateurs' swank apartment and takes over the cooking.

It took six writers to put together the fiction that keeps these folks busy and they packed it with laughs. Bella and Samuel Spewack worked with George Oppenheimer and David Hertz on the screen play, which the four of them based on a story by Lee Loeb and Mort Braus. Director Richard Thorpe used every camera minute to telling advantage and there are many visible signs that Norman Krasna, the producer, let that too infrequently unleashed Krasna sense of humor have its way.

The scene is New York, with a short excursion to an unnamed Southern town, and the time is now or any time. The dialogue is brisk and invariably amusing. The whole is, however, the sort of thing folks above 12, mental age, enjoy more than kiddies do. That doesn't mean it's risqué, subtle, or anything like that. It's just adult.

Broadway Musketeers

(Warner - First National)

Melodrama

"Broadway Musketeers" starts out as a story of motherhood built on the desire of a young matron for the high life, but dissolves itself into a crime melodrama. As such, it offers a wide range of emotional play.

Margaret Lindsay, Ann Sheridan and Marie Wilson top the cast as the three young girls, friends since their days in an orphanage. Supporting them are John Litel, Janet Chapman, Dick Purcell, Richard Bond, Anthony Averill, Horace MacMahon, Dewey Robinson, Dorothy Adams, James Conlon and Jan Holm. It is an organization screenplay by Don Ryan and Kenneth Gamet, directed by John Farrow. Bryan Foy produced the film.

"Isabel Dowling" gives up her husband, "Stanley," and her baby to marry "Peyton," gambler with whom she fancies herself in love. "Fay Reynolds," her close friend, weds "Dowling." When "Peyton" welves on a gambling debt, racketeers kill him, and kidnap "Isabel," who by chance has had her little girl visiting her. "Isabel" gives up her life to save the child.

Convicted

(Columbia)

Melodrama

The advent of "Convicted" continues the steady flow of crime melodramas from the Hollywood studios, coinciding as they do with the Dewey investigation in New York which from the quantity and quality of the coverage is as interesting nationally and internationally as it is locally. Producers, astutely, have flooded the market at this time to reap the harvest of the publicity. With the trial predicted to last some four or five weeks more the crime melodramas appear to be in for a better-than-average season. Also the exploitation angle is there if it doesn't become too stale in ensuing weeks.

This is not the racket busting type of melodrama but the parallel is not entirely lost. Here we have a night club dancer who lives with and supports her big but immatured brother. When big brother is involved in a murder case sister sets out to clear him. Helping her is a police detective. The investigation brings to light the inevitable gang leader and his hirelings. The action is swift, the plot clearly defined and with the romance and comedy as sidelights the picture emerges as entertaining fare.

Cornell Woolrich wrote the story from which Edgar Edwards did the adaptation. Leon Barsha directed. The cast is comparatively unknown in the light of marquee value which places the emphasis additionally on the crime tie-up angle with the Dewey investigation. Charles Quigley is the detective; Rita Hayworth, the dancer; Edgar Edwards, who did the scenario, is the brother, and Marc Lawrence is the gang leader.

The brother, "Chick" is speedily convicted of slaying the former show girl, "Ruby Rose," when her maid and the doorman of the apartment house testify that "Chick" was the only one that possibly could have killed her. Through diligent investigation, "Jerry" discovers that "Militis," gang leader and owner of a night club, frequently was seen with "Ruby." "Jerry" is hired by "Militis" for his night club show and eventually poses as his friend.

Meanwhile the maid has been slain and the doorman has disappeared, which spurs the investigation to save "Chick" from the chair. "Jerry" succeeds in getting "Militis" to leave town and she ransacks his rooms. "Militis" discovers the ruse and returns. "Jerry" is

Barefoot Boy

(Monogram)

Homespun Drama

A homespun story inspired by John Greenleaf Whittier's poem of the same name, a cast in which the children are more important to the goings on than the adults, and a theme which glorifies American boyhood are the main ingredients of this picture. The film is slow in getting under way, builds gradually and when it has reached its objective moves forcefully forward in a rising crescendo of action packed sequences to a stirring and emotional climax.

An E. B. Derr production with story and screenplay by John T. Neville the production has a cast made to order for the story. Jackie Moran may not be the typical American boy, but he'll do until one comes along. The knowing young actress, Marcia Mae Jones, adds another role to her rapidly growing collection of fine performances. In an adult way there is Ralph Morgan, Claire Windsor, Charles Brown and Helen MacKellar. Also worthy of note is "Terry," the little Cairn terrier.

"Billy," "Pige," "Jeff" and "Julia" are country children and playmates. "Billy" is the recognized leader of the group. A former playmate "Kenneth," who has run away from military school, returns home. "Kenneth" has been spoiled by his mother while his father serves a jail term for a crime of which he is innocent. "Kenneth" is a braggard and quickly takes credit for saving "Julia" from drowning, although the rescue was performed by "Billy."

"Pige" eggs "Kenneth" on to enter what is suspected to be a haunted house, but he becomes frightened after a good deal of bragging. "Billy" and "Pige" go in instead. The next day they all enter to inspect the house and discover that the place has been occupied. "Pige" finds a bond, one of the bonds that "Kenneth's" father has been accused of stealing, but "Kenneth" takes it away from her and plans to sell it. "Pige" tells "Kenneth's" father, who has been released from prison.

Later when "Kenneth" has returned to the house to recover the rest of the bonds he is set upon by the real thieves. In the ensuing action "Billy" is shot and the thieves are caught. "Billy" recovers and "Kenneth," mending his ways, decides to be a better boy.

Melodrama

This is a swiftly paced melodrama concerned chiefly with the reformation of a boy, out of New York's tenement district and raised on crime, and subordinatedly concerned with the wiping out of a gang of bank robbers. Additionally there is romance and comedy. The proceedings build swiftly to an exciting climatic encounter between the law as represented by the leading character, a detective, and the gang leader.

The picture has a strong cast with three of the players constituting valuable marquee attractions. Bruce Cabot appears here as the detective and is as convincing on the side of law and order as he has been in his portrayals of criminal characters. Beverly Roberts is cast in the role of a newspaperwoman, better described as a "sob sister." The third mentioned marquee name is still comparatively unknown but so important is his role to the story that a designation as a new child discovery would seem to be called for in the case of Tommy Ryan.

The boy is called upon to run the gamut of emotions in the course of the picture. Everything considered he has turned in a creditable performance. Among his accomplishments in the film is the singing of an Irish ballad followed by a song and dance in the modern swing tempo.

The story gets underway immediately. An armored truck, with a fortune in cash and securities, strikes a lad of 10. The truck stops, the guards step out to be shot down by "Dayton's" gang. The truck is rifled by the gang while the lad, "Tommy," unhurt arises and makes his getaway. "Tommy's" father, a member of the gang, is entrusted with the loot to hide until the furor blows over. "Jim Loomis," a detective, is assigned to track down the robbers. On a tip from one of his "stool pigeons" he discovers the hideout of "Tommy's" father and kills him in a gun battle.

"Tommy" is sent to reform school. Believing that "Tommy" can lead him to the gang "Jim" adopts the lad. "Tommy" refuses to be a "stool pigeon." When "Tommy" learns he is to be returned to the reform school he runs away. He reaches "Dayton" and informs the gang leader where the money is hidden. "Jim" finds out the whereabouts of the gang and arriving there kills "Dayton" in a gun battle. "Jim" and "Susan" are married and they legally adopt "Tommy."

I've Got a Horse

(British Lion)

Racing Comedy

Though this highly spirited and ingenious comedy romp would probably stand little chance of an award from the Venice Festival, it is in many ways an object lesson in the art of playing straight to the English box office. Sandy Powell, beaming, bespectacled Yorkshire comedian, and his director, Herbert Smith, both know their audience, and the wholesome, far fetched fun which constitutes the bulk of "I've Got a Horse" is as soundly infused with popular appeal as many an expensive and high-sounding opus, and infinitely more so than most. Powell, a popular favorite on stage, radio and screen, uses the simplest of techniques and the most unsophisticated of fun and the direct attack of gags at the expense of mother-in-law, playful episodes in the garden, and horseplay at a Hunt Ball score a bullseye every time.

The narrative structure of the film need not greatly concern the patron, for the story of Sandy as a bookmaker who acquires a horse, to have his ownership questioned in court of law, is of less consequence than the comedy material with which it is dressed. Episodes in which the moon faced Yorkshire lad takes a radio talk literally and sets to work to devastate his garden, in which he again takes literally the hyperbolic arguments of a husband and wife and removes their furniture, and in which he gets tied up with a loquacious, riddle-asking child are richly funny, even if they are completely free of sophistication or self-consciousness.

Smith's direction—he has a string of money making musicals to his credit—shows increasing maturity and touches of imagination, and both the recording and George Stretton's and Harry Rose's camerawork give the film a technical sheen which helps. Mention of other names in the cast would be of no assistance to U. S. readers, but they are all capable. The Yorkshire element need not cause concern for, save in one dialect song, it is negligible. The essentials are that the picture is a significant specimen of moneymaking British film production and has comedy which unsophisticated audiences should relish no matter what language they talk.

Previewed to a trade audience at the Piccadilly Theatre, London, the film was received with warmth, its screening punctuated with laughter and the general conclusion being that British Lion had done right in putting Powell under contract and casting the understanding Herbert Smith to direct him.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

The Lady Vanishes

(Gainsborough-GB)

(Distributed by MGM)

Mystery Drama

Since there are no stars—none of Transatlantic eminence at least—in this latest Alfred Hitchcock opus, it must make its appeal on other grounds than the personal. Let it be recorded at once that there are emphatically other commercial merits in the film, for apart from the directorial interest—a factor for the connoisseur rather than the consumer—this adaptation of Ethel Lina White's "The Wheel Spins" is a brilliantly handled and briskly played slice of mystery drama consistently gripping, not only well textured with suspense and punctuated with dramatic action, but subtly and refreshingly flavoured with a most delectable quality, as convincing as it is pointed. Hitchcock has the uncanny knack of making not only his characters, but his material and his settings live, and not for one moment does one doubt that one is watching adventure on the TransEuropean train whereon most of the action unrolls. Into the bargain "The Lady Vanishes" reveals that the English can laugh at themselves when the occasion demands and the traveling Britishers of the film, two of them intent on getting back for the Test Match, no matter what the international complications, another convinced—until he is actually shot—that "they" dare not affront an Englishman, are among the film's most effervescent and satisfying constituents.

The lady who vanishes is a tweed suited old governess who mysteriously disappears from a cross Continental train to the complete consternation of a young English girl and her folk song gathering beau. Mysterious figures, mysterious but completely plausible, a frigidly efficient surgeon, a nun, and an accident case, play odd but sinister roles in the mystery which develops ultimately into an international spy plot, and comes to a forceful and arresting action climax with a gun siege of the train in a lonely mid-European forest. Mystery and romance, character comedy and fierce action are woven into a most satisfactory dramatic pattern, a pattern with the fascination of a first rank spy yarn and the plausibility of life.

In dialogue and quiet humour the film is rich, and its technical qualities of camerawork and sound leave little room for criticism. Despite its absence of names "The Lady Vanishes" is a film which should draw on its own entertainment merits, which are considerable, but exhibitors must decide for themselves how they can sell it to a sceptical public.

The Foggy Quay
("Le Quai des Brumes")
(Ciné-Alliance - Films Victoria)
Melodrama

This tragic melodrama, very artistically produced, is powerful but depressing entertainment. So far, one of the best French films of the year, it excels mainly by its extraordinary atmosphere and its flawless cast.

Based on a novel by the French author Pierre MacOrlan, it depicts in a morbid and foggy atmosphere having a symbolic meaning, with the French harbor Le Havre as location, dramatic events surrounding fallen human beings pursued by fate who take the happiness of a minute.

The central character is "Jean," a deserter soldier, who, at the eve of embarking for South-America, meets a 17-year-old lonely girl "Nelly," who has just left her jealous and repulsive guardian "Zabel." They fall desperately in love. When the girl discovers that "Zabel" is going to denounce "Jean," she rushes to him and realizes that he is the murderer of a former friend of her's. "Zabel" tries to force her, but she is saved by "Jean," who kills him. When escaping to his boat, he is shot to death for revenge by a coward crook he had punished for annoying "Nelly."

All these characters, and some others such as a queer tavern-keeper who receives strangers in his lonely wretched cabin of the foggy waterfront, a disillusioned painter who commits suicide, a tramp whose only dream is to sleep in a real bed, have been remarkably impersonated. This first-class cast is headed by the newly-formed French love-team, Jean Gabin, of "They Were Five" and more recently "Pepe Le Moko," "The Great Illusion" and "Gueule d'Amour," and Michèle Morgan, an 18-year-old beautiful and stirring French actress, who has reached stardom after only two films.

One will be sorry that such art and talents have been used for such a trite and sordid story, which includes not a decent or healthy character. The picture does not conform, at least partially, with the American Production Code. However, "The Foggy Quay," in which there is a moving blend of violence, sweetness and poetry, will undoubtedly attract class audiences because of its beautiful cinematographic and artistic merits.

Viewed on the first day of its showing at the first run Marivaux Theatre, Paris, where a capacity audience was deeply gripped by the strong atmosphere and applauded loudly at the end.—PIERRE AUTRE.

The March of Time—
No. 1, Vol. 5
(RKO Radio)
News Dramatization

The increasingly popular and ever dramatic March of Time in this the first issue of the fifth series presents one of the most serious and distressing problems now current in diplomatic circles and in the public mind—the Czechoslovakian episode. In the second of two subjects in the issue the case of Father Devine is accorded treatment.

The presentation of Czechoslovakia is of a country, born of the World War, that through hard work, loyalty of the people and through its natural resources has risen to preeminence among the smaller nations of Continental Europe. It has a small but powerful army, well equipped and ready for emergency. Threatening the future existence of the small country is Germany on the outside and the Sudeten Germans on the inside. Seeking to prevent Germany's second conquest—Austria was the first—are England, France and allied countries. It is a clear and extremely interesting presentation.

The Father Divine treatment at this time follows the Harlem Messiah's occupancy of Crum Elbow, old New York estate directly across the Hudson River from Hyde Park, home of President Roosevelt and his family's home for generations. Father Divine, who it is said has an aversion to being photographed or quoted, here poses willingly with his "Angels" and records for posterity some of his much used and publicized phrases like "peace, it's wonderful." A broadcast by Walter Winchell in which he discusses the selling of Crum Elbow to Father Divine is included in the dramatization.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Paramount Pictorial, No. 2
(Paramount)
Good

The highlight of this Pictorial number is the opening sequence which depicts the great advance made in female education from not so long ago days. Exemplified pictorially is the curriculum of Wellesley College, one of the country's leading seminaries of feminine learning with such modern courses as shop and laboratory work as well as art and astronomical study. To keep pace with the schoolroom progress, the girls have forsaken mid-Victorian notions of what constitutes ladylike exercise for the more masculine sports of golf and crew work. From the studiously sheltered shades of a collegiate campus, the spectator is rapidly transported to the mysterious jungle tracts of the Amazon districts. Seen in this portion of the review are scenes illustrating the preparation, manufacture and transportation of rubber. The finale is set in a visit to one of the famous night clubs of Paris for a peek into after dark activity. The three parts of the subject's material are varied enough to find response from any audience similarly divided in interests and reactions.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Under a Gypsy Moon
(RKO Radio)
Gypsy Musical

As to be expected from such a title, the purpose of this miniature musical is to dish up some gypsy entertainment. From such a statement of purpose, the rest of the material can be realized. There is a couple of exotic dancers, a little lady who plays soulfully on a sobbing violin and a pair of Romany love birds looking at each other with wide open spaces expression and singing throbbing romantic lyrics. The collection of talent is seasoned to make a not very palatable dish of goulash entertainment.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Stage Fright
(RKO Radio)
Errol the Thespian

Another Leon Errol comedy about domestic troubles played against a little theatre movement background affords some customary comedy to be expected from this comedian. Objecting to his wife's ambitions as an amateur actress, husband Errol is made the subject of a practical joke by the little woman and her company of fellow thespians. Returning from a sales convention in a not very saleable frame of mind, Errol is carted over to the group's playhouse on the boards of which is enacted a faked gangster scene to bring the recalcitrant spouse to reason. But, when the butt of the joke comes out of his hiding place at the crucial moment in a real performance of the play, things remain pretty much as they were in the Errol household. The usual display of Errol navigating while under the weather, a scene that invariably appears in all his comedies, is still good for a hearty laugh.—Running time, 18 minutes.

All's Fair at the Fair
(Paramount)
Cartoon Preview

What may be regarded as a cartoonist's rather dizzy dream of what a futuristic World's Fair may be like provides Max Fleischer and his penmen with some imaginative, interesting and comic material to sketch this newest drawing number from the Color Classics category as one of the best and brightest of the group. Taking the case visit of an elderly and rural couple to the scenes of what can best be described as the Fair of the Future, the drawing board offers the screen amusing glimpses of the pair as they go about seeing the sights. And a good time is had by all, including the audience witnessing the outlandish cartoon depiction.—Running time, seven minutes.

NATHANSON TELLS MEETING OF MANAGERS HE SEES BIG YEAR AHEAD

Total of Personal Participation Plan Bonus Checks to Managers at Circuit's 20th Anniversary Reaches New High

by A-MIKE VOGEL

A year ago—in 1937, at the last business session of the Famous Players-Canadian theatres convention in Toronto, N. L. Nathanson frankly declaring his uncertainty for the coming year, urged careful sailing to the wind, expenditure of greatest effort by attending managers to maintain profitable boxoffice levels.

Now—one year later, upon the same occasion, the Famous Players president and all-powerful Canadian citizen, has found new reason for optimism, and bespoke his confidence in the future to the managers and executives assembled in Toronto on August 24 to 26, for the annual three-day meeting of the eastern division theatremen of the circuit, in celebration of the company's 20th Anniversary Jubilee.

"I cannot stand for any feeling of defeatism about our business; I have never been so hopeful about this industry. Let no one undersell the value of motion picture entertainment. There is nothing wrong with this business that good pictures cannot cure."

Mr. Nathanson also reviewed progress made by the circuit in the past 20 years and credited the advances to the loyal and efficient cooperation of the personnel to whom he voiced his "grateful thanks. I look forward with confidence to the years ahead," he said, "strong in the knowledge that I may rely on your continued help and, I venture to hope, affection for the company it is our privilege to serve." Mr. Nathanson warmly endorsed the industry drive and asked the managers to get behind it in each situation.

As is his yearly custom, Mr. Nathanson arrived from England in time to supervise with J. J. Fitzgibbons, director of theatre operations, the distribution of bonus checks earned in the past year by the managers in the circuit's famed personal participation plan which allows the theatremen a percentage of extra grosses obtained over a mutually agreed upon 12-month quota. Total extra earnings in the eastern division for the past year reached a new high, it was announced.

The circuit president announced the plan would be continued during the news season because it had been a success from the standpoint of both the company and manager.

$1,000,000 in Taxes

Keynote of the opening day's sessions which followed roll call and greetings by home office executives was the address by Mr. Fitzgibbons, who stressed the institutional value of the theatre in the community and called upon the managers to combat conditions adverse to the industry. He pointed to the amount of taxes paid by the company to Dominion and Provincial Governments, quoting a figure of almost one million dollars in the past year.

Mr. Fitzgibbons urged the managers to carefully read MOTION PICTURE HERALD not only for

A will drawn on June 11, 1937, by Pearl White was filed in surrogate court in New York this week but was not offered for probate because of another will which is said to be en route to this country from Paris, where Miss White died on August 14th.

The paper on file directs that her estate be divided into 10 equal parts and bequeaths three such parts to the Actors Fund of America or any other worthy and desirable charity that takes care of actors as in the judgment of executor may deem desirable." Charles Schwartz of the law firm of Schwartz and Froblich, was named executor. No estimate of the value of the estate was given.

advance information reviews, but particularly for suggestions on maintenance, exploitation, sound and projection.

"The editors of these departments are deserving of the highest praise for the expert information they provide."

The general manager advised his listeners to develop new ideas for selling tickets and pointed to the importance of Managers' Round Table as a valuable medium of information.

Mr. Fitzgibbons urged the managers to use every effort to dispel rumors that Hollywood producers had cut their budgets, because the season's films are "really big pictures." He suggested that managers contact even the smallest newspapers for more favorable editorial reference and to seek support for the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year drive.

During the three days of sessions, various phases of theatre operation were discussed. In addition to Mr. Fitzgibbons, executives taking part included: Clarence Robson, director of theatres in Eastern Canada, and Convention chairman; T. J. Bragg, secretary; Morris Stein, Ontario supervisor; Ben Geldsaler, chief booker; James Nairn, director of advertising; Ben Cronk, manager in the art display department; R. W. Bolstad, comptroller; J. A. Troyer; W. E. Kerr; L. G. Geering; M. Perry; N. G. Barrow; R. Darby; A. MacCunn; F. J. Justin; Ed Harris; B. Whitham and Charles Dentelbeck.

Group Discussions Held

Managers were divided into groups for discussions, Group "A" under Mr. Stein, "B" under Mr. Roddick and "C" under Mr. Robson. Subjects taken up were booking, advertising and exploitation, policy, prices, etc. Night sessions were also held.

References to MOTION PICTURE HERALD as an aid in theatre operation was also made by Mr. Robson and Mr. Stein during their group meetings.

As guest speaker at the final meeting, the writer spoke of the responsibilities placed upon the manager in the industry drive and indicated the growing recognition of the theatre man's importance as a result. He also traced the renewed interest in circus-type exploitation and urged that there be more "beating on the drum" in the coming year.

Featured at the concluding assemblage was the tribute paid by Mr. Robson to the 20 members present who had been with the company for 20 years. This was followed by a presentation to Mr. Robson by the group and others of a serving cabinet in appreciation of his efforts on their behalf.

Luncheon following the final session was enlivened by the distribution of facsimiles of Time Magazine with photo of Mr. Nathanson on the front cover. Inside pages covered stories and pictures of circuit interest. Photo of A-Mike Vogel and interview were included. Jim Nairn was credited with the idea and execution, the advertising director's department also being responsible for the convention's "Show of Showmanship." This elaborate exhibit, off the convention hall, of coming pictures advertising, new equipment, circuit top exploitations, and 1937 Quigley Awards campaigns considered in the final judging for last year's Grand Awards, was given close attention between sessions by the conventioners. In addition, there were special displays set up by various producers, demonstrations of layout and poster composition and other devices, technical and otherwise, arranged for the benefit of the visiting theatremen. The "Show" was reported as one of the meeting's highlights, the executives acknowledging their thanks to Mr. Martin Quigley for the loan of the Awards campaigns, and to the distributors for their cooperation. The "Show" will be displayed at the other circuit's western meetings in September.

Also distributed at the luncheon were samples of the quiz books for theatre distribution in the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year Drive and other accessories available for advertising the campaign.

Picnic Ends Sessions

The convention concluded with the annual picnic and games, held this year at the Rouge Hills and Country Club. An afternoon's sport program listing novelty contests for both men and women was supervised by a committee headed by C. L. Querrie, cooperating with Dan Krendel, Stan Andrews, M. J. Doyle and J. A. Troyer. Featured was a candid camera contest open to all at the outing. Top prize offered in the golf tournament was a perpetual trophy for managers' low gross score, donated by Mr. Dentelbeck, circuit director of projection.

Among the invited guests were J. R. Grainger and H. J. Yates, Republic; Jack Skirboll, Educational; A. Gottlieb, Duart; H. M. Masters, United Artists; Morris Milligan, Paramount; Nicholas Kanetakis, United Amusements; H. L. Nathanson, Regal Films; Jack Cohn and Louis Rosenfield, Columbia; George Rotsky, Consolidated Theatres; O. R. Hanson, Hanson Theatres; H. T. Long, Associated Theatres; J. F. Myers, Radio; Col. J. A. Cooper, Motion Picture Distributors of Canada; J. Earl Lawson, member of Parliament representing Canada; Paul Nathanson, son of the founder.

Other social activities included "open house" for the conventioners at the home of Morris Stein, where the visitors presented flowers to Mrs. Stein and a desk set to the popular Ontario supervisor.

Famous Players-Canadian conventions for managers in other divisions will be held in Winnipeg, Sept. 6 and 7, Edmonton, Sept. 9, Calgary, Sept. 10, and Vancouver, Sept. 12 and 13.

(Further reports on the Toronto convention and lists of managers attending will be found in Managers' Round Table section.)

"Love Nut," one of "Father Divine's Children" who has just been denied U. S. citizenship by Judge Abruzzo in Federal Court in New York because of her refusal to be known by any other name, is one of the "Angels" in March of Time's new release, entitled "Father Divine's Deal."

"Love Nut," whose real name is Janette Bourne, met all naturalization requirements, but insisted in Court that her final papers be signed with her "Heavenly" appellation. When she insisted that in "Heaven" her name was "Love Nut," Judge Abruzzo denied her citizenship.

The March of Time episode in which "Love Nut" appears, as released to exhibitors this week, is the story of the strange phenomenon of "Father Divine," the glories of his "Kingdom of Heaven," and his transformation from Harlem "Messiah" into Hudson River Squire and neighbor of President Roosevelt at Krum Elbow, near Poughkeepsie, where he rides around in a $25,000 Deussenberg and lives in a 50-room house.

Mr. Louis de Rochemont, producer, and Albert Sindlinger, advertising manager of "March of Time," wrote to "Father Divine" inviting him to attend a private preview of the reel's "Father Divine's Deal" with his "Angels" and to reply with a list of the guests. Accordingly, "Father" asked that the showing be held Wednesday evening, at the producer's headquarters on Lexington Avenue, informing Mr. de Rochemont and Mr. Sindlinger that they would be hosts to "Peace Branch" and "Lovely Peace," "Miss Charity" and "Miss Satisfied," "Victory Dove" and "Victory Lude," "Love Quietness," "Quiet Love," "Great Love," "Joy of Love" and "Bunch of Love," and "Saint Mary Blue," "Heavenly Father," "Blessed Real," "Mary Bird Tree," "Sunshine Bright" and "Virtue Blue." Peace. It's Wonderful!

Rip and Willemetz, in Paris, selected Joselyne Gael, a newcomer, just graduated from an acting school, for the lead in their new production—entitled "God Save Paris."

Hollywood motion picture press agents occasionally submit copy which for sheer imagination of subject and expression rate prizes of equal dubious value. But for all that has been said in friendly criticism, however, profuse apologies are now in order, for none of them have ever made such a mountain out of a molehill as that set down in a choice press statement sent over by Aubrey Flanagan, our colleague in London, who, in turn, received it from the British Pinewood Studios, as follows:

"Thunder shook the Pinewood heavens the other day. Lightning flashed and there was a deluge.

"The deluge, a sequel to the freak storm-floods that recently swamped London and other parts of the country, caused havoc on an estate near the studios, where Elisabeth Bergner was doing exterior scenes for her new film, 'Stolen Life'.

"Shooting was held up for three hours—a delay that cost the producers many hundreds of pounds. The actors, including Miss Bergner, Richard Ainley and Kenneth Buckley, were drenched.

"The suddenness with which the storm burst took the unit completely by surprise. One minute there was brilliant sunshine. The next minute inky black clouds had obscured the sun.

"Thinking the hold-up would only be a slight one, the company sat down and waited for the sun to shine again.

"Suddenly there was a flash of lightning; thunder rolled across the heavens. Then came a tropical downpour.

"Within a few seconds assistants had rushed £6,000's worth of recording, camera and other technical equipment under cover. The players and the director, Paul Czinner, huddled under canvas shelters which had been hurriedly erected for them. But already they had all been soaked to the skin.

"Presently, with the aid of umbrellas and motor cars, Miss Bergner and the other actors were conveyed to their dressing rooms in the studios, where they immediately changed their clothes.

"Three hours later, when their clothes had been dried and the storm had passed, filming was resumed.

"'Stolen Life' is being produced by Orion Productions and is Elisabeth Bergner's fifth British film."

Jack Banner, in Motion Picture Daily, relieves those of us who have been wondering and worrying over the why NBC occasionally rings four bells, instead of the usual three, on the chime signals it uses over the air. It is the signal that something of serious consequence has happened somewhere and that all NBC road crews, no matter where, must immediately call the network headquarters for instruction. The signal is employed in instances such as the blowing up of the Hindenburg, the burning of the Morro Castle, the destruction of the Macon and the like.

(Nick) Daniels, owner of the Nu-Era theatre, Oswego, Kansas, finished third in a four-way Democratic county commissioner election, he appeared downtown with two revolvers strapped to his sides. "Anyone who doesn't have any more friends than the couple who voted for me needs two guns," he explained.

Radio performers, like many in Hollywood, will have their little fun. The other night Buddy Sheppard, violinist-conductor on Columbia Broadcasting's Rhythm Rendezvous" program was dreamily executing a beautiful Debussy number on his violin, when one of his colleagues in the orchestra leaned forward and with a scissors cut Mr. Sheppard's suspenders. He finished the number with pants crumbled about his ankles.

"Having been an avid reader of 'What the Picture Did For Me' for 10, these many years," J. A. Tanney, president of S. O. S. Cinema Supply, comes to the "conclusion that this most interesting feature should be renamed, 'What the Picture Did to Me.'"

"When anything happens to put me in the 'dumps,'" he explains, "I just turn to this exhibitors' Wailing Wall, and realize how much better off I am."

The story of Irvin S. Cobb is told this week in a book, "Irvin S. Cobb, His Life and Letters," by Fred G. Neuman, who is the city editor of the paper in Paducah, Ky., on which Cobb proved that he was a newspaper man.

Irvin Cobb was a good boy who never ran away from school, Mr. Neuman assures us. In school he was an excellent scholar in everything but arithmetic in that he was a monumental failure. Publishers and motion picture producers in Hollywood who have had to do business with Mr. Cobb for his feature stories for their newspapers and scenarios for their screen, will dispute Mr. Neuman about Cobb's ignorance of arithmetic.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Atlantic

HELL'S ANGELS: Jean Harlow, Ben Lyon—A very fine picture and shows how pictures have improved. Today the brutal scenes as well as the hot sex scenes would be removed. Pleased and did business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

British

STREET SINGER: Arthur Tracy—Don't pass this up. A real musical community sing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Columbia

CITY STREETS: Edith Fellows, Leo Carrillo—I played this one as a single hill on Bargain Nite. Although the feature is rather short, I built a grand program up with selected shorts and everyone who saw it went away raving about the program in general. This picture has really all a picture should have to please. Running time, 65 minutes. Played August 3-4.—Robert Crickmore, Rainhow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

GLADIATOR, THE: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—A good Joe E. Brown picture, especially suited for the children. I ran this in conjunction with a shouting and blueberry pie eating contest and it sure did bring in the kiddies. This is strictly a laugh show with no chance to get a breath in sideways. One of Joe E. Brown's best and one that everybody enjoyed. Running time, 75 minutes. Played August 16.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant—Entertaining. Will stand alone in small spots. No extended runs. Running time, 93 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, John Howard, Jean Parker—Very Good. Best of prison pictures recently released. Play it. Will do business. Walter Connolly especially good as warden. Picture well produced and photography good. Don't be afraid of this one.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

ROLLING CARAVANS: Jack Luden, Eleanor Stewart—Skip it. Not worth playing. Acting very bad. Story has been done to death. Running time, 55 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS A WOMAN: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell, Mary Astor, Frances Drake—This is much better than average from Columbia and will stand alone, which is more than I can say for most of their pictures this season. Played July 30-31.—H. M. Gerher, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Basil Rathbone, Claude Rains, Ian Hunter—Great in every way. The cast is all to the good in all scenes. It is a magnificent picture marred by poor recording and a no good print that had been through the mill plenty. This print had been fish hooked through bad projectors. Miss de Havilland is a swell little actress given the right parts. She was lovely in the old costumes.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BELOVED BRAT: Bonita Granville, Dolores Costello—Entertaining program, second half in big spots. Gets by nicely in small town. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CRIME SCHOOL: "Dead End Kids," Humphrey Bogart, Gloria Dickson—Title is misleading but don't be afraid of it. Step on it and the results will surprise you. Bogart proves that he can handle other roles other than the tough mobsters. The "Dead End Kids" were at their best. Running time, 85 minutes.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Rockefeller Center, New York

Played August 14-16.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Gaumont British

SILENT BARRIERS: Richard Arlen, Lilli Palmer—Best English produced picture ever made for small towns but in spite of excellent trailer the draw was poor. I blame the season for that. Those that commented praised it highly.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Grand National

ROLLIN' PLAINS: Tex Ritter, Harriet Spencer—What with some of the shots from some of their other pictures and the poor photography, this picture didn't do had by our Nell. The story was different than some we have had and went over good. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Dennis O'Keefe, Bruce Cahot—Ideal show for our territory out here in Dakota. An excellent epic western. Paramount could learn from this one. Produced in typical Metro manner. Finished production. Will do business and not disappoint. Play it by all means. Played July 3-5.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

BLOCKHEADS: Laurel and Hardy, Patricia Ellis, Billy Gilbert—About the same as the usual Laurel and Hardy picture. They have fallen off considerably and most people consider them too silly. Would be swell second feature on a double feature program. If you play it alone, book in some cartoons and plug it as a special kiddie show and you may do good business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played August 20.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

CHASER, THE: Dennis O'Keefe, Ann Morriss, Lewis Stone, Nat Pendleton, Ruth Gillette—A mighty good feature that did not do too well at the box office because the stars are practically unknown. It takes stars to get them in. This pleased 100% those who came. Fast moving with plenty of comedy is what they want. Glad to see Nat Pendleton back for he is plenty good. Lewis Stone is always good but the one who really went to town was Ruth Gillette as Mrs. Olson. She is a scream. Hope to see her again soon. Running time, 75 minutes. Played August 19-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Lionel Stander—A very good picture that shows Robert Taylor in his first masculine role. Good story and swell supporting cast. Very well done. I had to hold this picture over for a third day, the first time that this has ever been done in this theatre since acquired by the Graphic Circuit. Play this one; plug it and it will pay you real dividends. Running time, 92 minutes. Played August 17-19.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Walter Pidgeon—One of the best from this pair and comments all very good. Should have dated it during a better season and business would have been above average I am sure. This is good in any situation and a credit to your theatre to run such an excellent picture.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

LORD JEFF: Mickey Rooney, Freddie Bartholomew, Gale Sondergaard, Charles Coburn—Fair picture and fair business.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy, Alan Curtis, Ralph Morgan—A top picture. Good story well produced. Metro "went to town" on this one. Tracy and Crawford both swell in this picture. Audience reaction good. Photography and sound good. Running time, 90 minutes.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone, Rosalind Russell, Walter Pidgeon—A program picture that got in the wrong classification. This is not a top picture here. Didn't make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA (re-issue): Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—People here go wild about this pair but something was wrong. Not as good a business as on the others. The print was well, it can't be described. Running time, 104 minutes. Played August 17-18.—Oaty Elmore, Best Theatre, Charleston, W. Va. General patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal—Not a typical Beery picture. Too much talking; not enough action. Business poor for Beery who is usually a good draw.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SWISS MISS: Laurel and Hardy, Walter Wolf King, Della Lind—As usual before the showing of this feature, we heard the regular squawking about this pair of comedians. But, when the box office showed an increase over average, why should we worry. They are silly but this had something besides just their stuff and think patrons were generally satisfied. Played August 17-18.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TEST PILOT: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—A natural. This makes real entertainment out of this picture. Attention, Mr. Pearce Parkhurst. Thanks for your copies of your paper. You really got something. Would recommend every small town exhibitor to get one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOY WIFE, THE: Luise Rainer, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young, Barbara O'Neil, H. B. Warner—Class picture not suitable for small town. Plenty dialogue and a sad ending. Business poor.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN: Virginia Bruce, Herbert Marshall, Mary Astor, Janet Beecher—Fair picture. Too much dialogue and no action. Business poor.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Boh Hope, Shirley Ross, Ben Blue—One of the poorest shows that we have received from Paramount. Not one customer was satisfied. If it wasn't for the Popeye comedy we had, the feature would have been a complete flop. Running time, 88 minutes. Played August 5-6.—C. M. Anderson, Tolley Theatre, Tolley, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Boh Hope, Ben Blue, Shirley Ross—Business good. Picture bad. If Bob Hope is good, then, I'm wrong. Can't see anything out of the ordinary about him. Everyone disappointed in this picture. Martha Raye fair. I haven't liked her since I saw "Artists and Models." Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Claudette Colbert, Gary Cooper, David Niven, Edward Everett Horton—This picture should go over anywhere if it were not for the title. In a Catholic community a man with eight wives suggests divorce and you know how they feel about that so figure it out for yourself. Played August 23-24.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BOOLOO: Colin Tapley, Suratna Asmaka—Good enough picture for Friday-Saturday. Business normal. Don't be afraid of it; I was.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CASSIDY OF BAR 20: William Boyd, Frank Darien—Terrible. Even our small town western fans have given up. Such impossible situations and continuity. Played August 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue, Rufe Davis—More fine comments on this than on any picture Paramount has produced this season. Made the mistake of running only two nights. Third night would have been very good I am sure. Sunday opening was below average at the ticket window but Monday was unusually strong.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue, Rufe Davis—Paramount has succeeded in making a good musical. Little Harriet is due to go places. Fred is good as usual. Fair and only fair at box office. Running time, 94 minutes. Played July 13-14.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE SWING: George Burns, Gracie Allen, Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Edward Everett Horton, Betty Grable, Jackie Coogan—Just a lot of vaudeville, some very good, some terrible. Not much to this one. Played August 14-15.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS TO KNOW: Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff, Gail Patrick—Good program picture. Akim Tamiroff very good as were the others.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

HER JUNGLE LOVE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Lynne Overman, Dorothy Howe—This is swell show; the color is beautiful and what is more important the cash customers came to see it. Played August 6-7.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

HILLS OF OLD WYOMING: William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden—Believe these Hopalong Cassidy westerns are better than the average. Business average. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 1-2.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

I MET HIM IN PARIS: Claudette Colbert, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas—I played this in place of one of the newer ones. Very fine picture with three very popular stars.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PRIDE OF THE WEST: William Boyd, Charlotte Field—Hopalong. Pleased all. Average Friday-Saturday business.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PROFESSOR BEWARE: Harold Lloyd, Phyllis Welch, Raymond Walburn, Lionel Stander—Good picture; good business.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SING, YOU SINNERS: Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray, Donald O'Connor, Ellen Drew, Elizabeth Patterson—While this picture is no box office natural, it is a very good musical with a little different plot. All in all, I consider it very cleverly produced and it proves to be quite an interesting picture. Plug it heavy and you should do a fair amount of business on it. We showed the picture pre-release. The New York Times gives this picture a very favorable write-up. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 21-22.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

YOU AND ME: George Raft, Sylvia Sydney—Entertaining. Will get by in small spots. Second half of bill for big spots. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Republic

ARMY GIRL: Preston Foster, Madge Evans, Neil Hamilton, Ruth Donnelly—Good enough picture but failed to draw.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

R. H. OUELLETTE, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla.

Read the reports of these theatre-men in these columns.

CALL OF THE YUKON: Richard Arlen, Beverly Roberts, Lyle Talbot—Good snow picture for hot weather showing. Business fair.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GANGS OF NEW YORK: Charles Bickford, Ann Dvorak, Alan Baxter—Good enough picture but failed to draw.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Carol Hughes, Smiley Burnette—An excellent musical western.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

KING OF THE NEWSBOYS: Lew Ayres, Alison Skipworth, Helen Mack—Story disconnected. However got by nicely. Story and actors O.K.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

KING OF THE NEWSBOYS: Lew Ayres, Alison Skipworth, Helen Mack—Well, fair picture. The rest I don't know. People had a funny look on their faces coming out. Running time, 68 minutes. Played August 16.—Oaty Elmore, Best Theatre, Charleston, W. Va. General patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Helen Valkis—The first Autry that I have played that really packed them in and it really pleased all who saw it 100%. Running time, 60 minutes. Played August 10-11.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

ROARIN' LEAD: Three Mesquiteers (Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune)—Nice western. Am anxious to see John Wayne as the new member of this cast. Believe they will have added drawing power.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

UNDER WESTERN STARS: Roy Rogers, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—A fine western picture but Roy Rogers is unknown still and failed to draw.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—The Wheeler and Woolsey pictures are all alike. If you see one you see them all. Just 70 minutes of foolish nonsense. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 29-30.—C. M. Anderson, Tolley Theatre, Tolley, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

KING KONG (REISSUE): Fay Wray, Bruce Cabot, Robert Armstrong—Old Kong really did his stuff, the boxoffice proves it. Didn't mind at all, to hunt my SRO sign. Was plenty dusted, but I was glad I happened to have one in case such things happen. Running time, 99 minutes. Played August 6.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Kenny Baker, Ann Miller, Milton Berle—A knock-out of a musical comedy. Running time, 90 minutes. Played August 12-13.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—This picture is all they claim for it except that it cannot make any money for the small town exhibitor at the rental they demand. I would have been better off if I had not shown it as most of the kids stayed away for two weeks ahead of this show in order to have enough money saved to pay the increase in price. Most adults said they would not care to see another picture of this type. Running time, 118 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—Did a satisfactory gross but had so many complaints on the 15 and 35c admission, which was a raise of 5 and 10c, that it was agony selling tickets. Did not get half of the kid business we would have had at a dime. Is, of course, a wonderful production, the kind one can enjoy the second and third time.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—The most over-advertised picture I have ever played and it flunked out as we expected. The picture was O.K., but the cut-throat terms ruined us and the raise in prices kept the people away. About 30% of our patrons liked it and the rest said the first twenty minutes was all they wanted and walked out. First run on Saturday and the gross was less than a poor western. Sunday we done just average business and the rest of the run was nothing, not even enough to pay expenses. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 9-12.—M. W. Bretzke, Lyric Theatre, Kenmare, N. D. General patronage.

VICTORIA THE GREAT: Anna Neagle, Anton Wallbrook—A very good class picture but the sound impossible. Music recorded much more loudly than voice so that the music would knock you down or you could not hear the voices. Better pass this.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY: Ginger Rogers, James Stewart, James Ellison, Charles Coburn, Beulah Bondi—Here is one of the ten best pictures of all times. Stewart, Coburn, Rogers, in fact the entire cast is excellent and should be rated for serious consideration in the placing of the Academy Award for this season. If you do not have your patrons in the aisles at this picture then your crowd is all wrong. The best audience reaction of the year but then RKO promised us this two years ago and we are entitled to something special. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY: James Stewart, Ginger Rogers, James Ellison, Charles Coburn, Beulah Bondi—Excellent. Should suit any audience. Popular appeal. Best RKO has done in some time. Another "Awful Truth." Ginger Rogers never better and "Jimmie" Stewart very, very good. Swell entertainment. Running time, 90 minutes.—J. K. Burgess, Isis Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

WISE GIRL: Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland—This picture had a very poor drawing power but the people that saw picture liked it a lot better than shows with a big buildup. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 12-13.—C. M. Anderson, Tolley Theatre, Tolley, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS GOODBYE: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall, Binnie Barnes, Ian Hunter—A fine drama but failed to draw.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ALWAYS GOODBYE: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall, Binnie Barnes, Ian Hunter—Sold this heavy to the ladies and, boy, did they eat it up. Came out with that "I'm out of breath" feeling and said it's the best picture I ever saw. Ideal midweek picture that will do business. The clothes of Stanwyck are a standout in this picture. Running time, 76 minutes. Played August 10-11. Peter Panagos, Indiana and Sipe Theatre, Kokomo, Ind. General patronage.

BORNEO: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—Played this on Bargain night and it went over fine. Much better than we expected.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT MONTE CARLO: Warner Oland, Keye Luke—Very good Chan. Can't see that it deserves some bad reviews I have seen on it.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN ON BROADWAY: Warner Oland, Joan Marsh—These series always have a popular following. Well received. Business normal. Many thanks for your letter, M. L. DuBose of Cotulla, Texas. We do enjoy your articles. Thanks, too, for your copies of advertising. There is no flies on you. Keep up the good work.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COUNTY CHAIRMAN, THE (RE-ISSUE): Will Rogers—We ran into the hottest period of the year, so business was below normal. The show gave satisfaction as do all of Will Rogers' repeats. Played August 3-4.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodas, N. Y. Family patronage.

FOUR MEN AND A PRAYER: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, George Sanders, David Niven, William Henry—Fox furnished the four men. The prayer was mine that I would gross enough to pay expenses, but I did not. This is a very good show and pleased those who came, but it is hard to get them in with this class show. Then, they do not like pictures with an English locale. Good, but did not click. Running time, 65 minutes. Played August 17-18.—Gladys N. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Cesar Romero—Didn't draw nearly as well as "Thin Ice." Good picture, however, which pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 102 minutes. Played July 31-August 1.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt, Arthur Treacher, Helen Westley—Fine picture. Played too old to get full benefit of its box office power.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Alice Brady—Excellent. Played July 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

I'LL GIVE A MILLION: Warner Baxter, Marjorie Weaver, Jean Hersholt, Peter Lorre—Don't expect much from this one. It missed here and missed bad. No one seemed to like the setup of the story. Too bad. It had a good cast and Warner Baxter usually pulls. Word of mouth from the matinee killed the night business. So it is apparent that the picture did not have that certain something.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

JOSETTE: Don Ameche, Simone Simon, Bert Lahr, Joan Davis, Robert Young—Some said best picture we'd shown this month, including "In Old Chicago." It was entertaining and Simon is getting cuter and more glamorous every picture. Ameche and Young carried off their roles in the usual high-class manner. Running time, 73 minutes. Played August 10-11.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST (Re-issue): Will Rogers, Anita Louise—Was my first time to show this fine show. Business about average.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

KEEP SMILING: Jane Withers, Gloria Stuart, Henry Wilcoxon, Helen Westley—Good picture and good business.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY MOONSHINE: Ritz Brothers, Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver, Slim Summerville, Berton Churchill—Just the kind of picture the patrons have been asking for: Comedy bordering on slapstick but it is what they want. Personally, I can't see the Ritz Brothers but they go over and that is all I ask for. Marjorie Weaver good as is Berton Churchill. Tony Martin only fair. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 10-11.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

KIDNAPED: Warner Baxter—A terrible disappointment at the box office. Did much less than average business. Picture pleased generally although nobody went out of their way to tell us it was good. Running time, 88 minutes. Played August 7-9.—K. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

KIDNAPPED: Warner Baxter, Freddie Bartholomew, Arleen Whelan, C. Aubrey Smith—This did average business. Nothing startling. English, Irish and Scotch picture and stories never get us the extra dollars.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PANAMINT'S BAD MAN: Smith Ballew, Evelyn Daw—Just another western.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PASSPORT HUSBAND: Stuart Erwin, Pauline Moore, Joan Woodbury—A good little farce comedy which pleased all. Business fair.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RASCALS: Jane Withers, Robert Kent, Robert Wilcox, Borrah Minevitch and His Rascals—Not up to Withers standard so far as story and support are concerned except that Borrah Minevitch and his Gang really saved the show with their music. Played August 19-20.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott—This Temple picture did less than average business and we believe it is mainly due to the fact that we are a neighborhood house and reports on the picture get around between the time it plays downtown and when we play it. Personally, I think it was a mistake on the part of Fox to use a title, the story of which is familiar to millions, and just slap it on a story that had nothing to do with the original. After the great success of Temple in "Heidi," I don't think this kind of treatment did her any good.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. General patronage.

ROLL ALONG, COWBOY: Smith Ballew, Cecilia Parker—Fox has the happy faculty of producing a wide enough range of product to suit most any situation. They know how to produce westerns also. This Smith Ballew sings well. Does nice business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY: Alice Faye, Tony Martin, Jimmy Durante, Joan Davis—This is a mighty fine picture. Alice Faye is certainly tops. Business fair. Musicals simply do not draw like they did. This is just another case where a fine star in a good story will still draw despite the heat and other obstacles. Played July 16.—Frank J. Biberstein, Attica Theatre, Attica, Kan. Rural patronage.

WE'RE GOING TO BE RICH: Gracie Fields, Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy—This English made picture is not so hot.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO, THE: Gary Cooper, Sigrid Gurie, Basil Rathbone, Binnie Barnes—A very fine adventure film.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO, THE: Gary Cooper, Sigrid Gurie, Basil Rathbone, Binnie Barnes—An expensive picture and undoubtedly a good one, but they stayed away. Lowest Sunday on record in spite of nothing else going on. The amount spent on this would have produced several excellent attractions that would have done at least normal business. Historical pictures, that are of course costume shows, are no go in the sticks.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

ALGIERS: Charles Boyer, Sigrid Gurie, Hedy Lamarr, Joseph Calleia, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart—Brought back by popular request within two weeks after I had previously played the picture. I played the picture day and date with Music Hall, but had so many requests for a repeat showing that I had to bring it back. See my other report on the picture. An excellent picture that should do big business for most every exhibitor. Running time, 96 minutes. Played August 14-15.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

DIVORCE OF LADY X, THE: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, Binnie Barnes, Ralph Richardson—An English-made picture produced by Korda and released through United Artists that fell below the average at the box office. Had this been an American-made picture with the right stars, he would have been a wow. But, the English dialect and the fast talking actors made it impossible to understand half the dialogue, spoiling the picture. Running time, 91 minutes. Played August 19-20.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

52ND STREET: Kenny Baker, Leo Carrillo, Pat Paterson, Zasu Pitts—I have run some mixed up messes, but never anything like this. They just tried to get too much in the picture so that it rambles around and a lot of it don't make sense. I couldn't understand why some of it was in and neither did the audience.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GAITY GIRLS, THE: Patricia Ellis, Jack Hulbert, Arthur Riscoe, Googie Withers—U. A. English-made pictures are a complete failure at the box office in the small towns. We have yet to play one that made us money or gave general satisfaction. We grossed less than the rental and express. It seemed to please the few who saw it, however. Played August 5-6.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES, THE: Adolphe Menjou, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Phil Baker, Ritz Brothers, Andrea Leeds, Zorina—A swell show from every angle. It runs from the sublime to the ridiculous and comes pretty near pleasing 100 per cent. Goldwyn has a find in his star, Andrea Leeds. The little lady has everything it takes, a good voice, good expression, sings nicely, has beauty, grace and a pleasing personality. If given a chance she will be box office in a very short time. The picture drew better than average. Running time, 109 minutes. Played July 24-25.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES, THE: Adolphe Menjou, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Phil Baker, Ritz Brothers, Andrea Leeds, Kenny Baker, Zorina—Too long, way too long. "Charlie McCarthy" and E. Bergen, Ritz Brothers were the only thing that had any scenes to it and they were crazy. Running time, 109 minutes. Played August 7-8.—Oaty Elmore, Best Theatre, Charleston, W. Va. General patronage.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES, THE: Adolphe Menjou, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Ritz Brothers, Phil Baker, Andrea Leeds—This is one grand show; will stand on your best night and all your customers will be more than satisfied. Color is perfect. Running time, 109 minutes. Played July 31-August 2.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Universal

LITTLE TOUGH GUY: "Dead End Kids," Robert Wilcox, Helen Parrish—Opened with this on my weakest day and broke the house record. I don't know how or why but those "Dead End Kids" are naturals for our box office. Was afraid parents would keep kids away from this but they were glad to bring them, probably due to excellent moral the picture brings out. Running time, 82 minutes. Played August 7-8.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

Warner Brothers

GOLD DIGGERS IN PARIS: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, the Schnickelfritz Band—After running "Gold Diggers" it is hard to believe that the same concern put out "Robin Hood" and then make such a mess of a picture as they did of this one. It is a plain stupid story and even the great Vallee could not save it. He'll have a hard time saving his public after this one in pictures. It just isn't there as entertainment and I am frank to say I don't just know where it missed. But this I do know, that the audience was mostly thumbs down on it. Not a good word. The clown band was the best and the only bright spot as far as I could see.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS IN PARIS: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Dick Foran—This picture was one of the best musicals I have seen in a long time. Rudy Vallee very good in it and was very well liked by the patrons. I hope Warners will make another just as good soon. Running time, 95 minutes. Played August 17-18.—John Sherwin, Colonial Theatre, Bristol, Vt. Small town and summer patronage.

LITTLE MISS THOROUGHbred: Ann Sheridan, John Lital—Just a picture. Very little entertaining value. Skip it. Running time, 64 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SERGEANT MURPHY: Ronald Reagan, Mary Maguire—Fair program picture. Warner, where are those good pictures you used to make in the program line?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Nat Pendleton, Penny Singleton—Best midweek business since we played "In Old Chicago" and I had previously passed this up. Made a big hit here. Drawing almost a record in laughs.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Nat Pendleton, Penny Singleton, Weaver Brothers, Elvyr—Mighty good hilly billy comedy. I see these same entertainers are making a picture for Republic. Will be glad to have them again. They're good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda, Allen Jenkins—A fine hill-billy picture that had the crowd rolling in the aisles and raising the roof. If anybody had any worries when they came, they certainly had forgotten them after seeing this show. Hats off to Warners. Let's have more of these kind. Business was good. Played July 22.—Frank J. Biberstein, Attica Theatre, Attica, Kan. Rural patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Bonita Granville, Jackie Cooper—Here is a picture that has everything in it a small town exhibitor could ask for. A company such as Warners should be proud to produce such a masterpiece as this. In fact, this company should be proud of their record of the past season. Sixty pictures made and two pictures that we could make money on, "Submarine D-1" and "White Banners." With regards to this picture, however, we can give only the highest praise. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WOMEN ARE LIKE THAT: Kay Francis, Pat O'Brien, Ralph Forbes, Melville Cooper—Fair program picture. It looks as if Kay Francis is washed up. Pat O'Brien don't mean a thing in this one. Awfully miscast. Recording only fair. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Short Subjects Columbia

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 9: Gene Morgan—These subjects are good, but no one knew the Spanish songs in this issue. Running time, 10 minutes.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

EL SALVADOR: World in Color Series—Columbia has really something novel in their travel talks. Had a tough time selling them to the customers, but have finally convinced them. Running time, nine minutes.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

FOOLISH BUNNY, THE: Color Rhapsodies—Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

FROG POND, THE: Color Rhapsodies—A dandy colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HEALTHY, WEALTHY AND DUMB: Three Stooges—The last part of the title fits all these comedies as far as I am concerned, but the customers like them and that's enough for me. These Stooges sure help put over some of Columbia's pictures and possibly save you from quite a few refunds. Running time, 18 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

INDIAN SERENADE: Color Rhapsodies—A beautiful cartoon that was a trifle too highbrow for the kids. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MANY SAPPY RETURNS: Charley Chase—A fair comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MASQUE RAID, THE: Krazy Kat Cartoons—A nice filler. Will get by OK.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 11: A very fine reel showing actors ten years or so ago and today. Very interesting.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SELF CONTROL: Walt Disney Cartoons—Donald really does himself proud in this comedy. Running time, nine minutes.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SNOW FOOLIN': Special Sport Thrills—On a hot night fine. We had the heat all right.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TASSELS IN THE AIR: Three Stooges—Usual for the series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penaceek, N. H. General patronage.

WEE WEE MONSIEUR: Three Stooges—Very good. Running time, 21 minutes.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Educational

ALL'S FAIR: Song and Comedy Hits—O.K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

CUPID TAKES A HOLIDAY: Two-Reel Comedies—A good short. Running time, 15 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

MISS LONELY HEARTS: Song and Comedy Hits—A wow. Comedy, some good acrobatic numbers and a toe dancer that is tops. Pleased. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

WE LIVE IN TWO WORLDS: Treasure Chest—Fair short on the educational line. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CAPTAIN'S PUP: Captain and the Kids—We started playing this series on a Sunday opening and they fell with a dud, but by switching them to Friday and Saturday they are going over great with the kids. One of the best kids cartoons we have run. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GLIMPSES OF PERU: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another ringer. Beautiful coloring. Never saw a prettier sunset.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAGICIAN'S DAUGHTER, THE: Musical Comedies—A fine two-reel drama with music and comedy. Everybody liked it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MAIL AND FEMALE: Our Gang—Very good. These are slipping through the lack of juvenile stars.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NEW AUDIOSCOPIKS, THE: Special—Very good, but no extra business and that is what we're looking for.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, A: Robert Benchley—The best Robert Benchley to date.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SHIP THAT DIED, THE: Historical Mysteries—Fairly good. Doesn't hold one's interest as much as it should. There are two classes of pictures, entertainment and educational pictures. This one is an educational picture. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

SNOW GETS IN YOUR EYES: Musical Comedies—MGM musicals do not have enough "umph" for our crowd. Slow and draggy. Not so hot. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TUPAPAOO: M-G-M Miniatures—An excellent "What Do You Think." Unusual story and very fascinating.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WHAT PRICE SAFETY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Always well received. Sound very bad on this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

BALL TOSSERS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Pretty good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BESIDE A MOONLIT STREAM: Screen Songs—Good.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BOB CROSBY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—A very good short that should be enjoyed by the majority of your audience. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

BOB CROSBY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Again Paramount scores with its shorts. This one is a knockout, so do not waste it on a poor date. The old as well as the young enjoyed it. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CRIME FIGHTERS: Paragraphics—An excellent short with a wonderful moral, "Crime Doesn't Pay." This short should be tied up with local police department for real results. Have them cooperate to run a big "wipe out crime" drive in your town. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

FOUR SMART DOGS: Grantland Rice—One of the best of the sport series. Play it. Running time, 10 minutes.—K. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

GOLD: Paragraphics—An excellent, interesting and something different short. This company is continuing on the high plane that they started on early in the season. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HUNKY AND SPUNKY: Color Classics—This is one of the most pleasing cartoons I have ever seen. Adults like it as well as the kids. It has a beautiful music score and is slightly different from the usual cartoon. Running time, 9 minutes.—K. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

I AM LOVE SICK: Popeye the Sailor—Not so good as some we have played this season but we will not complain as they have been excellent all season. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JEEP, THE: Popeye the Sailor—Very good. This series makes a big hit in this town. If really pushed hard, it should bring in a few extra shekels. Running time, seven minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

MEET THE MAESTROS: Headliners—Fairly good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

OH KAY, RHYTHM: Headliners—A fairly good short subject. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: O.K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS ALI BABA'S FORTY THIEVES: Popeye Special—The best Popeye comedy we have run so far and if it wasn't for this comedy the show "The Big Broadcast of 1939" would have been a complete flop. Running time, 20 minutes.—C. M. Anderson, Tolley Theatre, Tolley, N. D. Small town patronage.

RED, WHITE AND BLUE CHAMPIONS: Ted Husing—Again this man Husing with the help of Grantland Rice puts over a knockout of a sports reel. You cannot give much comment on Husing's product as they are always tops. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STAR REPORTER: Ted Husing—This series is fairly good with plenty of variety and pep. Running time, one reel.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

RKO Radio

KENNEDY'S CASTLE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—The usual Kennedy antics, some good, some not so good. Too much sameness. Running time, 20 minutes.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: Men of Medicine: 1938—Folks told us that this was really the best one we have shown to date.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: Men of Medicine: 1938—An excellent subject, but no better than the balance. In fact, we were somewhat disappointed in that we expected too much from the publicity that this reel had received. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: People seem to like all March of Times, but this one was the tops. They enjoyed this one. They asked to see it over. Running time, 20 minutes.—C. M. Anderson, Tolley Theatre, Tolley, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PATHE NEWS: These newsreels are very interesting and have a wide variety of subject matter.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SKYLINE REVUE: Nu-Atlas Productions—A swell vaudeville reel that has not been topped by anyone's product this season. Do not waste this one as it is excellent. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHALERS, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Donald Duck as usual steals the show. Running time, nine minutes.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHRIS COLUMBO: Terry-Toons—Very good, indeed. We make a steady policy of showing this series every Sunday and Monday and find that after plugging them right that they do bring in extra business. A swell series to book.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: Okay.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

ISLE OF PINGO PONGO: Merrie Melodies—One of the best colored cartoons of the year.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RISE AND SING: Cross and Dunn—Finally, Vitaphone has surprised us and gave us a Brevity that was something to crow about. This reel is so different than the majority of the product that Vitaphone has given us this season that the relief is truly refreshing. Save this for a poor feature to build it up. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STOCKS AND BLONDES: Broadway Brevities—First half of reel dull and draggy but a whirlwind finish. Running time, 20 minutes.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

May Use Bought Chicago Theatre for Exploitation

So-called exploitation pictures, class pictures, in fact any kind of films that warrant unusual selling to the public will have what has previously been denied them in Chicago's Loop, a theatre especially suited to their needs. The house is the Woods, recently acquired by the independent Essaness circuit.

The appointment of Herb Elisburg, Essaness publicity and advertising chief, as manager of the theatre gives rise to the report that Essaness will change the Woods present "C" week policy into one that is more adaptable. Mr. Elisburg is credited with developing the Essaness Julian theatre into one of the most profitable foreign picture theatres in the country. Scandinavian picture are favorite at the Julian, and a tremendous following for them has been developed here.

With this experience Essaness is expected to start a foreign-film policy at the Woods. At present the World Playhouse and the Sonotone theatres are the principal foreign theatres in the downtown district. Being less than 500 seats in size and away from the heart of the Loop, both theatres are somewhat handicapped in advertising and selling their attractions.

Essaness theatre officials when approached regarding the turning of the Woods into a special picture type of theatre would neither confirm nor deny the report. Announcement of the policy for the theatre would be made soon, they said.

In preparation for the taking over of the theatre September 4th, Mr. Elisburg has assembled a picked staff from various theatres in the Essaness circuit to assist him. His assistants will be Tony Stuver of the Sheridan theatre and Jack Springer of the Byrd. Ten ushers especially selected will handle the service department of the theatre.

Maberry Appointed Assistant to Weeks

The duties of Cecil Maberry, central-western division manager for Monogram, have been extended to include the entire United States as an assistant in the field to George W. Weeks, sales manager. Under the new arrangement Mr. Maberry will not be restricted to one territory. Before joining Monogram Mr. Maberry operated the Hippodrome, New York, presenting grand opera at popular prices. Prior to that he was sales manager for Columbia.

Mr. Weeks said this week that the proposed plan to appoint other division managers would not be put into operation at this time.

Talent Agency To Celebrate

The William Morris talent agency will celebrate its 40th anniversary next month. It is the oldest agency of its kind in existence. It was founded by William Morris in 1898. His two children, William Jr., and Ruth, now conduct the business.

NAZIS BAN READERS' DIGEST AND COLLIER'S

The Nazi secret police have banned Readers' Digest indefinitely from Germany and all foreign translations and editions of Kurt Schuschnigg's book, "My Austria", according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Meanwhile a dispatch from the United Press states that the official gazette has announced that Collier's, American weekly, had been banned in Germany for an indefinite period by order of the police and the Propaganda Ministry. No reason for the order was given. It was imposed under a February 28, 1933, decree providing for "protection of the people of the state."

"Birth" Distributor Sued for $350,000

Charging that the distribution of his motion picture, "Life," has been curtailed by the activities of the owners and distributors of the film "The Birth of a Baby," Maurice Copeland, independent film producer, this week appealed to the United States district court, Chicago, for damages of $350,000 and an injunction against the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, Inc., and Special Pictures Corporation.

In a bill of complaint filed in behalf of Mr. Copeland by the law firm of Blech, Hersen and Gordon, it is contended that the defendants interfered with the distribution of "Life" by intimidation, slander of merchandise, and the institution of actions.

Advertisements Cited

The defendants, it is charged in the papers, own and distribute "The Birth of a Baby" and, in behalf of this picture, inserted ads in trade publications warning exhibitors of "spurious productions seeking to trade" on the publicity obtained by "The Birth of a Baby."

Mr. Copeland contends that insertion of the ad has led exhibitors to believe his picture is one of the "spurious productions."

The plaintiff also cites two actions instituted by the American Committee on Maternal Welfare as a result of Mr. Copeland advertising that the film pertains to the "birth of a baby." One suit was in Houston, Texas, and the plea for a temporary injunction against the Copeland film was denied. It was only eight days after the injunction was denied, Mr. Copeland states in his bill of complaint, that an advertisement appeared in a trade publication, warning of "spurious productions."

The second action against Mr. Copeland was brought by the Maternal Committee in Salt Lake City two weeks ago and the plea for an injunction also was denied. A counterclaim for $45,000 damages was filed by the Roxy Theatre, Inc., and B. H. Paris, Mr. Copeland's agent. This phase of the action is still pending before Herbert M. Schiller, district court judge.

In the face of the two court decisions, Mr. Copeland contends, the defendants "are creating the impression that the defendants are the only ones who have been authorized by the courts to exhibit motion pictures depicting and describing the bearing of children."

Canadian Owners Convene; Allied Sets October 19

At the recent annual meeting of Allied Exhibitors of Nova Scotia at the Nova Scotia Hotel in Halifax A. J. Mason was elected president for the ensuing year. W. H. Cuzner was named vice-president, T. J. Courtney, secretary-treasurer and the following directors were elected: R. J. Macadam, S. M. Bartling, N. W. Mason, M. Herschon, A. A. Fielding and E. R. Lynn. Mr. Mason addressed the meeting on matters pertaining to the film industry since the 1937 gathering. A resolution was adopted asking for the same regulations for 16 mm. films as is in the case of 35 mm. films. Some 25 exhibitors attended the meeting from various parts of the province.

It was suggested that it might be desirable to invite New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island exhibitors to join the organization thus making it representative of the Maritimes as a whole. The officers and directors were empowered to proceed with negotiations for this affiliation.

Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey and Allied Theatre Owners of New York State will hold their annual conventions jointly at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Atlantic City, October 19-21.

This will be the 19th annual convention of the New Jersey group and the first annual convention of the New York State group. Over 600 theatre owners and motion picture executives are expected to attend.

With the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America an unofficial certainty to be held in Oklahoma City, Okla., about the middle of October officials of surrounding states associations are being surveyed to find out how many such exhibitor associations would like to hold their state conventions concurrently with the national convention, according to Morris Loewenstein, national secretary.

An executive committee meeting is scheduled to be held within the next two weeks to determine officially the convention city.

Van Beveren Joins New Otterson Company

W. Willems Van Beveren, formerly associated with the distribution of Regina features in America, has joined John E. Otterson as foreign manager in charge of the French pictures to be selected by Mr. Otterson for American distribution.

Mr. Van Beveren is a Hollander by birth and education but most of his business experience in the motion picture industry has been in France.

Regal Gets French Films

Regal Distributing Corporation will distribute from eight to 12 French productions, S. S. Krellberg, president, said this week. The first four will be: "Sarrati, le Terrible," "Rothschile," "Les Hommes Nouveaux," each starring Harry Baur, and "Un Mauvais Garcon," with Danielle Darrieux and Henry Garat.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MR. ANDREWS

"The status of theatre employees under the new Federal Wages and Hours Act which goes into effect October 24th, may be a matter of determination by the administrator, Elmer F. Andrews, who took office this week. . . . Managers of theatres will be beyond the application of the law. . . ."—from MOTION PICTURE HERALD, August 20th.

Mr. Elmer F. Andrews, Administrator,
Labor Standard Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Andrews:

It is understood that the theatre manager will be beyond the application of the new law because of his executive position. But what of the manager who works 12 hours a day, seven days a week, for wages as low as $20 weekly. If ushers and "other employees" are included among those to be favored, it would seem that the manager would do better, financially, by becoming an usher or "other employee." Then his 84-hour week at the basic pay of 25 cents per hour would bring him $21 a week, as against his previous "executive" salary of $20, would it not?

And what of the assistant manager? Before determining his status, might it not be well to look into situations in the New York territory where the assistant is paid as little as $12 a week. He may receive a day off a week, but as his working day still remains 12 hours, his $12 salary covers 72 hours, a mite better than 16 cents per hour.

If the minimum wage provisions are intended to increase earning power and lessen hours of the working day, these purposes must be defeated just as long as employers of skilled theatre workers are allowed to get by with paying off in figures that would be scorned in no uncertain terms by the lowest paid WPA laborer.

You indicate, Mr. Andrews, "the motion picture industry would not be unduly burdened by the new act, since it is one of the 'high wage' industries?"

Is an industry that pays skilled help from 16 to 23 cents an hour to be considered "high wage"?

NO NEED TO GO FANCY

The "Show of Showmanship" at the recent Famous Players-Canadian convention in Toronto, described elsewhere in this issue, was an immediate success. What helped to make it so, according to ad head Jim Nairn, responsible for the idea, were the 1937 Quigley Award campaigns borrowed from your Round Table and studied eagerly by the visiting theatremen. While some of the entries were put together rather elaborately, we were pleased to impress upon the inquiring managers that the Awards were not voted for that reason. What was emphasized to the wondering Canadians may well be stressed also for others who wish enlightenment on the same point.

The quality of a campaign, only, establishes its value in the eyes of the Judging Committees. No entrant need feel that absence of gingerbread decorations or fancy art will prejudice his chances of winning. It is expected that entries for the Quigley Awards will be neat, concise. But that's all. If a man chooses to express his artistic soul in presenting his campaigns, we'll and good. It won't hurt. But it won't help a bent nickel if he doesn't have the stuff.

CONGRATULATIONS, LOEW-DOWN

It is this department's pleasure to indicate a bow in the direction of the consistent job being done by Oscar Doob, Ernie Emerling, et al, on occasion of the recently come fifteen hundredth issue of "Loew-Down." Assembled daily in the home office, this circuit organ sets forth what the managers are doing for their box offices and is relayed immediately far and wide so that others may read. Knowing the griefs that beset the progressive course of a weekly, one is kindled with admiration for the bangup job the Loew-men are doing in not only getting out a daily but packing it with meaty selling ideas that theatremen grab for hungrily.

Detractors of circuit operation might well be told that the constructive aids created for the man in the field by such representative organizations as Loew's, more than even up a lot of the so-termed chain red tape.

In addition to co-op ads and special theatre supplements and theatre slugs carried by stores in their newspaper advertising, merchants in Wilkes Barre, Pa. gave over most prominent windows to further publicize opening of the new Comerford Theatre. Above display is a typical exhibition arranged by the circuit executives and planted well ahead of opening.

H. M. Addison, right, division manager for Loew's Theatres, is shown presenting trophy to winner of the first prize in the Mickey Rooney Doubles contest sponsored by the Boston Traveler in connection with "Love Finds Andy Hardy" date at the State, Boston. Winner also received cash and congratulatory wire from the star.

An Adonis trophy was awarded by C. Arnold Skelly in connection with his Flash Gordon serial dates at the New Arcade, Newark, Ohio. Board was planted in lobby, showing height, weight and body measurements of Flash Gordon. To the local male whose physique most accurately corresponded, the trophy was presented.

Above is photo of the Loew Poli theatre managers taken at New Haven. Luncheon was held to discuss the plans for the campaign of the new season product. Slogan adopted was "Loew Poli Theatres march on to a greater show season."

As can be seen from the photo above, traffic was held up on the main streets of Salt Lake City when Charlie Pincus, Centre Theatre got busy with his "Texans" street bally. Covered wagon drawn by oxen and properly bannered headed the parade, followed by cowboys and girls on horseback.

For a week in advance of "Mother Carey's Chickens" opening at the Byrd and State, Richmond, manager Bob Coulter and publicity director David Kamsky arranged this attractive display. Compo board house was constructed and tiny chickens cavorted about the enclosure.

Marlowe Starts Children's Club

Marlowe Conner, Rhodes Theatre, Chicago, is planning on starting a novel and unique club for kids as soon as school opens. When children register they will be given a club card for them to keep. Their names, addresses and ages will be recorded in a file and a registration number affixed.

Each week at the Saturday matinee, a name will be selected. The boy or girl selected will be the hosts or hostesses to nine of his or her friends the following Saturday. The guests that they bring, however, must be members of the Club also.

Invitations will be printed, nine of which will be given the one chosen each Saturday to mail or hand to the friends they want to treat the following week.

Arrangements have been made with local candy company to treat ten children in their store every Saturday, in return for which they will be mentioned in all advertising going out on the Club. In addition to the initial printing cost, it will stand the theatre $1.00 each Saturday in admissions, which will undoubtedly be offset, Conner feels, with regular attendance on the part of many, as the child can only be chosen once, thereby giving others a chance to win.

Street Ballys Aid "Crowd Roars" Date

Street ballys helped publicize "Crowd Roars" for Leo Rosen at the Troy Theatre, Troy, N. Y., who with the aid of MGM exploiter J. G. Walsh, had a man on horseback wearing boxing gloves and back banner with copy reading "go ahead and laugh at me, but you'll cheer when you see" etc., etc. Bass drum with copy on either side was planted in front of theatre and at intervals boy would hit a resounding smack to attract attention before going into picture spiel.

Through tieup with radio station guest tickets were given to first 25 who took advantage of offer on that particular program to go to cooperating store after broadcast and ask for the ducats. "Man on the Street" program was held, through tieup with local creamery, milk bottle hangers were distributed and bumper strips used.

Ace stunt engineered by Jerry Zigmond of the Newman Theatre, Kansas City for "The Texans" was house artist, who was stationed in front of theatre painting in bright colors a large eight by ten foot map on the sidewalk depicting the area containing the Texas Trail. Map was painted on tough wrapping paper, laid down with some detrose paste and shellacked with water glass. The latter was done on the seventh day, when the picture was going into its second week.

Dramatization was planted over KITE and plugs secured on KMBC. Department stores inserted picture copy in payroll envelopes, Western magazines were distributed with imprinted fronts, three men on horseback carried flags on poles with picture copy and a "man-on-street" broadcast was held.

Redbook Magazine Uses Cards to Plug "Algiers"

Coincident with its selection of "Algiers" as "The Picture of the Month," Redbook Magazine has arranged a tie-up with United Artists to exploit the picture through the distribution of 35,000 tack cards to newsdealers throughout the United States, timing their issuance with the national release of the picture.

Manila Welcomes Charlie McCarthy On "Follies" Date

Popularity of "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen's boy friend in the Philippines inspired Sydney Albright, United Artists' manager in that sector to put into action the gag of having Charlie, himself, transported to Manila for a personal appearance tour for the opening of "Goldwyn Follies" at the States. Communicating with Sammy Cohen, United Artists' foreign publicity director, the campaign was launched by a trip to Washington where Cohen introduced McCarthy to Quintin Parades, Resident Commissioner of the Philippines in the United States. Visiting in the Capitol at time, was Eulio Rodriques, member of the Philippine cabinet, and initial publicity for the Manila papers was obtained with a series of photos showing Charlie with the officials.

Tieins were made with United to fly Charlie to the coast, and with Pan American to transport him to Manila via Clipper. The coast papers covered the departure as the wooden star took off on his 11,000-mile journey. In Manila, Albright and Manager E. D. Rufino, had been beating on the drum to the effect that everyone was aware of the event and a full program of entertainment arranged. When Charlie arrived, the Mayor was on hand to welcome him not with the conventional key, but the "tree" to the city. A round of activities followed including official dinners, receptions, broadcasts. Many local tieins were executed, as were contests, featured by the local language papers in addition to the English dailies.

Emphasized by United Artists is that the entire stunt was built around the idea of treating Charlie as a real person, in all seriousness and not as a 22-inch replica of Bergen's original dummy. This was followed out in every direction to rousing results.

"Alexander" Gets Big Campaign in Frisco

Extensive buildup was given "Alexander's Ragtime Band" at the Fox Theatre, San Francisco, by Phil Phillips, advertising manager northern California division of Fox West Coast Theatres and Herman Kersken, house manager.

In view of the early sequences in the picture about the Barbary Coast and the old Cliff House, tieup was arranged with the new Cliff House to display six foot blowups of Alice Faye, Don Ameche and Tyrone Power. Costume worn by the cigarette girl in the film was obtained for the Cliff House ciggie girl to wear during the film's run.

10,000 autographed pictures of the stars were given away along the Ocean Beach where the hotel and other concessions are located. Also distributed were 20,000 imprinted napkins at hot dog counters and colored balloons for the youngsters. Four page rotos were inserted in home distributed Liberty magazines and newspapers and trade magazines cooperated. 24 and six sheets were placed at all local dance halls, bands plugging the Berlin tunes for the week and radio stations also helped.

FP-C Managers Greet Chairman At Toronto Meet

by A-MIKE VOGEL

One of this department's yearly highlights, attendance at the annual Famous Players-Canadian convention in Toronto, occupied the spotlight the week-end of Aug. 27, when your Chairman, again honored with an invitation by J. J. Fitzgibbons, was pleased to spend a few days mingling with the members across the line in celebrating the circuit's Twentieth Anniversary Jubilee. American Airlines took us to Buffalo for a short visit with Vince McFaul, head of Shea's Theatres, Round Tabler Charley Taylor, Shea Theatres ad head, and the rest of his department, all up to their necks and doing a top job of putting over their part in the industry drive. Business on the upbeat was the Buffalo story. Talk of this and that with the boys until train time and then to Toronto, where the welcoming committee, headed by genial Jim Nairn and Howard Knevels, was gathered at the King Edward. The famed Canadian hospitality was immediately in evidence and continued at the home of Morris Stein, where many of the theatremen were guests of the Ontario supervisor and Mrs. Stein. A feature of the gathering was the presentation by the boys of flowers to Mrs. Stein and a desk set to the popular Morris.

Nathanson Presents Checks

The following day was the last of the convention, and as always, the most important, since it marked the arrival of N. L. Nathanson, president, from his annual trip to Europe, to be on hand for the personal distribution of the bonus checks earned by the managers in the circuit's famed participation plan. Mr. Nathanson spoke of the progress made by the circuit and difficulties overcome in the past twenty years. He thanked the theatremen for their loyalty and cooperation and looked forward with confidence to the following years.

Tribute to the theatremen who had been with the circuit for 20 years was paid by Clarence Robson, to whom the boys presented a gift of a serving cabinet in appreciation of the esteem with which they held the Eastern Division manager and chairman of the convention. Mr. Robson introduced your Chairman, who emphasized that the industry now more than ever leaned upon the manager to keep the box office in a healthy condition. Among the final talks made, Mr. Fitzgibbons again brought out the importance of the trade press in theatre operation, especially MOTION PICTURE HERALD and Managers' Round Table.

Convention Attends Picnic

Lunch followed the final session and then to the big event of the day, the annual picnic and games at the Rouge Hills Country Club, and a handsome day it proved to be. A complete program of games was held under the supervision of C. L. Querrie, Dan Krendel, Stan Andrews, M. J. Doyle and J. A. Troyer. Prize golf tournament and candid camera contest were also featured. Dinner

"Lord Jeff" Soap Box Derby Entry Aids Picture Date

Leo Young, manager of the Strand Theatre, Portland, Maine, and MGM exploiteer Bert McKenzie fashioned a campaign on "Lord Jeff" which included cooperation of News of the Day for a newsreel of pictures taken of the Portland Soap Box Derby. One hundred and eighty cars participated in the race, forty of which were sponsored by local merchants. Theatre had an entry called "Mickey Rooney—Lord Jeff," which incidentally finished second in the finals.

Newspapers were generous with art and stories on the theatre entry and Young received a wire from Mickey Rooney wishing his driver good luck. Station WGSM gave an all-day broadcast to the race and every time the theatre's entry got out front it received a special plug. Exploitation included newspapers, loud speaker systems, ballyhoo car, radio, etc.

Loew-Poli Heads Organize Parades for New Season

Sponsored by Harry Shaw, district manager and engineered by Erle Wright, division ad head for the Loew-Poli New England Theatres, the annual new season's product campaign, now under way, features parades in every city, specializing a huge float decorated in silver and purple tin foil, at the front end of which is a miniature stage with draw curtains. On the stage is a huge frame carrying 12-40 by 50's on the Loew coming pictures and New Show Season slogan. Posters are changed by costumed girls pulling a gold cord. Copy is lettered on window shades and rolled up in the same fashion. Two gold lions are planted at the head of the float, which, after parade in each town, will make the various Loew theatres and be stationed in front of the houses. At night the car will be illuminated from the marquee with special spot lights and color wheels.

Man-on-street broadcast has also been arranged for direct from float with interviews from people on street on questions relative to Movie Quiz and Greater Show season. The Mayor in each town and Governor of both Massachusetts and Connecticut have signed a proclamation carrying the symbol of the New Show Season. Special 18-page albums being printed locally will be sold in each town to one merchant, and each week for 16 weeks a still of a star will be given to everyone who brings an album to the theatre.

Stars Wire Congratulations

Arrangements have been made for congratulatory telegrams from stars, directors and executives in Hollywood direct to managers of each Loew theatre, these to be placed on a huge board in lobby. Small angel cakes will be mailed direct to newspaper editors, critics, city and state officials with copy inserted on a printed card reading "Cut yourself a piece of cake and help us celebrate Motion Pictures' Greatest Year."

In cooperation with various Chambers of Commerce throughout the territory, merchants will decorate their store fronts and buildings. Street flag poles will be hung with burgees, double faced with "Loew-Poli Theatres March On to a Greater Show Season" on one side and "Movies Are Your Best Entertainment" on the other side. Newspaper campaign includes slogan in all advance ads, special readers and photograph of the parade and float.

Ties "Chicago" to Week

Fire Prevention Week, coming directly in advance of "Old Chicago," at the DeKalb, Decatur, Ga., Manager John Thompson, tied in with the local drive by plugging the community event in exchange for publicity for his date. In all the newspaper stories, the "week" was hooked up to the fire in the picture which was mentioned by name and further plugged with a three-column cut showing the local firemen gazing at picture of the bovine

They Encourage Ushers to Act Independently of Any Rules

Balabans' Ultra-Swank Esquire Theatre Presents New Note in Neighborhood Operation

by MILTON D. LEVEY

Advertising Director

Harry Balaban Theatres, Chicago

The Esquire theatre, Chicago's new neighborhood shrine to the cinematic art, is one of the most expensively constructed motion picture theatres in the country. In an effort to provide a fitting theatre center for the ultra swank Gold Coast district, the owners, Harry, Elmer and A. J. Balaban have put over $500,000 into the construction of the fifteen hundred seat playhouse.

The theatre was built with one thought in mind; to provide the finest possible surroundings and service for photoplay presentation. Because the actual construction has much to do with the service that the theatre renders, it is well to give a brief resume of some of the structural details.

The entire building was constructed so that every detail in it would appear to be a stage setting. A non-seasonal atmosphere has been established by the liberal use of ferns, shrubs and artificial trees in and around the front. The box office, slightly in from the building line, gives a patron the illusion of being within the theatre even before he buys his ticket.

Local Artists Encouraged

Inside the theatre, the lobby is decorated in quiet tones, with a wood finish covering the entire wall. Music, coming from hidden recesses permeates the lobby and all of the public rooms. This music is created by an automatic record changing phonograph and a radio, hooked up to a speaker system, and serves to establish an entertainment mood in the mind of the patron, immediately cutting off the outside world.

The main staircase, leading to the balcony, is broken up by a series of landings and intimate nooks, so that those ascending the stairs will lose all conception of rising to any height. On one side of the balcony foyer is an intimate studio gallery, where the works of local artists and photographers are displayed from time to time.

The seats are of the new "Push-Back" type, and the Esquire is the first major installation in the country of these unique lounge chairs. Luxuriously upholstered, even to the arms, the seats move back to allow easy passage between rows.

Ushers Taught to Think

One inflexible rule has been followed in training Esquire ushers under the supervision of William D. Galligan. With the exception of a few general house rules, they have been taught as individuals, and not as a group. They are expected to think and act independently of any rules, and to express their own personality. They are instructed that the development of their personality, which will in turn develop a personality

"ALGIERS" COSTUMES WIN THEATRE PRIZES

Added interest for the opening of "Algiers" at Loew's, Louisville, Ky., was built up by an offer of cash and theatre tickets for the best and most colorful Algerian, Moroccan or Arabian costumes worn by patrons. Manager George N. Hunt, Jr., had the house staff in costume to greet the contestants.

for the theatre, is to take precedence over any service regulations. They are encouraged to speak to patrons and, as a result, they are expected to have at their command a knowledge of the many points of interest in and about the city, and of the hotels and eating places in the vicinity of the theatre. The service staff is selected with extreme care. As an example, out of over three hundred applicants in response to a recent want ad only four were selected for training. The applicants are judged not so much on their physical appearance as on their intelligence and personality.

Patrons of the Esquire are treated as individuals rather than as part of a crowd. Holdouts are started when there are still more than a hundred vacant seats on the main floor. Those waiting in line are then informed of the location of these seats and if they want them, are escorted down the aisle. After they have been seated, and a more desirable seat is vacated, the usher comes and takes them to the better seats if they wish to change. If parties are separated on entering the theatre, an attempt is made to seat them together as soon as possible. All ushers, as well as the maid, carry cigarettes and matches which are offered to all people.

When a holdout has been in effect for any length of time, the candy case attendant, an attractive young lady, and the director-ette, offer those waiting a tray of cooling mints and a glass of sparkling Waukesha water. The directorette, who stands just inside the entrance doors, directs people to certain aisles and also acts as a hostess.

Special Service for Women

Further Esquire services provide fresh flowers every day in all public rooms. Current magazines are also found in the lounges and smoking rooms, and are offered to those waiting for seats by the ushers. In addition, various well known makes of cosmetics are kept on hand in the ladies rooms and offered for use by the maid. Each woman receives an individual bar of soap and a towel.

Pictures at the Esquire are not booked because they are in the so-called "colossal" group, or because they are doing business in town, but solely for their entertainment quality. All features and shorts are carefully screened, and if they do not measure up to the standard, regardless of the cast, the company or the commitments, they are rejected. A successful attempt has been made to foster the feeling that when a picture plays the Esquire, it must be a good picture.

Play Only Single Features

As pictures are single featured (and Chicago is completely double feature), a new idea in short subject presentation has been evolved, called "The Esquire Hour." Consisting of only carefully selected short subjects and news reels, it is presented as a unit, and not as the usual unrelated group of shorts. All titles and superfluous information are eliminated, and, where necessary, trailers made by the theatre, are substituted. The "Hour" always closes with a quotation of the day, changed for each program. This is generally philosophic and slightly humorous.

At the end of each performance, the waterfall curtain is lowered, and the house lights raised for a two or three minute intermission. There is never any "speed up" for turnover purposes. From the start to the finish the performance unreels in leisurely fashion. This is the cue to the entire operation of the theatre.

One of the most noticeable items in an Esquire performance is the complete absence of all prevue trailers. On the second run pictures, no trailers of any sort are shown,

MORE ON "ESQUIRE"

while on the first run presentations, a two or three frame trailer is devised telling about the new attraction. No scenes from the picture are shown, and the copy is very seldom descriptive of the picture. Pictures are sold through suggestion, rather than by direct selling.

The same absence of stock material is noticed in the poster cases. Recessed and lighted for easy readability, these cases carry their message by means of special displays which are made up for each picture, using atmospheric material. The poster work is of an individual and exceedingly high class type.

The Esquire newspaper ads are fairly large, and are always laid out to insure the maximum amount of white space. In most of the second run advertising, the ads are made up entirely of type, with simple borders. Only the more delicate type faces, such as Kabel or Bernhard Gothic are used. In the case of the first run pictures, copy, as before, is kept at a minimum, usually only one line of punch copy being used. The punch line is always simple, and does not necessarily describe the picture, but may only serve to create interest. Illustrations from the picture are never used. However, atmospheric simple line drawings are often used, and occasionally they serve to illustrate a particular angle of the picture. It has been found that these light airy ads stand out more on a page than a heavy black ad. They also serve to suggest the character of the theatre.

Subdues All Publicity

Publicity, like the advertising is carefully written. Regular press book stories are often used where they conform to the Esquire standards, which means that squibs about the new cerise color used by Joe Matinee in his den, or the new Dalmatian Leaping hound purchased by Gloria Glamour, are out. Publicity stories lean more towards simple announcements of a certain picture playing the Esquire. The cast is mentioned, and if the picture was made in England, it is a big selling point in its favor. Occasionally a brief outline of the plot is given. The stories, like the ads are kept simple, straightforward and neat, not necessarily selling the picture, but always creating an interest in it.

The advertising and publicity are never blatant, always subdued. Pictures are not pointed out to be "the most colossal" "the most stupendous," or even "the finest." The mere fact that the picture is playing the Esquire means that it is a good one. If it is a comedy, the ads say so, simply and directly. If it has music, the ads will tell the reader that this particular picture is a "comedy with music." Recently an ad carried the line "Fun in the Benchley Manner." In a few words, that ad said that the picture was slightly silly, but gay and witty. In one ad, the bulk of the space was taken up with a figure of Cupid, his bow and arrow lying on the ground, planting a sound foot in the rear of a very much excited young lady. Could anything more graphically describe the fact that here was a light comedy romance? The picture "Joy of Living," and the figure in the ad did more to sell the picture than anything else.

In addition, the Esquire puts out a weekly newsmagazine which is circulated in the hotels in the vicinity. Because the theatre is the center of the community, and also to defray part of the cost, merchant ads are carried in this magazine. These ads, however are held down to a minimum space, and the bulk of the magazine is taken up with stories of pictures coming to the theatre, and intimate bits of news about the Esquire.

The standard of advertising set at the Esquire is contained in the rules followed by the advertising man. Never be loud. Never be crude. Always be neat, and try to be clever. Keep the ads simple. Credit the reader with the intelligence to select his own entertainment. Do not sell him too hard, and he will sell himself.

This same standard prevails in everything about the theatre, and is ably set forth by a simple card on the ushers' bulletin board. Taken from one of the closing quotations of the "The Esquire Hour," it reads . . . "Of all the things you wear, your expression is the most important. Cultivate gentility of expression and manner."

Hotel Register Slant Sells "Hollywood Hotel"

Harold Ralston, Granada Theatre, Santa Barbara, Cal. for "Hollywood Hotel" set up a lobby display consisting of hotel register in which partons were invited to sign their names and addresses on perforated sheets. These were then cut apart after each signature and deposited in box. At the end of day ten names were picked at random and to these guest tickets were mailed. Next to desk for display purposes was a rack of time tables and group of luggage each of which carried star names.

For "Yank at Oxford" crew of eight college boys and girls covered town, hitting stores and business establishments with giant autograph book in which folks were invited to sign their name under message directed to Robert Taylor. Book was displayed in lobby during run and later mailed to the star in Hollywood.

Various Slants Aid "Buccaneer"

To sell "The Buccaneer" at the Ginter Theatre, Richmond, Va., Harold Lucas, planted pirate gold doubloons in store window next to theatre with tiein card explaining that the first 100 kids to attend matinee show would receive one. Imprinted pirate hats were also distributed to kids three days ahead of opening, in addition to heralds at nearby schools.

Tieup was also effected whereby 2,500 heralds were inserted in Liberty magazines, lucky number paper bags were planted in five and tens, each store carrying tiein window streamers and through cooperation of telephone company, picture plug was given to each subscriber calling for correct time.

River Canoes Exploit "Wonderful Time"

Several unique stunts were used by Lew Carroll, Senate Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., for his campaign on "Having Wonderful Time" including a procession of 25 canoes on the river which carried picture billing.

Candid cameraman made the rounds and after each pose his assistant stepped forth and handed persons photographed a large sign with theatre copy. 50 candid shots were posted on a 40 by 60 in the lobby and persons identifying themselves were given guest tickets.

Windows carrying vacation merchandise were posted with "Having Wonderful Time" accessories and 1,000 postcards were mailed from Atlantic City to local citizens. Advance newspaper advertising campaign consisted of teaser post cards and prior to and during the engagements, production benefited from six radio plugs and the distribution of 5000 jumbo heralds.

Prytz Ties "Snow White" To Local Beaux Arts Ball

Highlight of Roy Prytz's "Snow White" campaign at the Granada, Duluth, Minn., was tieup with local Beaux Arts Ball, outstanding social event of the year, 40 by 60 paintings were planted in main body of the hotel and 24's spotted around the ballroom. The Mayor declared a "Snow White" week and posed with the manager for publicity purposes. Schools used the picture as semester project and principals announced playdates through public address systems.

Underprivileged children were invited to attend special showing, special windows, counter and department tieups were effected in leading stores and baker featured a "Snow White" cake during run of picture.

Parking Signs Plug "Mad About Music"

Spotted strategically about town by Sam De Fazio, Harris Liberty Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., were parking signs reading "Don't be mad because there's no parking here; go to the Harris Liberty and enjoy 'Mad About Music.'" Sam tied up local confectioner for candy giveaway to children on opening day, merchant carrying card in window to the effect that the two sweetest things in Pittsburgh were Deanna Durbin in her current picture and his candy.

Entire fleet of dairy company trucks were bannered with picture copy and oversize cut-out head of the star. Through tieup effected with Station WWSW, autographed photos of Deanna were offered gratis to all applying for them and chain druggist plugged a Durbin sundae at soda fountain.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

"Gone With the Wind" Finally Goes to M-G-M

David Oliver Selznick has finally found a place of distribution for his long-contemplated "Gone with the Wind"—at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. But he has yet to find a "Scarlett O'Hara." His search for both has been running on and on down through the months, with unusually large newspaper attention attendant thereto.

The signing of the contract was announced in statements issued by John Hay Whitney, chairman of the board of Selznick International, and Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's.

Despite the deal for distribution of "Gone With the Wind," Selznick International is expected to continue as a production associate of United Artists. That the Selznick organization itself regards the MGM deal only as a temporary separation from United Artists was made apparent by remarks of Selznick officials, indicating the company is completely satisfied with the releasing terms available to it from United Artists.

Production of "Gone With the Wind" is scheduled to start between November 15th and January 1st. Clark Gable will play the role of Rhett Butler and the film will be produced at the Selznick Studios in Culver City. George Cukor will direct and, according to the announcement, Sidney Howard, has completed the script.

In his statement, Mr. Whitney said: "Mr. Selznick has felt all along that Clark Gable was the one and only 'people's choice' to play the part of Rhett Butler, and only through an arrangement with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, to whom Mr. Gable is exclusively under contract, would we have been able to make 'Gone With the Wind' as the world wants to see it. Scarlett O'Hara will be found and will be at work before the year is out, and all of the other parts will immediately be assigned. I am happy our negotiations with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have resulted satisfactorily despite the delay and that Selznick International can now go forward on its biggest production venture with all necessary speed."

Mr. Schenck said: "I am proud that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be the distributor for the most greatly discussed and widely loved story of recent years. I am confident that the Selznick production of 'Gone With the Wind' will find David O. Selznick at the highest point of his career and that the picture will exceed even its expectations."

In San Francisco this week, Mary Pickford disclosed that Mr. Selznick hopes to produce a picture for United Artists with her in the leading role. Miss Pickford said she expects to return to pictures but that she is having a difficult time finding the "right" stories.

Sol Lesser, head of Principal Pictures, this week opened negotiations for release of one or more pictures through United Artists. Signing five-year-old Irene Dare, skating star, to a long term contract, Mr. Lesser ordered preparation of the adaptation of "Hans Brinker, or the Silver Skates" and discussed the possibility of UA release with Samuel Goldwyn.

Races Through Holiday Traffic; Saves Sun. Show

SAN JOSE, CAL.—"On a recent Sunday afternoon, during peak show hours, with over 1200 in the audience at the Victory Theatre, the sound stopped during the last reel of the feature film," declared Ray R. Kelsall, district manager of the San Jose Amusement Co., Inc.

"Although Sunday traffic in San Jose is heavy, the Altec Inspector, J. W. Gilroy, actually got to my theatre in five minutes. He found a line fuse to the amplifier was constantly blowing, and at once installed his emergency amplifier. This took five minutes and the show was resumed without loss of a single patron.

"Gilroy located a defective insulation in an obscure place that was causing arcing to the transformer. He worked until 1 A.M., and got the regular amplifier operating properly."

No matter what type or model your sound equipment is, the Altec Service Inspector is equipped by training and experience to make it deliver peak performance at all times.

Four Companies
Ask Injunction

The Peoples Theaters of Alabama, Inc. and Walter J. Brackin, operating a motion picture house at Elba, Ala., were named in a petition filed at Montgomery in U. S. district court by four film producing or film distributing companies this week. The petitioners sought an order to restrain by injunction the defendants from using copyrighted films without licenses from the plaintiffs, and also sought damages for several alleged infringements of copyright laws.

The complaint charged the Elba Theatre at Elba with showing films for longer periods than contracted for, and urged damages of not less than $250 for each violation. The petitioners were: RKO Pictures, Inc.; the 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation and 20th Century-Fox Distributing Corporation; Paramount Pictures, Inc., and the Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, Inc.; Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and the Vitaphone and Vitagraph Company. None of the companies signing the petition are incorporated in Alabama.

Sue Ritz Brothers

Suit for $150,000 damages was filed this week against Harry, Al and Jimmy Ritz in New York supreme court by Arthur Silber. The plaintiff, who sued the defendants under their original name, Joachim, charged breach of an alleged contract made on March 12, 1936, whereby he was appointed exclusive agent for the Ritz Brothers in booking motion picture roles and other engagements on the coast at a 10 per cent commission. Mr. Silber claimed that several days after the contract was made he was wrongfully discharged and that his damages for loss of earnings amounted to $150,000.

Loses Point in Suit

New York Supreme Court Justice Kenneth O'Brien this week overruled the objections of Universal Pictures Corporation, the defendant in a $650,000 breach of contract suit brought by John D. Tippet, Inc., to the procedure adopted by the plaintiff in conducting an examination before trial of Universal and ordered the latter to produce all books and records which refer to all alleged contract, and to allow them to be introduced into evidence. Justice O'Brien further ordered Universal to answer all questions bearing upon its alleged refusal to carry out the terms of the contract.

Dies; President

Mr. Drake was born in Waltham, Mass. After attending the Waltham Public Schools, he was enrolled at Harvard from 1899 to 1902, going from there to the United States Naval Academy, where he stood second in his class and was graduated in 1906. He entered Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1908 and received an M.S. Degree there in 1911.

Mr. Drake served in the Navy from 1902 to 1919, resigning the rank of Commander to accept a position as Works Manager of the Baltimore Shipbuilding and Drydock Company. In 1924 he joined the Western Electric Company as Assistant Operating Superintendent at that Company's Kearny Works. Later he was made Operating Manager of the Commercial Department of Western Electric.

Elected in 1937

He joined Electrical Research Products upon the formation of that company in 1927, and about a year later was made a vice president. In 1936 he was named executive vice president and in 1937 was elected president.

Funeral services were held Friday in the chapel of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth Avenue at 90th Street, New York.

There were no honorary pallbearers for the services, but among those who paid their respects were E. S. Bloom, president of Western Electric; John E. Otterson, former president of ERPI; D. C. Collins, ERPI executive vice-president; H. G. Knox, ERPI; Earle W. Hammons, president of Educational; Samuel Spring, film attorney; L. W. Conrow, president of Altec Service Corporation; Bert Sanford, Stanley Hand, Ed Walters, Harry Bessey, George Carrington and E. J. Moriarity.

Collins to Head Company

D. C. Collins, executive vice-president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., is slated to be elected president of the company at the September meeting of the board to succeed the late Whitford Drake as head of ERPI.

Mr. Collins has been associated with ERPI in various executive positions for about 10 years and prior to that was with Western Electric. He was elected executive vice-president of ERPI early in 1937 and has served as active head of the company since last May, when Mr. Drake was taken ill. Mr. Collins is ERPI's representative on the board of directors of Universal Pictures.

The Bluebook School

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 124

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

Bluebook School Question No. 124 was: (A) Give, briefly, the ten points you consider as of highest importance in the care of motor-generator sets.

This question was answered acceptably by the following: S. Evans and C. Rau; J. R. Prater; G. E. Doe; L. Cimikoski; R. and K. Wells; O. H. Schmidt; J. A. Zachritz; W. E. Limmroth; E. H. Toedte; L. H. Kelley; M. and J. Devoy; L. Johnson; C. L. Horn; Marion B. Stout; G. Burdis; W. Scheneman; R. E. Lee; S. Hewitt; P. E. Shell; D. and W. Porter; H. A. Ames and F. E. Dorp; E. Lomax; P. and L. Felt; L. E. Dodson and H. H. Todd; P. Slobodny; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; E. and F. Wentworth; T. W. Redhouse; H. Edwards; W. Jones and T. L. Ward; G. L. Goss; M. A. Cordell and L. B. Daniels; S. E. Billings; S. True; L. F. and G. Brown; B. and M. Walker; F. W. Brandenburg; B. B. Kent; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; W. B. Hunter; L. A. Beachwood and M. F. Robinson; K. Irwin; G. Thompson; A. C. Greene; T. S. Anderson; S. L. Maxwell; E. Exline; C. H. Lowrie; R. M. Schnider; L. Day; H. Bunker; H. J. Benjamin; K. L. Brant; D. N. Logman; H. T. Randolph; R. Davis and M. F. Brown; M. Samuels and W. R. Allen; H. T. Plum and D. A. Shea; D. R. Spencer; W. R. Matthews and J. R. Davidson; R. R. Robbins and W. Winkler; L. D. Tomlinson; M. D. McGuire; L. and F. Saylor; S. T. Logan; A. and B. Richardson; W. V. Henderson; H. M. Jackson and B. L. Morris; B. L. Kent; K. K. Robinson and R. E. Bullard; E. Davis; L. M. Richardson; T. and W. Turk; R. Smith and B. L. Odeon; C. Umphrey; M. Samuels and P. L. Goldstein; W. S. Maxwell; A. W. Baxter and J. M. Kelner; W. R. Davis; H. T. Watkins and N. S. Reid; B. B. Hornstein and R. R. Jacobs; G. L. Baxter; W. B. Hennessy; S. T. Adams.

C. L. Horn says, "(1) Maintain scrupulous cleanliness of the entire machine and its surroundings. (2) Keep both motor and generator properly lubricated with proper kind and grade of lubricant. (3) Use proper size and kind of brushes. (4) See to it that brushes fit their holders properly and that they have correct pressure. (5) Make sure the armature does not become unbalanced and that it is free from dust, etc. (6) Provide adequate ventilation of the room. (7) Maintain proper under-cut of mica insulation between commutator bars. (8) Do not overload generator in excess of ten per cent except for least possible time at changeover. (9) Maintain proper generator yoke setting. (10) At frequent intervals check for bearing wear. (11—for good measure) If the machine be of the horizontal type, keep same perfectly level so that the armature will have proper end play."

Because the reply of Marion B. Stout comes from the far north (Alaska) I will use it, though I shall take the liberty of altering some of his answers as to wording, not, however, changing his meaning, as I understand it, in any degree. He says:

"(1) Keep all brushes and their holders clean and free from copper dust. (2) Clean commutator when necessary, using No. 00 sandpaper. Under no circumstances use emery paper. (3) Maintain proper oil level in bearings, being sure the drainage valves do not leak or

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 130

(A) Are carbons made in all lengths required for projection work?

(B) What precautions should be taken when a theatre proposes changing the brand of carbon being used?

(C) In general terms, describe the process of carbon manufacture.

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answers to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

loosen up under vibration. (4) Keep the entire machine and its surroundings clean, permitting no deposits of copper or other dust or oil. (5) Make frequent observations of watt or ammeter, making sure the normal load is not exceeded. Overload may cause a burned coil or other trouble. (6) Be sure the brush yoke is set exactly right and kept that way. (7) From time to time make careful inspection of all connections, making sure they are tight and their contact surface not corroded. (8) At all times be certain no bearing is not developing excessive temperature. (9) Be certain the brushes contact the commutator at correct pressure, neither too much nor too little. (10) Periodically inspect for high or low commutator bars and proper armature balance. (11) Make sure the room is neither too hot nor too damp for such a set. (12) Above all things, when anything goes wrong with the set during a show and you do not remain perfectly cool, check your own head and ascertain why a temporary overload throws you off balance."

Incidentally, that last reads well, Brother Stout. Many a small trouble has developed into a great big one, merely because the projectionist got excited, "flew off the handle" and gummed up the works by so doing.

William Choeneman says, "(1) Keeping proper grade of clean oil at proper level in the oil wells. (2) Making sure bearings not worn sufficiently to throw armature too much out of center. (3) Maintaining commutator in good condition in all respects. (4) Using proper kind and grade of brushes that fit their holders properly and contact commutator with proper pressure. (5) Checking space between armature and pole pieces. (6) Keeping commutator mica properly undercut and slots thus formed clear of dust and dirt. (7) Proper setting of yoke, to the end that sparking be reduced as much as possible. (8) Frequent observations of temperature of set. (9) Proper size of both supply and distribution conductors, to the end that unnecessary waste of power be avoided. (10) Periodic inspection of all connections as to tightness of same and freedom from corrosion of contact surfaces."

And last, but by no means least, J. R. Prater says: "Briefly, the ten points I consider of highest importance in the care of motor-generator sets are: (1) Cleanliness throughout. (2) Enough but not excessive lubrication with the type and grade of oil or grease recommended by the manufacturer. (3) The use of exactly the size and kind of brush recommended by the manufacturer, each brush properly fitted to its holder and to the commutator, and adjusted to a pressure of between 1.25 and 1.50 pounds per square inch of contact area. (4) Commutator surface kept clean, smooth, round and free from high or low spots; very slightly lubricated if necessary. Bars replaced when worn too thin to carry their load without heating. (5) Mica between commutator bars kept undercut from 1/32 to 3/64 of an inch, slots kept free from all foreign material. (6) Sparking eliminated, or at least reduced to a minimum. (7) All switches and connections in entire motor and generator circuits including soldered connections between commutator bars and armature coils kept tight and electrically perfect. (8) All wiring and associated apparatus of sufficient capacity to carry its load without excessive resistance. (9) Entire set kept level so there will be about 3/16-inch or more free end play or 'float' of armature shaft in sleeve-bearing sets. If motor and generator are separate units, their shafts must be kept in perfect alignment. (10) Adequate ventilation. Operating temperature of set or any part thereof must never be allowed to exceed the allowable maximum of 90 degrees Centigrade, or 194 degrees Fahrenheit."

"Kameragraph," New Device Appears at N. Y. Theatre

The William Yoost Circuit last Thursday introduced "Kameragraph," a new attraction, at their Chaloner theatre in New York. Kameragraph is an automatic camera designed like a motion picture camera with tripod and magazine reels which is placed in the lobby to photograph patrons as they enter through a special gate placed in front of the camera. The United States Premium Corporation is the distributor and according to Lester Tobias, sales manager, several independent circuits have already signed up for the new stunt.

Kameragraph is available on a run basis like any picture. Patrons who identify their photographs on the screen the following week have the privilege of selling their photograph to the theatre. Usually the manager of the theatre and the press agent are on the stage with two persons selected from the audience as judges while the photos are screened. The device is manufactured by the Kameragraph Corporation of America.

More than 150 prominent educators and leaders of patriotic organizations promised their complete cooperation to Warner Brothers in selling its series of patriotic short subjects, following a screening of several of them over the weekend at the company's Burbank studio, according to the company.

ISN'T IT TRUE!

The life-blood of this business is showmanship and your pal Leo gave film biz another shot in the arm this week. Always something new. That Trackless Train. That Travelling Studio. And now the trade press is agog with M-G-M's "Marionette Moviettes." Now starting a countrywide tour and then around the world! Marionettes enacting scenes from "Marie Antoinette" with synchronized records of the stars themselves delivering the dialogue. Thrilling to hear. Fascinating to watch. It created a traffic bedlam on blasé Broadway. Other big forthcoming attractions will be added to the repertoire as it proceeds on its way.

"MARIE" A SOLID HIT!

What a whale of an attraction to open the season with! It's a house-packer, a critic-charmer, A HOLD-OVER EVERYWHERE! Smacked across with high-powered showmanship.

Another big stunt for "Marie" is clicking lustily. It's the "MARIE ANTOINETTE FREE TRIP TO FRANCE CONTEST." More than 200 big-time, big-city papers are already running it, with 3000 more newspapers actually lined up to start!

Ten free round-trips to ooh-la-la Paree, with exhibitors participating in addition to the public. That means you!

A great attraction plus high-powered promotion is an unbeatable combination. And the results prove it.

It's a pet of a show and showmen have a pet name for it.

Affectionately they're saying: "SWEET MARIE!"

EXHIBITION'S DAY

COGNIZANT of its special responsibility to the exhibitor and the service of the retail machine of the screen, MOTION PICTURE HERALD, in this issue, devotes particular attention to the drive known as "The Greatest Year" campaign.

In this endeavour the motion picture industry has gone to work for itself, in pleasant contrast with many of the somewhat recent manifestations of movement in which it was fighting itself in various internecine strifes.

Most significant in these days of stress and change, and impending new regulative forces, is the accent now, in this drive, being placed on the functions of the retailer, the showman who stands at the end of the line where the product goes out and the revenues come in.

For many years, too many years, Production has said to Distribution, "Here it is—you tell 'em to come and get it." Once that position was sound because it worked. But the rise of competitive amusements, the formation of new shopping habits among the customers, have conspired to bring about, to compel in fact, recognition of the truth that nowadays the motion picture has to be sold, not merely announced, that success can be had only through the box office, that, while the public may hear and read about Hollywood, the sales are as local as a hamburger sandwich. The answer and the results are to be had only at the theatre on Main Street, and selling the pictures has in the end to be a home-town job.

THE contention that "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment" can be well supported, but the customers do not wait for analytical consideration of the subject. They go where the stimulus in front of them leads. That has to pertain precisely to a location on a street, a box office.

IN the news pages of this issue will be found account of current reaction to and future aspects of the "Greatest Year" campaign. The activities of the field are reported, with special accent and detail in an assembly of promotional activities by Mr. A-Mike Vogel and his Roundtablers. Particular interest, too, attaches to a setting down of fact and promises and prospects on the Hollywood product from the hand of Mr. William R. Weaver, Hollywood editor. It appears that Mr. Weaver finds for this coming product a spectacular predominance of American themes and locales. This indicates acute address to the customers at home.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY has been digging up the Agora, the marketplace of ancient Athens, for eight years. The most interesting discovery has just come to light. It seems that a potsherd of the fifth century B.C. bears a drawing of a cockeyed satyr, which a professor of archaeology considers probably "due to the fuddled imagination of an inebriated brain". In our opinion, after twenty-four centuries of mornings—after it is time to forgive and forget. Just suppose that some day some one digs up Princeton and finds a mess of undergraduate pocket flasks circa 1927.

IT looks like we might be in for more trouble in film technique. The scientists have found that sound affects the visibility of colors. On the orange side of red, the more the noise the less you see, but the better you can see blue and green. The ability to see red, it is reported, is not affected. The report is not to be considered prejudiced with respect to red because it comes from Moscow. P. A. Yakolev of the Helmholtz Institute of Ophthalmology tells about it in the Journal of the Optical Society of America.

THE last Congress appears to have considered some 17,000 measures and to have enacted something more than 1,700 of them. Once upon a time a famous pundit said, "I care not who writes a nation's laws if I may write its songs." Just now we seem to need more and better song writers.

Q Reviewers are discovering that in "While New York Sleeps" Mr. Michael Whalen makes his role of "Barney Callaghan" gentlemanly, even though a newspaper reporter. And yet we read so much about demands for hairy-chested realism on the screen.

THE warden of Alcatraz, Mr. James A. Johnston, at a conference of prison officials in Springfield, Missouri, remarked the other day that important among the treatments of notorious convicts is the cutting off of their publicity. That method works elsewhere, too.

EDUCATIONAL

WE formally present here a special item for the scrapbook of the Motion Picture Research Council, an item delivered to the daily papers by the Associated Press:

DAYTON, Ohio, Aug. 22 (A.P.).—The crime movie Steve Martin saw stood him in good stead. On the way from the theatre a robber thrust a gun through the window of his car. Recalling the tactics of the film hero, Martin put up his hands, then brought one down sharply on the man's wrist. The gun fell to the floor of the car and the robber fled down an alley.

This account will not appear in a new edition of "Our Movie Made Children".

OFFICIALLY summer has ended with the Labour Day twilight in which this is written. The swallows have gone south. The crows are assembling in the woodlands of our valley for their autumn caucuses. Your editor's garden is full of weeds and unfulfilled promises of the seedsmen's catalogues of spring. But the swing of the seasons has been a boon to one of the neighbors. With the migrations, Mr. Deems Taylor of high musical fame has been able to come home. He fled to Europe many weeks ago because an orange and black oriole, nesting outside his chamber door, flatted the last note of his mating song, and appeared to be planning to mate all summer.

Fanfare

Preceded by proclamations by Governors and Mayors, by parades and a myriad of exploitation activities, the industry sent the message of the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign to the public across the land. The machinery for the drive, carefully planned and erected during the last few weeks, slipped into high gear easily and efficiently and reports from the field immediately began to show results sufficient to support the prediction that the final count at the end of December will exceed previous expectations. Functioning in synchronization were the newspaper advertising campaign, the $250,000 Movie Quiz contest, exploitation in the field conducted by regional committees and individual exhibitors, and Hollywood with its production line moving swiftly and toward new high quality.

First Returns

The interest of the public, aroused by the first barrage of advertising and exploitation which marked the opening of the campaign was reflected in greatly increased attendance at participating theatres, particularly over the holiday weekend. Equally encouraging were reports of civic, newspaper and mercantile enthusiasm for the industry's effort and of corresponding cooperation in every phase of the drive. Municipal officials issued proclamations, newspapers contributed auxiliary advertisements and publicity, and merchants joined freely with tie-ins. One measure of public acceptance was the announcement by campaign headquarters that 20,000,000 contest booklets were distributed in the first week.

Product

Behind the drums of the industry drive is a Hollywood schedule of forthcoming product, outstanding in its promise of quality and unusual in several aspects. Action, historical and present-day in addition to a full quota of the ever present ridin' and shootin' western, will predominate, present programs indicate. Additionally a survey of the plans indicates that the geographical settings of the product when they are not concerned with the canvas of history will be confined largely to these United States. Not forgotten will be musicals, a department spurred by the present success of several outstanding examples, and comedies, also exemplified profitably by opening pictures of the season.

City by City

Regional committees which began their work several weeks ago with the organization of independent exhibitors in the field moved into the second phase of their activity with the coordination in their territories of exploitation activities which in most cases took the form of general promotion. Individual exhibitors and circuits joined enthusiastically with greatly expanded advertising appropriations. In most cities the favorite opening activities were parades and proclamations.

A city by city resume of committee and exhibitor activities starts on page 13.

Mexican Shutdown

Intervention of President Lazaro Cardenas was sought this week by the motion picture industry in Mexico to settle a renewal of the dispute between the Federation of Film Workers and the National Union of Studio Workers which resulted in the suspension of activities at 38 studios. A one-day strike was called against the Cine Palacio, first run house in Mexico City, when it attempted to show a Mexican-made film. The Federation enforced a boycott against the film, claiming it was made under unfair labor conditions. The new trouble came as a surprise because the Confederation of Mexican Workers, the country's strongest labor organization, only recently brought apparent peace to the film labor situation.

Exploitation

A vital part of the drive has been and will continue to be the exploitation methods employed by the exhibitor to insure his theatre's full share in the benefits of the drive. An elaborate press book issued by the national campaign committee and available to all exhibitors outlines a number of possibilities and lists accessories useful in carrying them out, but the success of the campaign in each neighborhood will depend, as always, to a great extent on the ingenuity and showmanship of the theatre operator.

The contents of the press book, interesting variations on the methods it suggests as actually employed by men in the field, and new leads for the exhibitor willing to devote full interest to showmanship are explained and elaborated by A-Mike Vogel, chairman of the Managers' Round Table, starting on page 28.

Not on Film Houses

Regulations issued by the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau under the amendment to the admission tax incorporated in the last revenue act, providing that the tax shall be assessed upon the price at which tickets are actually sold rather than the prices printed thereon, will not apply to motion picture houses.

The amendment was adopted at the request of the legitimate theatre owners, who explained that frequently, to give their shows a start or to keep them open, it was necessary to cut prices. When prices were cut, however, the tickets originally ordered, showing the prices it had been planned to get, were used, and the Treasury had always insisted that the theatre collect and account for the tax on the basis of the printed price.

The change in the law was hedged about with restrictions designed to restrict the relief to legitimate theatres, and there was no intention to impose any changes upon application of the tax to other types of amusements, it was said in Washington.

Columbia in London

Columbia this week confirmed the tentative British production plan announced by Joseph A. McConville, foreign manager, upon his return to the United States from Europe. A minimum of three quota productions will be made at the Denham studios under the supervision of Irving Asher at a cost of over $1,000,000.

Laurence Olivier and Ralph Richardson have been signed for the male roles in the first story, "Q Planes," an original by Brock Williams, Jack Wittingham and Arthur Limperiss. J. P. Priestly is expected to write the original story for the second production.

Sound License

License to manufacture devices for the application of the photoelectric cell under the Radtke patent controlled by the Polytechnic Development Corporation, headed by Leonard Day, has been issued to the International Projector Corporation, manufacturers of Simplex projection and sound reproduction equipment.

At the same time, rights to manufacture under certain other patents held by the Polytechnic company were acquired by International. These include Nakken patents applying to various connecting and transmission appliances, and also patents assigned to Polytechnic on intermittent movement design, including that of a cushioned Geneva star.

With manufacturing rights under RCA and Western Electric patents previously acquired, International Projector's new acquisition effects a comprehensive "pooling" in one of the industry's oldest equipment manufacturers, of the sound patents which for years were the subject of bitter litigation.

In confirming the grant to International Projector, Mr. Day stated the opinion that their having taken out licenses under the Radtke and Nakken patents, added to similar action by RCA early this year, "virtually establishes that these patents are basic in sound manufacture."

$100,000 Was Paid to Bioff by Producers, Labor Board Is Told

Charging that major studios and the Association of Motion Picture Producers have obtained control of four Hollywood IATSE locals (Photographers' 659, Laboratory Workers' 583, Sound Technicians' 695 and Studio Technicians' 37) by "gifts, donations, concessions and payments" to William Bioff, personal representative of George Browne, Jeff Kibre, calling himself chairman of the Motion Picture Technicians committee, on Wednesday filed a complaint with the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board.

The complaint as it was presented contained the specific charge that "the producers caused to be paid to William Bioff $100,000 on June 23, 1937, for the purpose of bringing the said four locals of the IATSE and their membership under the direct control and dominance of the producers and the Association." Claiming violation of the Wagner act by the producers in that studio employees were forced into the IATSE locals following such agreement between them and the International leaders, the complaint specified that by the terms of the said agreement "no local autonomy would be granted the four locals, all of said locals of that date being suspended and governed by Mr. Browne and Mr. Bioff" and that in fact such local autonomy had been suspended.

The complaint closed with the declaration that "since January 2, 1936, the Association and the studios have simulated the process of collective bargaining by purporting to deal with Browne and Bioff."

Newsreels Suppressed

Pennsylvania authorities, handling the investigation of the death of four convicts in the "steam cells" of Holmesburg Prison, this week took drastic action to suppress newsreel pictures taken on the story, when they held J. Dennis Welsh, cameraman of Fox Movietone, and confiscated film of News of the Day. Mr. Welsh was held until he surrendered the negative film he had shot within the prison.

Attorneys for MGM, distributor of News of the Day, went into Judge Gerald F. Flood's court to argue against an injunction prohibiting the showing of the films while officials of the state department of welfare were inspecting the cell blocks. The film was confiscated by order of John A. Boyle, assistant district attorney. It was shown Tuesday in the MGM projection room in Philadelphia, with state officials and Judges Bok and Flood in attendance. The judges proposed the press be admitted but Mr. Boyle refused.

The film shows the exterior of "Klondike," the cell's super-radiation system and the doctor making tests on a guinea pig after exposure to the "heat."

Italian Pact

Italy will denounce the Italian-United States film agreement made in 1936 and will reduce the quota on American films from 250 annually to 150 per year, according to reliable sources in Rome, Joseph D. Ravotto, MOTION PICTURE HERALD correspondent, cabled Tuesday.

The failure of the Italian government to assign quotas for the final quarter of 1938 is seen as further confirmation of Italy's plan to amend the present quota situation. The assignments were supposed to have been made September 1st, but it is generally expected that no action will be taken for at least two weeks. In the meantime, foreign distributors, including American film companies, are prohibited from importing any additional films.

Distribution officials in New York City regarded as likely the Rome report of a contemplated quota reduction. They admitted having heard rumors of some such plan but explained that no official communication had been received from Italy recording any changes in the present agreement.

BOX OFFICES BENEFIT WITH CAMPAIGN OPENING

Theatres Participating in "Greatest Year" Report Increased Attendance; 150 Mayors and Governors Issue Proclamations

Nationwide interest in the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign, created last week by the first of a series of a dozen advertisements in 2,000 daily newspapers, mounted this week as the industry released its second barrage of ads and as regional and local committees followed up their initial celebrations with exploitation and other activities designed to keep the drive in the public spotlight.

Reflecting the interest of the public were the reports received at campaign headquarters, telling of increased attendance at participating theatres throughout the country. The National newspaper advertising and the starting of the $250,000 "Movie Quiz" contest were looked upon almost unanimously as major reasons for larger box office grosses than expected even for the Labor Day weekend.

Newspapers Cooperate

Early reports to the campaign headquarters also indicated that newspapers in all territories were cooperating liberally and enthusiastically, giving space in both the news and the editorial columns.

Civic cooperation also has been practically unanimous, more than 150 mayors issuing proclamations, in addition to the issuance of statements by several governors.

Free advertisements, matching the regular ads issued through the campaign organization, appeared in more than a score of newspapers, following the lead of the Milwaukee Sentinel full page contributed ad.

Regarded by campaign officials as typical of the attention given to the drive by newspapers was an eight-page spread, in color, which appeared Sunday in the Tribune-Telegram, Salt Lake City.

Distribution of the 32-page "Movie Quiz" booklets, reports to the campaign headquarters revealed, was close to 20,000,000 in the first week of the drive.

By Wednesday independent exhibitors' $250,000 quota was oversubscribed by almost $25,000. Affiliated circuits are pledged to match the independents' contributions dollar for dollar.

Restoring Showmanship Spirit

George J. Schaefer, executive chairman of the campaign committee, expressed satisfaction over the immediate results of the drive, declaring that it already has demonstrated its value to the industry.

"It has restored the spirit of showmanship to the industry," Mr. Schaefer said. "It has aroused a too long latent enthusiasm, and a spirit of cooperation that fully justifies the labor and energy and untiring devotion of the hundreds of my co-workers whose devotion to their duties I deeply appreciate."

"For my own part, witnessing the tre-

BROADWAY GROSSES SHOW INCREASES

Grosses in the first run Broadway theatres over the Labor Day weekend totaled about $200,000 with several theatres reporting the best weekend business in months. Neighborhood business was described generally as "very brisk."

At the Music Hall, playing "You Can't Take It With You," the gross for Saturday, Sunday and Monday was reported as 50 per cent better than last year's holiday weekend. A 40 per cent increase over Labor Day weekend last year was reported at the Roxy where "Alexander's Ragtime Band" was in its fifth week.

With "Boy Meets Girl," and Ben Bernie in a second week, the Strand reported its best weekend in three years; the Paramount reported almost $25,000 as the three-day gross, with the third week of "Sing You Sinners."

The Brooklyn Paramount, which dualled "Four's a Crowd," and "Bulldog Drummond in Africa," said it nearly doubled last year's holiday figure.

mendous enthusiasm behind the drive, and feeling deeply convinced of its success, I am amply repaid for such time and labor as I have given to the common cause.

"The campaign has just begun. Between now and December 31st, we will continue to drive ahead, and to reap all possible fruits from this all-industry effort."

Simultaneously with the opening of the drive, production got underway in Hollywood on "The World is Yours," an all-industry short subject for the campaign.

The picture will give flashes of virtually every player of top bracket rating in addition to a cast of five in the narrative story that holds the central theme. In the cast are Samuel Hinds of Universal; Dorothy Peterson, free lance; Anne Shirley, of RKO; Johnny Walsh, 16-year-old son of Jack Welch, theatre executive; and Charlie Grapewin, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract player.

Basin Wrangel of MGM is the director. Peter Ballbush of MGM and Gordon Jennings of Paramount are handling the montage and special effects. Frank Whitbeck is the producer, and Edward Selzer, Warner Brothers, is the casting director. The script was prepared by Herman Hoffman, MGM, and Lou Harris of Paramount.

The short subject, according to campaign officials, will get the greatest distribution of any picture ever made; it will be made available to every theatre in America.

The purposes of the campaign will be explained to an estimated 30,000,000 next Monday night when Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, speaks over the Columbia Broadcasting System network and the Canadian Broadcasting Company's facilities during the Lux Radio Theatre hour.

Beginning with the broadcasts last Sunday of the Major Bowes Capitol Family over Station WABC, and the Music Hall of the Air, over Station WJZ, both of which gave time to the drive, the programs will regularly and prominently feature the industry campaign through spot announcements spaced in their entertainment.

The Major Bowes program is carried over the Columbia network of 93 stations and the Music Hall program is broadcast over 100 stations through the National Broadcasting Company network. Arrangements for the radio notices were made through Ben Serkowitz, chairman of the Broadway Committee on the drive, and Hazel Flynn and Bessie Mack, representing W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall, and Major Bowes.

The entire "Musical Steeplechase" program of Mutual Wednesday night was on the campaign.

The National Chamber of Commerce instructed its 1,078 local chambers to cooperate.

Sixth Trailer Completed

Trailer No. 6 for use in the campaign was completed under the supervision of Monroe Greenthal of United Artists. According to the campaign committee the trailer instructs audiences how to enter the $250,000 quiz contest, explains the requirements and rules of the competition, emphasizes the fact that there are 5,404 prizes, and demonstrates by example just how to answer questions.

Ed Thorgersen did the explanatory talk with Jack Painter handling the camera work. The prints are being distributed through National Screen Service.

Western Union and Postal Telegraph completed plans this week for cooperating in the drive by displaying posters calling attention to it in all their offices throughout the country. Western Union will display a blow-up of a congratulatory telegram to the campaign directors.

Fawcett Publications, Inc., announced it is aiding the industry's campaign by including a line at the bottom of each advertising page in the November issues of the "women's group" magazines, calling attention to the drive and the contest.

Telegraphed reports of the drive obtaining favorable public response were received at campaign headquarters this week from Charles Skouras in Los Angeles; A. M. Bowles, San Francisco; H. G. Fitzgerald, Milwaukee; Rick Ricketson, Denver; Frank L. Newman, Sr., Seattle; W. R. Lynch, Miami; Myron N. Blank, Des Moines; George Zeppos, Wheeling, W. Va.; Harry L. Nace, Phoenix, Ariz.; William K. Jenkins, Atlanta; and Vincent R. McFaul, Buffalo.

CITIES USHER IN CAMPAIGN WITH MYRIAD ACTIVITIES

Proclamations by Governors and Mayors Help Showmen; Increased Attendance Re- ported from Many Localities

Weeks of intensive preparations by regional and local committees and sub-committees were climaxed this week with the actual application of a variety of exploitation activities heralding "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year."

Proclamations by governors and mayors were numerous as the country's showmen concentrated on making the public film conscious and completely aware of the drive's slogan: "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment."

An upward trend in attendance at theatres was reported as noticeable in many cities and towns as the 17-week campaign got underway. "Movie Quiz" booklets were distributed by the thousands.

Reports from various sections of the country indicated that parades ranked as a favorite among showmen striving to attract the public's attention to the industry's campaign.

Radio Used to Promote Campaign in Albany Area

Exhibitors in the Albany area included in their promotional plans the banner of North Pearl Street in the business area, the decoration of street cars and the staging of three 15-minute radio programs.

Activities in the territory were launched at a meeting in the Ten Eyck Hotel, Albany, with more than 40 representatives of circuits, independent exhibitors and distributors on hand. Harold B. Franklin, business manager for the national campaign, addressed the group, outlining the purposes of the campaign.

Si H. Fabian, president of the circuit bearing his name, presided at the session. In attendance were Harold and Earl Sliter, Ward Craig, W. T. McNeily, Peter Vourmakis, Mitchell Connery, John Gardner, Sid Dwore, Saul Ullman, Harold Lewis, Louis Buckin, Frank Shea, Harry Black, Leo Rosen, Jack Swartout, Sid Sommer, Abraham Stone, Eddie Selette, Andrew Roy, Alfred LaFlamme, Robert Rosenthal and Sam Milbert.

Fabian executives attending included Louis R. Golding, Larry Cowan and Alex Sayles, while Warner Brothers was represented by Charles A. Smakwitz and Jules Curley. Branch managers present included Ralph Pielow, Norman Ayres, Clayton Eastman, M. A. Grassgreen, Philip C. Fox, Gene Vogel, Bernie Kranze.

Co-chairmen for the region were selected by Mr. Fabian and are Meyer Schine, M. J. Kallet, William A. Smalley, Moe A. Silver, Louis R. Golding and Phil Fox. Mr. Silver is serving as treasurer, Mr. Golding as secretary, and Mr. Fox is handling distribution.

Also named as members of Mr. Fabian's general committee are William Benton, John Gardner, Harold Lewis, Ralph Pielow, Bernie Kranze, Clayton Eastman, M. A. Grassgreen and Norman Ayres.

Previously 17 Warner circuit managers met in Albany with Joseph Bernhard, general man-

District managers and executives of the Schine Enterprises, Inc., indorsed the campaign at their annual convention in Gloversville. The drive is proof that producers are going to cooperate more fully with exhibitors throughout the country, Louis W. Schine, executive director of the circuit, declared.

Guests at the convention included Ned E. Depinet, J. R. Grainger, A. W. Smith, Jr.,

Theatre and Exchange Staffs March in Atlanta Parade

"Motion Pictures Greatest Year" was ushered in by Atlanta showmen with a downtown parade in which hundreds of employees of the city's motion picture theatres and exchanges took part. Eleven theatres were represented in the parade.

Plans for making the campaign a success were drafted at a one-day meeting presided over by William K. Jenkins, vice-president and general manager of Lucas and Jenkins, Inc. A total of 250 delegates were registered for the session. Speakers included Mr. Jenkins, O. C. Lam, of Rome, Ga.; Roy Martin of Columbus, Ga., and Robert Mochri, of Atlanta.

Canadian Exhibitors Pledge More Than $30,000

A 10,000-mile tour of Canada by a national committee for the Dominion resulted in pledges of more than $30,000 being made to the industry's advertising campaign.

On the tour, during which regional and local committees were organized, were J. J. Fitzgibbons, Famous Players Canadian, chairman; H. M. Masters, United Artists; John A. Cooper, Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors; L. M. Devaney, RKO Distributing Corporation, and N. A. Taylor, Independent Theatres Association.

Enthusiastic Cooperation Reported in Cincinnati

Enthusiastic cooperation from exhibitors in the Cincinnati trade territory, which embraces Columbus, O., and intervening points, as well as situations in portions of Kentucky, West Virginia and Indiana, was reported by Maurice White, regional chairman of the industry's drive.

At an early meeting unanimous support and financial pledges of 10 cents per seat were voted by Arthur M. Frudenberg, division manager RKO Midwest; Mr. White, president of United Theatres; F. W. Huss, Jr., president of Associated Theatres; Tracy Barham, general manager of Southio Theatres, Inc.; and approximately 100 independent exhibitors, branch managers, salesmen and bookers.

An appeal to leading publishers throughout the State of Ohio to cooperate in the drive was forwarded by the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. In the official communication it was pointed out that the film industry is the first to spend money for recovery. Such bold, aggressive action, the communication continued, will serve as the spark which will touch off the desire of other businesses to put idle dollars back to work.

Loew-Poli Houses Sponsor Motor Cavalcade

The proclamations by the governors of Massachusetts and Connecticut and the mayors of various cities, parades and a motor cavalcade covering all Loew-Poli towns featured the opening of the industry's drive in New England.

Headed by a large float, the motor cavalcade started in Waterbury, August 27th, stopped on succeeding days in Bridgeport, New Haven, Meriden, Hartford, Springfield and Worcester. A special assignment of Connecticut state police escorted the procession along the route, and, in addition, there were city police escorts in all the towns. The local parades included from three to six bands, four girls astride horses, ushers in uniform with banners, clowns, automobiles and floats, with a calliope bringing up the year.

The large float remained for a day in front of the theatres with a "man in the street" broadcast direct from the display interviewing passersby on questions relative to the "Movie Quiz" contest and the drive.

In cooperation with Chambers of Commerce throughout the territory, merchants decorated their store fronts and buildings.

An angel food cake was mailed to newspaper editors, film critics and city and state officials with a card inserted reading, "Cut yourself a piece of cake and help us celebrate Motion Pictures' Greatest Year."

The day the float visited the theatres, an 18-page album was given away by the thousands. Each week patrons will receive a still of a star to put in the book and at the end of the campaign the album will be filled.

Approximately 200 New England theatres had enrolled by the time the drive officially opened last week. The circuit of Nathan Yamins, Allied president, was among those signed. Eighty-nine Mullin and Pinanski theatres are participating.

Other cooperating circuits include Warner Brothers, Maine and New Hampshire, Loew's, Western Massachusetts, Louis Gordon, Cohen Brothers, Loew's-Poli, and Phil Smith.

Although there was no parade in Boston because of the narrowness of the streets, there was excellent newspaper and political cooperation and the first-run theatres in Boston reported a heavy demand for the "Quiz" booklets.

M. L. Levenson is chairman of the Boston committee and serving with him are Martin Mullin, Harold Stoneman, George Ramsdell,

Newspapers Publish Governor's Statement

Seattle and the state of Washington inaugurated the motion picture campaign with an official proclamation by Clarence D. Martin, governor. The proclamation was published in a majority of the state's newspapers.

In Seattle, a downtown street parade, participated in by all Seattle theatres, was staged and the first few days of the campaign indicated an unusual amount of interest on the part of the public, according to theatre managers.

The governor's proclamation stated:

"I am glad to urge the people of our state to participate in fullest measure in the fall celebration and presentation of pictures which will be shown in theatres to make this motion pictures' greatest year.

"For years the motion picture has played an important part in American life. It has widened the horizon of the average citizen and has given him a broader concept of living conditions in all walks of life and all parts of the world.

"The motion picture has provided an emotional outlet for countless millions and has placed a fine, educational entertainment within the reach of most persons."

WHAT SHOWMEN ARE DOING ON CAMPAIGN

Theatremen, Seeking to Get Best Box Office Results of 17 Weeks' Drive, Are Laying Out Plans as Far in Advance as Possible; Wealth of Material in Two Pressbooks Issued by Committee Found Adaptable to Local Usage

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Chairman, Managers' Round Table

SINCE the life of the Big Drive is a matter of some 17 weeks, theatremen intending to get the most boxoffice good out of it are laying out as far as is possible, a complete plan of campaign as far in advance as possible. Essentially, it is vital that the public interest be kept high during every week of the Drive. This will be brought about by various managers in various ways. The smart boys will pace themselves so that advertising, exploitation and publicity will be spread evenly and effectively over the entire period. With this in mind, at least one outstanding idea developed for each week of the Drive in every situation is suggested.

Examination of the two Drive pressbooks finds a wealth of material to be adapted for local usage and if readers would like to go through these manuals as we discuss their various boxoffice points, let's start with the book with the colored cover, containing the exploitation, advertising and accessories. On the first inside right hand page, is a suggestion for a gala opening. Many have taken advantage of this slant. It still has possibilities for other periods of the Drive in the form of a Hollywood premiere, as utilized widely by Round Tablers. An impersonation contest to go with it, with locals taking off stars who appear in pictures booked during the campaign, is a hefty. M. C. on the lobby broadcast can also plug the Drive and Quiz contest.

Street parades, also mentioned, is another natural. This form has been used by division chief Harry Shaw, and publicist Erle Wright, in the last two weeks, in every city of the Poli-New England area. Campaign detailed in last week's Round Table stressed the local parade angle, heightened by a special float, illustrated on a following page. In Waterbury, Conn., some 50,000 turned out for the procession.

Now turn the page. A contest register is suggested to tie-in with the Booklet distribution. Since these Booklets are paid for by the exhibitor, care is to be exercised so that more than one Booklet is not given to the same person. Sid Holland has placed a table in the lobby in charge of a neat looking gal and will have the Booklets distributed there, the gal answering questions at the same time.

In Miami, W. R. Lynch, local Paramount Theatres headman, has had blank cards, about postcard size, made up headed "Movie Quiz Contest Record," name of each theatre rubber-stamped on bottom. Each patron receiving Booklet is asked to fill out card with name, address and phone number. Cards are to be used to expand mailing lists and check record of local entries in contest.

To encourage registering, a local contest turn might be in order. Perhaps every fiftieth name might rate a guest ticket, or certain names taken from the register and planted in your daily's classified page might win a few bucks. On this, the paper would pay off in free display space to advertise the Drive.

Coming to "Banners," in addition to the various uses described, the same idea can go for a street stunt. For instance, a couple, in evening clothes, can stroll the main streets, man carrying suitcase. At busy corners, they stop, man opens case, takes out folded banner, opens it with aid of woman. Banner contains Contest copy. Also interesting is variation of back banner stunt reported recently here and there.

"Stunt-a-Day" Plan Helpful for Campaign

On the front page of the advertising section of the "Greatest Year" pressbook, one finds a campaign plan laid out to check up on the progress of each local campaign. This slant is helpful and immediately suggests something similar sponsored by the Warner Ohio theatres, a "Stunt-A-Day" drive, detailed by Dick Wright, in the ROUND TABLE, August 13 issue. The Warner plan was in the form of a calendar with spaces for 30 days. Each manager was required to fill in the actual stunt to be put over on each day in the space reserved for it. It was found that the idea kept the men on their toes since every stunt listed became a "must" and being listed far enough in advance, gave each manager time enough to get behind it.

Tieups with Schools

Opposite the front page in the ad section is a number of tieups with schools and colleges, an invaluable source of tieins. In addition to the ideas listed, there are countless others used by Round Tablers in promoting their student bodies, high school or college that may be adapted for the Drive. The drama societies may be interested in radio dramatizations of coming pictures as well as staged scenes from certain of the bigger features. Or perhaps a college Movie Ball, with students in costumes suggesting their favorite stars. Or the idea might be staged at the theatre and made into somewhat of a gala night.

Much can be done with the free special short subject entitled "500,000,000 People Can't Be Wrong." Since a lot of top talent in Hollywood, writers, directors, and cameramen, was drafted to make this picture, it has every possibility for entertainment. The title possesses a lot of sock for a teaser campaign for advertising and posting. Photos of those who appear in it can be posted in special 40 by 60 and newspaper publicity can stress the greatest number of Hollywood names ever assembled to appear in or to work on one picture. In addition, it makes a splendid trailer idea for the rest of the campaign and should be advertised heavily when it is played.

Composite Ads

The various composite ads speak for themselves and theatremen on their toes will not neglect the opportunity of keeping their Drives on high with the use of these displays, for which mats are available. No. 302 is small enough to be dropped into a corner of most any sizeable ad, and No. 204 can be run now and then through the life of the contest. Suggestions for tying in titles of pictures advertised with the contest are also in keeping and a number of these are illustrated.

HOST OF IDEAS IN THE PRESSBOOKS

Some of the ad ideas suggest other uses. For instance, the "pot of gold" slant might be worked for the old reliable gag of a big pot filled with pennies, gold-colored chips, etc., and prizes given for those guessing nearest number. Good for window display or lobby flash. Drive can be plugged in a street stunt by having some of the Boy Scouts drum their way down the main street to the theatre or around town on a direct tie-in with "Drums." Banners or other advertising can tie in both picture and Drive. "Is $50,000 Too Hot to Handle" is a tie-in line for the picture of that name and "Be a Financial Gladiator" might be another to hook the Quiz Contest to the Joe E. Brown picture.

Pictures and Stars

Following the ad section is a page containing all the pictures and stars in the Quiz bannered by star heads. An informative and decorative 40 by 60 or larger might be made up by the selection of those pictures to be played in one situation and bordered with heads of the stars concerned, these to be clipped from scene or star stills, or if there is sufficient room, by using the star stills, as is.

The next page illustrates a full page, available in mat form, of personality and scene shots of some of the contest pictures, with each photo carrying caption. Many papers will go for this, of course, but where it cannot be planted, it's still a good bet for display in some good downtown window or, for a change of pace, in the lobby, with appropriate copy to go with it in space at top. Same goes for mat on following page, for tab sheets.

Merchants' Cooperative Page

The full page merchants' co-op single truck in the pressbook is another slant to tie to and already in work. Erle Wright, for instance, has created a full page for all the Loew-Poli houses with ten spaces for co-op ads. Another spread, but confined to the coming pictures, is the Tri-States "Happy New Year" campaign which ties in with the national drive. Here a double truck has been assembled with the banner across the top carrying copy and photos of A. H. Blank, Ralph Branton and Everett Cummings. Bordered by two-column cuts from some of the coming pictures, the rest of the space is given over to pictures of the personnel, in this instance, of the Strand and Rivoli, in Hastings, Neb. Spotlight plays on a number of star cuts, each enclosing titles and stars of top dates.

On the inside back cover of the pressbook is a series of five sprightly four-column institutional ads, mats of which are given free of charge providing theatremen can plant them locally. Managers are having little difficulty in convincing publishers to run institutional ads without charge for the benefit of the Drive and the five illustrated should obtain wide coverage. After papers are through with them, these are good enough for blowups to be promoted in good windows or for lobby display.

Publicity Stories

There is also a lot of stuff in the second pressbook confined to publicity stories. Obviously, every manager is not going to be able to plant every story in the book—and, incidentally, there is a lot of ace yarns, too. However, since, every possible use should be made of this material, the suggestion is made that whether an individual story be planted or not, it be used in blowup form for window or lobby. After the papers have run them, double their use by display with the pictures they fit. For instance, the Capra story could be worked into posters advertising "You Can't Take It With You," and so on.

Camera Contest

The page of individual stills on page three following suggests a camera contest, with prizes for those who take the best pictures patterned upon those in the layout.

Incidentally, the candid camera craze should be turned to profit with tie-ins of patrons in line at boxoffice, in the theatre itself or the lobby or other shots calculated to feature the house as well as provide good camera compositions.

The suggestion for school tie-ins can be aided by the full page article on page five written by Terry Ramsaye, on the progress of the motion picture. Tie-in can be made with local paper for an essay contest based on the Ramsaye article. Same slant might be sold direct to school or even to the local supervisors.

Dogs and Schools

The dog yarn on page eight suggests pet contests and the stories on growth of music in pictures lead to a tie-in with music stores and schools. The yarn on juvenile film personalities, page 10, suggests a kid talent party on your stage. Other publicity can be tied in similarly with particular stores and of course, the fashion material on page 9 presents many possibilities for fall fashion shows and other devices, familiar to theatremen. The phone yarn on page 12 brings up a tie-in with your public utilities company and the stand-in story on the same page, an impersonation contest. On page 13, eyes of the stars suggests a beautiful eyes or most interesting eyes contest and the caricatures of the stars on the same page should interest the local artists. The photos and stories of film executives and producers on pages 14 and 15 make fine prestige material, and a little thoughtful reading of the other pages should suggest other possibilities and variations to ingenious showmen.

There is plenty of stuff to work with during the life of the Drive. Go to it.

A SUGGESTION

So that there will be no confusion in the public mind, theatremen are cautioned against using any local quiz contest slant in the Drive promotion that will conflict with the national contest.

THEATRE ACTIVITIES AT NEW HIGH

Broadway managers and advertising men have launched plans for a joint promotional campaign in the Times Square area including banners, posters, and other displays with bands, show girls, parades and lights. Theatres in the Broadway area will make joint announcement of their attractions and will display campaign slogans and decorations. Permission has been secured from the city to erect a 30 by 50 foot banner across Broadway, from the Loew Building to the Astor Theatre, right in the heart of the White Way district.

Ben H. Serkowich was designated chairman of the committee, which includes Ray Connor, Al Rosen, Robert Weitman, John Wright, Arthur Mayer, Jack Fine-man, Herman Landwehr, Irving Lesser, Fred Cruise, Homer H. Harman, Jack McNerny, James Dunne, Irving Windisch, Phil Laufer, John Dowd and Oscar Doob.

Richmond Committee Promotes Posting, Newspaper Contests

From Richmond, Va., David Kamsky, advertising manager, Neighborhood Theatres, working with Frank O'Brien of Wilmer and Vincent and Allen Sparrow of Loew's as a committee reports the following highlights. General Outdoors has given space on 100-24 sheet stands and numerous three-sheets, theatres to contribute posters. A 20-day contest has been planted in the News-Dealer, for 12 days paper will carry four-column layout of contest pictures. The Times-Dispatch is also starting a contest using stills from the Quiz pictures, readers asked to furnish dialogue between characters in stills.

Mayor has proclaimed a "Go to Movies Day," merchants are tying in with cooperative ads, radio stations cooperating, street cars and busses carrying contest copy.

Rocky Mountain Area Showmen Attend Meet to Aid Drive

An eight page full size section in color was the opening salute in the Utah-Idaho territory, Harry David, Intermountain Theatres zone director, aiding prominently in obtaining first time cooperation from Salt Lake Tribune-Telegram, until now cold on movie news and art. Front page published, September 4, carried national slogan and publicity.

Highlight of district campaign was a convention in Salt Lake, September 7, 8 and 9 called the "First Annual Rocky Mountain Showmen's Conference."

Loewmen Active in Campaigns In Various Situations

Reported by Ernie Emerling are flashes forwarded to Oscar Doob by various Loewmen including a "Trade Follows the Movies" angle from Francis Deering, Loew's, Houston, Tex., wherein local committee offers $50 prize to downtown window dresser creating best display with motion pictures as theme.

SUGGESTS DRIVE SLUG REPLACE CUT-OFF RULES

An idea suggested by Oscar A. Doob, Loew Theatres ad head, now planted by the circuit theatremen in many situations, is being picked up for duplication generally. Instead of using the regulation cut-off rule between items on the amusement pages, it is proposed that newspapers replace rules with slugs reading "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year."

Effort by committee in Harrisburg, Pa., to obtain $50,000 in cash from local bank for display in leading store window is reported by Sam Gilman of Loew's. If obtained, money will be covered by insurance and protected by adequate number of armed guards. Harrisburg committee has constructed unusual float of two immense river barges, fastened together, upon which has been built replica of theatre front. Float participated in annual city water carnival on Labor Day.

Carl Fishman of the Loew home office ad staff is preparing eight-page tab paper on new season product, quiz contest, etc. Local committees in metropolitan area will be assigned to sell ads in an effort to receive sufficient revenue to cover cost of printing. In Jamaica, L. I., Tom Rogers, of Loew's Valencia obtained four unit animated display on refrigerators and revamped into layout for drive campaign.

Three leading papers in St. Louis, Mo., Post-Dispatch, Globe-Democrat and Star-Times are each running series of institutional drive ads. All taxi cabs in Indianapolis, Ind., are carrying window stickers and downtown lamp poles within a mile radius are placarded with drive material.

Cincinnati Radio Program Salutes Industry Drive

Plans for broadcast tieup with Station WLW in Cincinnati were reported by E. V. "Dinny" Dinerman, ad director RKO Midwest Theatres, idea being to have radio salute its sister of the entertainment world, the motion picture. Program went over Mutual broadcast on September 7, as part of weekly feature "The Musical Steeplechase." Col. Arthur Frudenfeld, RKO divisional director, acted as master of ceremonies, accepting the salute from radio.

Reading Theatremen Stage Civic Rally and Concert

Comprehensive campaign now in operation in Reading, Pa., is detailed by George Peters, chairman of local committee working with G. C. Keeney, Lester Stallman, Paul Glase, Calvin Lieberman, Dave Brodstein, G. B. Jeffrey and W. H. Smith. Featured were civic rally and band concert at city park on September 2, followed by parade down main street. Rally was addressed by Mayor Stump and other local prominent. Community singing was led by local Penn Wheelmen Chorus, and 1,000 gas balloons containing guest tickets were released during ceremonies. Chamber of Commerce sent out 3,000 letters to members requesting cooperation in theatre celebration.

Local merchants' bureau put up street decorations and posters and participated in movie sales day wherein merchants in downtown district cooperated with display windows on new seasons pictures including a still identification contest offering guest tickets for first 50 correct answers. Special 10 page movie season section were run by both Reading papers, sidewalks and traffic crosswalks were stencilled with "Let's Go to the Movies."

Warner Theatres Ad Director Finds Newspapers Cooperating

Publicity already received and reported by Harry Goldberg, Warner Theatres advertising director, in various situations includes full displays in all Philadelphia papers, full page in the Evening Ledger running twice. Both Milwaukee Sentinel and News have already run full pages. In Pittsburgh, proclamation was issued by the local committee and all publishers, managing editors of newspapers invited to luncheon at which they pledged their support. Institutional ads have already been run by the Press and Post-Gazette. From Memphis, Goldberg reports proclamation by the Mayor and extensive newspaper participation in Washington, D. C.

Canadians Score High In Spreading the Word

Tying in to the publicity obtained by "Miss Florida of 1938" in the Atlantic City beauty contest, W. R. Lynch, head of Paramount Enterprises, Miami reports a stunt developed by Austin Moon, manager, Colony Theatre. Local beauty winner was promoted to be the first entry nationally in the movie quiz contest, filling out blank card at the Colony, at one minute after midnight on September 1. Photo and story was carried by local papers, released to International News and Associated Press.

From Lowell, Mass., Max Melincoff, district manager Warners Theatres includes a monster parade and Mayor's proclamation, the official shown signing his name in front of committee of local managers. Every local merchant used contest window card and another promotion embraced cooperation of all members of Chamber of Commerce in local contest. All stores distributed heralds. Local committee of theatremen working with Melincoff includes William Kelly, Chris McHale, Harry Furst and Jack Melincoff.

Also up on their toes are the Canadian theatremen among which are those in Regina, Sask., from where Bill Novak reports a series of institutional newspaper ads in color. Other highlights of the campaign cover broadcasts, window displays, posting of heading highways, etc. In addition to Novak others on the committee are H. A. Bercovitch, Otis Bowes, M. Bloom, C. Bahrynowski and I. Reinhorn. Papers also ran extensive publicity and art.

Working with Bill Brearton, Shea's Theatres, Buffalo, promoted 25 twenty-four sheet boards. Printer donated paper, obtained proclamation from Mayor and blew up for lobby display. Special new season stories, editorials, in all papers. Both Sunday's papers carried double truck using photos coming attractions in roto sections. Arranged parade seven blocks long with three bands, floats, etc. All papers carried stories about coming parade day before and stories and pictures day after. Radio stations WKBW and WGR mentioned slogan Motion Pictures' Greatest Year on 32 news flashes.—DICK WALSH, Publicity Director, Lafayette Theatre.

Redmond Organizes Parade To Cover 26 Communities

Started with band, street parade, using banners and ballyhoo with public address system. Used the band in 26 towns. Each of these towns covered with booklets, window cards, one-sheets and heralds.

Special trailer being used advertising happy new year of productions, followed by teaser trailer on coming attractions. Have increased our advertising budget 20 per cent to cover the new drive. All newspaper advertising features, new movie cuts and quiz contest insignia ads have been increased in size in all small town newspapers, doing everything possible to sell movie quiz and new season and to make this a greater movie year.—JIMMIE REDMOND, Manager, Bonham Theatre, Fairbury, Neb.

Paramount Launches Magazine Ad Campaign

Paramount this week announced the insertion dates for the first 18 in a series of magazine advertisements which the company is using to replace cooperative campaigns in which exhibitors shared the expenses of newspaper advertising. The ads will have an estimated total of 68,942,206 readers.

*Two-page advertisements on "Spawn of the North" appear in the September issue of Screenbook, Movie Story, Modern Screen, Hollywood and Motion Picture. A full page ad will appear in Screen Guide and two pages in Movie Mirror for October on "Sing You Sinners," "Arkansas Traveler," "Men With Wings," and "If I Were King." In Saturday Evening Post, September 3rd, Look, September 13th, and Collier's September 5th, "Spawn of the North," "Sing You Sinners," "If I Were King," and "Men With Wings" were advertised.

"Sing You Sinners" was advertised in a full page in Life, September 5th. Other magazines to be used for advertising the same pictures as listed above are Screenland, October; Saturday Evening Post, September 10th; Time, September 12th; Photoplay, October; Silver Screen, October; Liberty, September 14th, and Collier's, September 24th.

More Prizes Added On 20th-Fox Shorts

Movietone and Terry-Toon have offered a total of $2,000 in prize money to cover the domestic organization's revenue returns in the 52-week seasonal delivery campaign.

W. C. Michel of Movietone and Paul Terry, producer of the Terry-Toons, informed Herman Wobber, sales manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, of their joint offer of $1,000 each. Division of the prize money will be left to the distribution head.

The 52-week short subjects prize money makes this season the richest in point of awards from that type of films, insofar as this company is concerned.

STUDY OF NEW PRODUCT SHOWS EMPHASIS ON U. S. HOME THEMES

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

The American motion picture is going to stick pretty close to home during 1938-39, but that doesn't mean it'll be inactive. Some 481 of the 574 feature pictures Hollywood producers have in mind for the season, and more or less on paper, will depict life as it is lived within the borders of these United States, and at least 324 of these (Westerns and declared melodrama) will be definitely on the action side. A lot of comedies, service films and aviation epics will have plenty of movement in them, too, because the word's been going around that movies have been talking too much, moving too little.

Conspicuous among the lateral observations that overtake a geographer sleuthing the story departments for clues to the probable whereabouts of the far-flung goings-on to be photographed in Hollywood after Thanksgiving (they're fairly sure about things up to then) is the fact that nobody's listing a story of contemporary Spain, Germany, Italy, Japan or Russia. A net total of three films use one or another of these settings, but definitely in the past tense—long past. It would seem that Mr. Walter Wanger's experience with the experimental "Blockade" has not inspired his professional brethren to emulation. ("And besides," adds an unquotable production executive, "maybe those places wouldn't be there when the pictures arrived.")

Subject to Change, of Course

Now of course all that may be changed. There is nothing hard and fast about the locale of a picture until the carpenters begin building the sets. Even then it's no great trick to move the scene half way 'round the world if some particular spot on the other side of the globe starts figuring provocatively in the right kind of headlines. It's been done before and will be again. And by the same sort of psychology that producers seem to have arrived at a decision to let the newspapers unroll the Spanish conflict for the public, it would be quite natural for producers to shoot around any one or more of the nations now on the list for cinematic attention, if press cables begin bringing bad news. The single thing agreed upon by all the sources canvassed for the information assembled in this survey is that said information is tentative, subject to change and altogether flexible.

The strictly present prospect, as to locale, for the 1938-39 season, is presented in boxes on this and the following page.

It would be in the nature of things in these parts if the very publication of these figures, even bound 'round as they are with cancellation privileges, turned out to be a sure means of putting them out of gear. The Middle West seems to be taking quite a beating from East and West, for one thing. Undoubtedly something will be done about that. And there may be reasonable doubt that Hawaii is entitled to as much audience attention this year as England. After all, a lei is a lei, where England is the home of an empire. It's a good bet, too, that more than two of the year's pictures will show the world a mythical kingdom. Some of the fancier films are still in that stage described as "starring so-and-so with a large and important cast."

Locales of Films For 1938-39 Season

As for the Great West—

That whopping statistic denoting the preponderance of production interest in the West as a setting is due in part, of course, to the numerical strength of those active lots where the staff writers all wear spurs and sing tenor. But the West is also getting plenty of expensive exposure to the big guns that echo on metropolitan marquees. Twentieth Century-Fox, for instance, has Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda and a lot of high pitch talent on location at this writing for "Jesse James." Cecil B. DeMille is about to set about re-creating the epic story of "Union Pacific" for Paramount, with Joel McCrea and comparable cast associates, while MGM's Hardy Family are "Out West with the Hardys." Somewhat later on, Warners will have decided whom to send into "Dodge City," for which great plans are in making, and RKO-Radio will be getting started on "Virginia City." Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon and important affiliates are a-toil on "The Lady and the Cowboy" even now. Walter Wanger has a deal with John Ford to direct a characteristically thorough production called "Stagecoach," and these are by no means all of the so known horse operas to be sung against resounding budgetary accompaniment.

Naturally, not all of the 481 pictures glamorizing this nation, by numerical inference, have been tagged with the names of definite cities, or states. (An earnest effort to list for showmen the names of pictures theoretically representing each of the 48 states, which might have been nice to have around when writing ad copy, went by the board early in these investigations.) But New York City, as always, leads all the rest of the nation's cities as favored by writers seeking a place in which to make things happen. This is no unfamiliar condition, but the rise of San Francisco in the list of popular happening places is a new manifestation. Possibly the picture of the same name had a lot to do with bringing it into the forefront of writer consciousness. Or maybe the advance publicity about the Fair did the trick. Anyway, the Bay City gets its biggest break in years.

"A Big City," which usually turns out to be New York, although Los Angeles popped up quite a few times last season, is in for the customary extensive exposure. "A Small Town" appears to be getting something of a run-around, for no reason anybody in authority saw fit to offer. Things like that, it seems, just happen, so maybe there'll just happen to be a lot more than 40 pictures staged without benefit of tall buildings.

The Horse-Racing Factor

If the Louisville and Saratoga figures look high, it's because there's going to be a lot of horse-racing on the screen this season. The production forces have been slow in finding out how much drama there is in the king of sports, but the tide is in. The race track happens to be the only location this side of Monte Carlo where gambling can be presented as a legal adventure, a circumstance writers are finding convenient to their imaginative needs. (Besides, race tracks are becoming almost as numerous around Los Angeles as realtors used to be.)

Annapolis and West Point are neck and neck as of now for honors as sites for Service pictures, by no means all of which will be located at either place. And this listing takes no account of various football pictures which are quite likely to wind up on the Army or Navy gridiron. Pigskin pictures start with a pigskin, generally, and by the time the writers get through kicking it around anything can happen. Certainly, too, there'll be more than one shot of Boston, and Reno will achieve publicity, if only fleetingly, in many and many a film before year's end.

Overseas cities, likewise, will be flashed into and out of all sorts of pictures, but those listed now as principal settings for stories of known identity are:

Paris	11
London	9
Riviera	7
Shanghai	4
Honolulu	3
Algiers	2
Cairo	2
Melbourne, Istanbul, Rio, Trinidad, Stockholm, each	1

Don't let that Riviera listing trip you up. Riviera, it turns out, means "a swank European watering place" to a great many of the persons who have something to say about where a story is to be located. The pictures now scheduled for there may land anywhere. Consider it, then, an atmosphere rather than a place, and don't despair if the word never appears on a leader. Quite probably its present discovery traces to its recent use in "I'll Give a Million," which showed it as a vague but pleasant place where comedy need have no relation to plausibility. Hollywood writers are fond of places like that.

The foregoing is the result of the first known effort to find out at this point on the calendar just where the motion picture entertainment of a given year is to be located. There is always a more or less inter-studio check on this matter, a loose and largely hearsay espionage, but none of the estimable organizations devoted to keeping track of things pertaining to motion pictures has set up machinery for compiling these data. One reason may be because the story departments are never over-sure of next month's proceedings. There are others. But the kind and character of entertainment to be offered in all these engaging locales are matters a deal more definitely known.

Types of Entertainment

The figures on indicated types of entertainment, with melodrama second only to Westerns, embarrass a number of press releases recently issued in various guises, primarily for the purpose of getting news about motion pictures, or about one or a group of same, special attention in the public prints. One of these had it, quite recently, that musicals were dead at the box office and, therefore, on their way out. That was before "Alexander's Ragtime Band" started playing. But even then the 50 indicated in the listing in the box, which does not include a great many pictures in which songs are sung incidentally, were on the fire.

High in the list of important musicals for the coming year is MGM's "Sweethearts," now nearing completion, with Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy singing it. In cutting now at the same plant is "The Great Waltz," with Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet and a nameful cast, and coming up is the memorable "Wizard of Oz," which will have such players as Judy Garland, Ray Bolger, Buddy Ebsen and Charlie Grapevin. Eleanor Powell will dance again in "Broadway Melody of 1939." Victor Herbert's "Red Mill" and "Rose of Algeria" are also set, but not cast, for MGM production.

"Sally" and "Desert Song"

Warner Brothers will produce "Sally," with Dick Powell, Rosemary Lane and a representative Warner cast, and "The Desert Song" is also on their list of expensive and expansive musicals. Oddly, their list shows no "Golddiggers" for this year, although that can be remedied. RKO-Radio already has turned in "Carefree," pronounced by many the best of the Astaire-Rogers dancing musicals, and the studio writers are busy on a script for "The Castles," for the same pair, Mrs. Irene Castle MacLaughlin sitting in with them to help keep the record straight.

Deanna Durbin is down for three singeroos (if she'll forgive it, please) and there's to be swinging done in at least one of them, "That Certain Age." The same studio has a Bergen-McCarthy special coming up and it's a foregone conclusion that there'll be music in that. Paramount's Bing Crosby pictures—a late bulletin says he'll also make one for Universal—starting with "Sing You Sinners," will be opulently tuneful, as will Jack Benny's "Artists and Models in Paris" and, no doubt, Dorothy Lamour's "Tahiti," which she will do in the usual sarong and in full color with Ray Milland alongside. "Cafe Society," vaguely defined as yet, can't fail to include a floor show.

And After "Alexander"—

Twentieth Century-Fox, with "Alexander" under its belt, can be expected to turn out copiously lyrical screenfare for the season. Announced just now, as new, since product announcement time, is "Thanks for Everthing," a musical by the hit-writing team of Gordon and Revell, with Adolphe Menjou, Jack Haley and, later, others. (There's a story going around that this was originally "The Average Man," previously announced as a terrific vehicle for Eddie Cantor, whose contract went into the wastebasket the other day. No matter.) The studio will produce three Ritz Brothers musicals ("Straight Place and Show" coming first) plus 2 Sonja Henie films, necessarily musical, and the Temple pictures wouldn't be Temple pictures without song... she'll have Bill Robinson back with her in the first, "Just Around the Corner."

Sam Goldwyn's "Daring Age," which will introduce Jascha Heifitz to picture fans, will not be primarily musical, but the maestro will do some fiddling in it and that's enough basis for marquee copy that'll catch the music minded. Gaumont-British is to send over four Jessie Matthews musicals, among others. Monogram's singing stars, Movita and John Carroll, will sing the Cadman light classics in "Under Northern Lights" and other tunes in "The Girl from Rio."

Comedies Yes, But—

Another recent release that got quite a bit of circulation proclaimed that the world is ready to laugh now, so there would be more comedies than anything else this year. A nice thought, that one about the happy population, but without recognition in production calculations. This year, as every year, there will be more western pictures than any other kind, not all big ones, a great many very small ones, but plenty to satisfy that very large sector of the American population which insists upon a certain amount of ridin' 'n' shootin'.

Naturally, all of these Westerns will be melodramas—or try to—but they are not included under that heading in the accompanying tabulation. Indicated thereunder are only those films which are to be produced with implicit intent to excite, thrill, stimulate, mystify and hold. Included are murder thrillers, racket exposes, cops-and-robbers chases, reportorial escapades, crime pictures generally and prison pictures—of which at least 7 are in prospect—in particular. Of course, some of the pictures conceived of now as falling into other categories will spill over into this one when the rushes display that tepid look.

The line between comedy melodrama and comedy is not hard and fast. Those classifications will blend quite a bit. As well to lump them together now under the general heading of credible stories about plausible people which turn out pleasantly.

Not Militaristic

The upswing in the Service picture department derives in about equal parts from a couple of pretty successful ones turned out last year and from a growing consciousness among Americans of their national defenses, the processes of their development and so on. It is to be noted, though, that the boys in uniform are not going to be doing much fighting in these pictures. They'll play a lot of football, row some boats and fly some planes. The general effect is not militaristic.

There is a tinge of international amity about MGM's "Hands Across the Border," a Robert Taylor vehicle having to do with the comradely relations between students at West Point and those at Royal Military College, Ontario, Canada, announcement of which was made long before President Roosevelt personally assured our Canadian neighbors that this country is on their side for keeps. The same studio will make "Soldiers Three," from the Kipling work, noting the virtues of British military men in the Queen's service. Paramount, which has "Men with Wings" finished, but as yet unseen, with Fred MacMurray and Ray Milland in flying khaki, goes to West Point for "Touchdown Army," and Warners have had Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, John Payne, Donald Crisp, Olivia de Havilland, George Brent and a large company on location at Pensacola and San Diego making "Wings of the Navy," an upper bracket investment. Warners' "Brother Rat" is well on toward completion.

Into History

David O. Selznick is finally getting around to "Gone with the Wind," which is not likely to be set into the 1938-39 group of MGM releases, and 20th Century-Fox goes even further back into American military history for "Drums Along the Mohawk," from Walter Edmond's book about the Revolution. RKO-Radio will offer "60 Glorious Years," a Herbert Wilcox pageant of English martial supremacy, starring Anna Neagle. Edward Small will produce "The Duke of West Point" for United Artists when he finds a star to substitute for the late Jack Dunn. Sam Goldwyn will cover the Philippine operations of this nation's troops in "The Last Frontier," Gary Cooper and Andrea Leeds heading the regiment, Universal is preparing a serial treatment of the Boy Scout branch of the service, and it isn't quite settled yet whether or not MGM will film the world war play, "Idiot's Delight," calculations in this connection having international complications on account of locale, connotation and so on, some or all of which may have to be changed for commercial reasons.

One Poem

History and biography may look pretty dry in the statistics, but there's nothing dry about the plans behind the numbers. The upturn in aviation pictures is an inevitable

Indicated Types Of Entertainment

This year, according to present planings, the studios are going to dish out the following kinds of entertainment in approximately the indicated doses:

aftermath of "Test Pilot," Hughes and Corrigan. Other figures are about normal, except that one denoting the poem. That's "Evangeline," which Republic has on its list.

Repeating on a Large Scale

History on a large scale—the history of the Suez Canal—is being repeated this week on the 20th Century-Fox preserves, where Tyrone Power, Loretta Young and Annabella, among thousands, are putting costly finishing touches on "Suez" for Gene Markey, associate producer. This studio contemplates similarly expensive retelling of "The Life of Alexander Graham Bell," with the Bell of the piece not yet named, a costly recording of the "Stanley and Livingston" adventures and, now in work, "Submarine Patrol," which was "Wooden Anchors" and, before that, "Splinter Fleet," a war time chronicle featuring Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster and George Bancroft. "Hudson's Bay Company" is another big one on this company's agenda.

Ancient Adventure

Largely historical, and a shade biographical, is Paramount's "If I Were King," starring Ronald Colman, about due for preview. Paramount's "Beau Geste" is also factual in part, as is, probably in lesser part, its contemplated "Knights of the Round Table." Greta Garbo is down for an MGM portrayal of "Mme. Curie," planned as authentic throughout, and Norma Shearer's "Marie Antoinette" is a known quantity. MGM's "Northwest Passage" has run into storm warnings and may not be ready for release this year, but Henry Sienkiewicz's "Quo Vadis" is a comparably substantial enterprise, as yet uncast.

RKO Radio is several weeks into "Gunga Din," a historically backgrounded military spectacle with Cary Grant, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Victor McLaglen and others shooting it out at Lone Pine, Cal., in approximation of Kipling's India. Warner Brothers' Bette Davis will portray a certain famous actress under title of "The Lady with Red Hair," while Paul Muni is exercising his distinguished talent in bringing the colorful "Juarez" to the screen. It seems probable he'll also get "The Life of Hyam Salomon" to do later on.

Title Changes

Known titles of the 574 creations dealt with in this survey have been made available to the trade in previous editions of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Each issue informs of title changes, postponements and added starters. Each Hollywood week witnesses the launching of new production enterprises, and resuscitations of languishing ones, and hardly a week goes by that Jack Warner doesn't dig up a new topical theme and set his staff of writers about the job of whipping it into picture form. Darryl Zanuck's flair for box office is a constant threat to the accuracy of this or any classifying of his company's future output. Louis B. Mayer is quick to take a tip from nature when an unseasonable autumn threatens a "Northwest Passage," and Cliff Work is inflexibly committed to a policy of keeping Universal's program flexible.

Ideas Don't Wait

It isn't reasonable to expect that Harry Cohn would stick to announced schedule if tomorrow he could lay hands on another "You Can't Take It with You." Pandro Berman couldn't be expected to let a hot picture idea get cold waiting for next season's listing, and the Messrs. Samuel Goldwyn, David O. Selznick, Hal Roach, Walter Wanger and Edward Small are at liberty to add to their United Artists commitments at will.

Sticking Close to Home

Scott Dunlap's peppy Monogram list is as full of surprises as he is of energy. Moe Siegel's Republic units are always subject to reinstruction. Sol Lesser is likely as not to pop up at any time of year with new and noteworthy product. Any of Harry Sherman's plans are pliable. And now E. W. Hammonds' entrance upon the Grand National scene augurs inevitable change.

For all these reasons, the cinematic geography taught in this piece is likely to exist, precisely thus, nowhere save on paper. The story classifications will not vary much. And, shift about the country as it may, the motion picture is going to stick pretty close to home. Home folks, now paying a larger share of the overhead than in other years, ought to like that.

AUTHOR'S NOTE: At the precise moment when the foregoing statistics had been overhauled for the final count and duly audited, B. P. Schulberg announced his resignation from the production staff of Selznick-International to set up shop as an independent producer contributing to the United Artists program with "The House of Morgan," from the book by Lewis Corey, as one of his first undertakings. That would appear to throw the biographical, the historical and possibly some of the other totals out of balance again. Better allow for things like that—symptomatic of a free art-industry—to happen right along throughout the season.

FEDERAL AGENCIES SPUR INTEREST IN BORROWING FOR MODERNIZATION

Publicity Campaign Planned to Encourage Exhibitors and Merchants to Accept FHA Aid in Altering, Improving Property

Money-lending agencies of the United States Government which insure loans for reconstruction of and improvements to properties of exhibitors and other local merchants are undertaking a campaign, directed from Washington, to give impetus to a substantial volume of modernization this Autumn.

With the Reconstruction Finance Corporation prepared to continue its lending to theatre operators for the reconditioning of their properties, the Federal Housing Administration has decided to undertake a special campaign to interest property owners in a new wave of modernization, and, accordingly, is gearing its machinery to meet the anticipated heavy demand for materials and funds.

After a long period of indecision as to the eligibility of theatre owners for RFC loans for modernization, that agency last May, ruled that exhibitors are in as favorable a position to secure financial assistance as are any other business men.

The RFC then stated that any exhibitor who wants an RFC advance can secure it provided he can meet the requirements of the governmental bureau. Briefly, those requirements were listed as the submission of collateral adequate to protect the loan, and the showing by the exhibitor, or other businessman borrower that he will be able to repay the money.

"RFC officials realize the necessity of some exhibitors for loans to improve their houses and are sympathetic, but each application will be considered on its own merits by the RFC field agency to which it must be submitted," it was explained in Quigley Publications' Better Theatres, on May 28th.

"Recent extension of the lending powers of the RFC by no means involved any relaxation of the requirements," the explanation continued, adding: "There will be no 'character' loans backed up by nothing more substantial than promissory notes, despite a belief which seems to be prevalent in some quarters that the Government will take promises to pay."

None for Removable Equipment

There is, moreover, no set maximum amount of money that the RFC will loan for theatre construction or remodeling. On the other hand, the RFC will not give any financial aid to the purchases of removable equipment.

Announcement that the Federal Housing Administration is expecting that many financial institutions and industries, including operators in exhibition, will engage in a substantial volume of modernization and repair of real property these autumn months, was made this week at FHA headquarters, 1001 Vermont Avenue, Washington.

The Federal Housing Administration said it is preparing for this campaign informative material for dissemination through various channels directing public attention, including that of exhibitors, to the loans which it insures for property improvement purposes.

Since reenactment of Title I in February,

U. S. Not to Make Housing Film, But Eyes "Ecce Homo" Dramatization

The United States Government is contemplating a third motion picture dramatization of the work of its New Deal agencies, to follow "The River" and "The Plough That Broke the Plains," for showing in theatres or any other available places of public assemblage where they can get bookings. Many exhibitors refused to screen the original two pictures on the grounds they were "political propaganda."

Contrary to widely published reports, however, Uncle Sam has no intention at this time of dramatizing his Federal Housing Administration. Pare Lorentz and his official government film-producing unit, which made "The Plough" (U.S. soil conservation) and "The River" (U.S. flood control), were reported assigned to make a third documentary subject, dealing with the FHA.

A group of New York architects will produce a housing film, as a private venture, through American Documentary Films, to show needs for more adequate housing.

However, plans are in process in Washington for a dramatization of unemployment and human conservation in a motion picture to be made for and distributed by the Federal Government.

Conceived by the National Emergency Council, the possibilities of such a picture are now being explored by Mr. Lorentz. The project has been approved in principle by the Public Works Administration, the Works Progress Administration and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the three agencies which jointly will finance the picture, subject to final approval by their officials.

Whether the picture will be entitled "Ecce Homo," (meaning, "Behold the Man") as was the radio production broadcast on unemployment two months ago by Mr. Lorentz, is not yet certain. However, the theme is the same, and it would be developed by showing the causes and effects of unemployment throughout the country.

Coordination of plans for the wider usefulness of motion pictures made and distributed for educational purposes by the government and the further exploitation of possibilities in this field are being considered by the National Emergency Council, as was reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on July 26th.

1938, more than $75,000,000 of loans have been reported to the Federal Housing Administration for modernization insurance, and the weekly volume is now approaching $5,000,000. Since Title I first went into effect in 1934, more than 1,500,000 loans have been made, totaling approximately $630,000,000. A large number of the loans were made to theatre owners, but figures are not available at FHA on the exact amount.

Basically, the rules allow for modernization or reequipment of "immovable" nature. Machinery, therefore, is not eligible, "machinery" including projection and sound equipment, air conditioning and the like. It does, however, allow for air conditioning ducts, any and all form of wiring installations which are built-in, marquees, theatre front upright signs, new rest rooms, etc.

In addition, FHA Title I provides insurance for loans used to construct new buildings on property already owned or leased by the borrower, including those on theatre properties. FHA loans for new construction, however, are limited to $2,500 each, whereas modernization loans may amount to as much as $10,000.

Property owners or lessees with satisfactory credit standing are eligible to obtain FHA Title I loans. The loans are made by private lending institutions such as banks, building and loan associations, and finance companies, after they have qualified as lenders and accepted the FHA's contract of insurance.

Charges on most FHA Title I loans cannot exceed a figure equivalent to $5 discount per $100 face amount of a one-year note payable in equal monthly installments. Loans may run for a maximum of five years, except in the case of new residential construction loans, where the maximum is seven years.

"This cooperative lending system provides many business opportunities for manufacturers of building materials and improvements, together with dealers in related lines," including those in exhibition, said the FHA.

GN-Anglo Pact Not Settled as Jackson Departs

The proposed reciprocal distribution deal between New Grand National and Anglo-American Films of London, discussed in New York in the last two weeks was not completed up to the departure for London Wednesday of Louis Jackson, the negotiating principal for the British company.

Before sailing on the Queen Mary Mr. Jackson said he planned to return to New York in about four weeks to discuss further the distribution proposal with Earle W. Hammons, president of New Grand National.

Meanwhile Mr. Hammons, Edward L. Alpers, vice-president and distribution head of New Grand National, and Jack Skirball, Educational general manager, continued their conferences in New York on production plans. A schedule of approximately 50 features and westerns was indicated, although no official announcement of the plans was made.

The company already has commitments for 30 features and eight westerns. Mr. Hammons may contribute eight to 10 additionally, dependent upon the amount of product lined up from other producers.

In connection with Mr. Jackson's plans it was reported that his company would re-establish the Elstree Studio, which has been used little since Gaumont British curtailed its production operations. Mr. Jackson is understood to have the backing of the Prudential Assurance Company of London.

Mrs. Florence Marston, eastern head of the Screen Actors Guild, this week revealed that existing contracts with Educational and Grand National cover the contingency of a merger such as that recently completed by the companies and make it unnecessary to negotiate a new guild contract to cover the company's proposed feature production in the east.

The contracts also cover the production activities of subsidiaries of the companies with which they are made, Mrs. Marston explained, and they apply to production by signatories on either coast.

Start Fashion Series

The first of four one-reel "Fashion Forecasts" series in color for Twentieth Century-Fox release was started this week at the Movietone Studio, New York, by Vyvyan Donner, fashion director for Movietone News. The short subject deals with mid-winter fashions, furs and jewelry and is set for late September release.

Mirpo Joins Grand National

Paul Mirpo has joined the Grand National exchange in New Orleans as cashier, succeeding Alma Sherman, who joins the Universal exchange there in a similar post.

Zaidins Heads Union

Maurice Zaidins, manager of the Gayety, Cincinnati, has been elected chairman of the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union there. Charles Dare is vice-chairman, Eddie Nordman is secretary and treasurer.

Garod Places Television Kits on the Market

The Garod Radio Corporation of New York this week placed on the market television kits, with which amateurs can construct their own television receivers for the home. The kits sell for $100 and a companion sound receiver costs $26.75.

The company demonstrated the kits Tuesday night, picking up a regular National Broadcasting Company experimental program. The picture was received on a screen 2¾ by 3¾ inches and was sharp at closeup, but lost clarity at a distance.

The Garod kit uses 15 tubes in addition to a five-inch cathode ray tube. According to the manufacturer the set can be assembled by the average technically-minded experimenter. However, a service bureau has been established to give advice and instruction without charge to purchasers.

MGM Short Subject Plans

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is considering producing a number of short subjects in the east, and a decision may be made next month when Fred Quimby, head of the department, arrives in New York for home office conferences. Actual work at an eastern studio will not start until late in the year or early in 1939, following completion of plans by Jack Chertok, production head. The company also plans to continue with the production of factual short subjects, topical or otherwise. Herb Morgan, short subject publicity head, returned to New York last week from the coast. He said that the cartoon department is being reorganized and it is probable that Harman-Ising may be put in charge of this activity. Milt Gross is re-vamping the cartoon division.

Dickinson, Jr., Admitted to Bar

Glen W. Dickinson, Jr., son of the head of the Dickinson circuit, has been admitted to the bar in Kansas and is now associated with the circuit, managing the theatres in Manhattan, Kan., and supervising those in Herington, Junction City, Great Bend, Ellsworth, and Beloit, Kan. He also will act as counsel for the company.

Road Show Pictures Formed

Road Show Pictures, Inc., through which it is planned to produce four films starring Gene Austin and Candy & Coco, has been formed in Hollywood by Max and Arthur Alexander. The produced film and an incidental vaudeville feature starring the three entertainers will be offered to theatres as a single roadshow unit.

Acquires Foreign Rights

Louis A. Solomon has acquired all foreign distribution rights to the first three productions with all-Negro casts, made by Million Dollars Productions, Inc. The films are "The Duke Is Tops" and "Bargain with Bullets," starring Ralph Cooper, and "Life Goes On," starring Louise Beavers.

Theatre and Radio Studio

Plans for a $400,000 motion picture theatre and radio broadcasting studio have been drawn by Armand Carroll for Morris Mechanic, president of the New Theatre company in Baltimore. Ground already has been broken.

RKO Agreement On Management Expected Soon

An agreement on the designation of a new board of directors and management of the reorganized RKO company is expected to be reached by major creditors by the end of the month.

Although it is understood that little definite progress has been made, the leading creditor factions have been conferring informally for the last two weeks on the subject of the board and the management.

The creditors hope to reach an agreement in time to present it to Federal Judge William Bondy at the first hearing on the reorganizer's motion to confirm the report of George W. Alger, special master, approving the reorganization plan.

The hearing was scheduled for Thursday, but application was to be made for an adjournment until the last of the month. Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for Floyd Odum's Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan, was to make the request for an adjournment to Samuel Mendelbaum, United States district judge.

Mr. Bondy is vacationing in the south.

The extended delay will permit whatever tentative agreements on board and management may be made within the next few weeks to be submitted to David Sarnoff, RCA head, for approval on his return from Europe in about two weeks.

Completing Film "Saga"

"Hollywood Saga," adapted from the book by Joseph Balaber and embodying original scenes from the screen classics of 10 and 20 years ago, is being completed at New York studios and will be released by Exhibitors Pictures in this country and in foreign countries with commentary in the native language of each nation.

Fawcett Personnel Changes

William Hartley, a member of the Fawcett editorial staff for the last two years has been advanced to the editorship of Screen Book, replacing Tom De Vane. Mr. De Vane has resigned to return to Hollywood. Helen Cunningham, formerly of the Dell Publishing Company, has been appointed editor of Romantic Story, replacing Mary Lou Butler, resigned.

Five New Orleans Projects

Three new theatres are planned for New Orleans and two others, closed for a year, are to be reopened. Henry Lazarus will build a 2,000 seat Circle theatre. Ira Weingrum will operate the new St. Charles. The third new theatre will be the United Artists.

Harry Sherman, producer of the "Hop-along Cassidy" pictures for Paramount release, said this week in Hollywood that 7,500 exhibitors are playing his pictures, an increase of 2,500 over three years ago. Mr. Sherman plans to use one or more name players in the pictures in the future in addition to the regular featured actors. Evelyn Venable will play the lead in "Frontiersman," under the new policy.

TODD GROUP, HANDLING "QUIZ," GETS FIRST CONTEST REPLIES FROM PUBLIC

Battery of Judges Already Organized; 300 to 500 on Calling List as Checking Staff; Grading Rules

Although the $250,000 "Movie Quiz" contests, the main feature of the industry-wide business building drive, was launched only a few days ago, the first of the expected millions of answers have been received at contest headquarters, 480 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

Wise in the ways of contests and contestants, Jack Todd, vice-president of the officially designated judging organization, Radio and Publication Contests, Inc., expressed no surprise that the early entrants answered questions based on motion picture that have not yet been released. The Todd organization is a professional group specializing in the physical handling and tabulating of "quiz," "puzzle" and other forms of public contests.

While reluctant to estimate the total number of entries which will be received in the contest, Mr. Todd pointed out that during his 15 years' experience in conducting contests he has heard of no drive which brought entries from more than two and a half million contestants.

Nevertheless, Mr. Todd already is setting up machinery for handling a record number of replies. He himself will head a battery of working judges who will scrutinize the millions of replies and then pass on to the honorary judges those entries which are considered the best.

Assisting Mr. Todd as judges will be the following:

EVERETT LANE, president of the National Contestants Association.

AL PERVAS, chief judge in the Ed Wynn contest which was conducted over the National Broadcasting Company network for twenty-six weeks.

ALMA COOK, chief judge in the recent Shell Oil contest.

LOUIS DAVIDSON, former feature writer for the New York Post.

GERTRUDE (News-Hen) GORDON, judge in the recent Pittsburgh Press contest and the recent American Weekly contest.

Officers of Radio and Publication Contests, Inc., in addition to Mr. Todd, are G. L. Van de Water, president, and Mr. Pervas, secretary.

Experienced Checking Staff

Working for the judging organization, in addition to the aforementioned judges, will be a checking staff of men and women experienced in handling contest entries. Although the number on this staff will vary according to the number of replies received daily, Mr. Todd pointed out that he is prepared for a deluge of mail. He said that he has on his "calling" list the names of 300 to 500 men and women who are prepared to go to work.

As another indication that his organization is prepared for thousands of replies each day, Mr. Todd displayed three letter opening machines.

"They are of the very latest type," he said. "Each machine is capable of opening 30,000 let-

FIRST ENTRY IN 'QUIZ' HAS ALL THE ANSWERS

The first entry in the $250,000 "Movie Quiz" contest was received by Jack Todd, vice-president of Radio and Publication Contests Inc., from a Philadelphia resident. Distribution of the "Quiz" booklets started last Thursday morning and the No. One entry was mailed from Philadelphia Thursday night.

The contestant not only checked answers to all 94 questions in the booklet but he also answered the question on "Snow White" which is used in the booklet as an example.

For his 50-word letter on the picture he liked best, the Philadelphia resident listed the names of five stars.

ters per hour which means that we can handle 90,000 entries an hour."

After the entries are sent through the opening machine they will be turned over to a staff of girls who will remove the entries from the envelopes. Another group, "checkers," then will check the answers to the questions, each of the workers being supplied with a list of the 94 correct replies.

Then the Grading

The next step will be the grading of the 50-word letters by Mr. Todd and his associate judges. Those receiving the highest grades will be turned over to the honorary judges who have not yet been appointed by the industry's campaign committee.

This point is explained in the contest rules. The 12th rule states:

"To assure absolute fairness to each and all contestants, the final judging and distribution of awards will be made by an honorary committee of prominent persons of unimpeachable character."

Before Radio and Publication Contests, Inc., was chosen to handle the industry's contest, the campaign committee consulted with officials of virtually every judging organization, according to Paul Gulick, co-ordinator for the drive.

Payment on Number of Replies

Payment for handling the contest will be made on a percentage basis, depending upon the number of replies received.

Among the recent contests conducted by Mr. Todd's organization were the National Broadcasting Company's 10th anniversary letter contest which was conducted over a coast-to-coast network of 100 stations; the Spud Cigaret (Ed Wynn) question contest which ran for 26 weeks over a coast-to-coast network of 103 stations; the Shell Oil jingle contest, broadcast over the NBC network; the American Beauty Flour 100 word letter contest; the Pebeco Tooth Paste statement contest, broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System; the Hinds Honey and Almond Cream contest, broadcast over the CBS network, and the American Type Founders contest.

In declining to estimate the number of entries which will be received, Mr. Todd explained that "each contest is an unknown quantity." He amplified this by pointing out that this is the first time the motion picture industry has staged such a contest and that, therefore, there is nothing upon which to base an estimate. He declined to disclose the number of replies received in other contests.

Grading of the entries, Mr. Todd said, will be based upon

1. Adherence to contest rules.
2. Originality.
3. Sincerity.
4. Truthfulness.

New Orleans Exchanges Protest Tax Increase

A raise in assessment on films stored or passing through New Orleans film exchanges to many times the previous valuation, was protested last week by attorneys for film exchanges at a meeting of the Orleans parish (New Orleans) board of equalization.

The six exchanges affected were subjected to an increase from an average of $2,500 in past years to a straight $50,000 each on the 1938 assessment.

Charles Rosen, representing the film exchanges, told the board that the increase was an effort to collect taxes on rental value of films. He also pointed out that films handled in many instances were not the property of the exchange and that the films were prints, not originals. It is expected the protest will be put in writing and referred to the Louisiana Tax Commission.

Preserve President's Address

Because of their historical value, the Canadian government has taken steps to preserve both the news films and the recording of the radio broadcast of President Roosevelt's address at the opening of the International Bridge, when the President declared the United States would not remain idle if the soil of the Dominion were violated by a foreign power. The government motion picture record was taken by Canadian Government cameramen under the direction of F. C. Badgley.

RKO Exploitation Portfolio

The product announcement of RKO Radio for the coming season was distributed from S. Barret McCormick's home office advertising department this week. The announcements were contained in a white leather zipper portfolio. In the portfolio a red and plush-covered volume contains descriptions of the forthcoming RKO product. The enclosed volume is entitled "Headlines that Tell the Story."

Canada Seeks To Reorganize Film Industry

by COLIN R. HAWORTH
in Montreal

A drive to put Canadian motion picture making on a more prolific and financially successful basis is gathering speed here with British Government film officials doing their best to prod hesitant Canadian producers along. Hanging in the air at present is a scheme to bring a Britisher over for the purpose of reorganizing the industry and turning out "strictly Canadian" films, probably under Government control.

It is expected that the emphasis will be placed upon short subjects, newsreel material and documentary films rather than features.

So far this year three leading government film men from overseas have visited the Dominion each in turn urging Canadians to supply more and better films for distribution in Great Britain. Arthur W. Jarrett, director of theatres for Gaumont British, told the press: "Canada is very poorly advertised in England despite the fact that English people and exhibitors are much interested in the Dominion."

"We have received nothing from Canada of recent years except 'Great Barriers,' which we had to come over and make ourselves. We get all kinds of films on the United States but there is a definite need for newsreel shots depicting Canada and Canadian life." Jarrett deplored "the lack of anything in Canadian motion pictures which would show the ordinary man what you really have in this country."

Sir Henry Lindsay, director of the Imperial Institute, who arrived recently on the Empress of Britain for a lecture tour, said: "We cannot satisfy the demand for Canadian films in the United Kingdom. We need double the number of pictures."

John Grierson, producer-member of the British Government Advisory Film Council, who if present plans go through, will probably be the man selected to revamp the Canadian industry, spent two months in Canada on the invitation of the Dominion Government looking over the field. Mr. Grierson summed up his decision, when he left, with: "The industry here has all it wants technically, but lacks the initiative and creative imagination required. There are far too many Gems of This and Gems of That."

If Mr. Grierson returns within a year, as is expected by some in the trade, he will probably form a Government producing unit.

"Less of 'Appletime in Evangeline Country,' 'Wander Through Quintupland' and 'The Glories of Banff,'" he insists. "Get the story of the farmer and his crops, the miner and his delving, the Dominion meteorologists, and the airmen of the country."

Flora Gordon, former secretary to Joseph M. Schenck while he was head of United Artists, has been named private secretary to Maurice Silverstone, general manager and chairman of the executive committee of United Artists.

Boys Town

Something Different

Cold black type alone cannot begin to describe the dramatic power of "Boys Town." Words alone cannot express its realistic humanism. That audiences—and it should appeal strongly to any kind of audience—may appreciate its gripping entertainment merit and exhibitors realize its rare commercial value, there should be an understanding of Boys Town, an institution near Omaha, the priest who founded it, the boys who inhabit it and their spirit and ideals. But before that is entered into it should be known that the picture "Boys Town" is not merely a grouping of theatric fundamentals, not a spectacle, not a lot of heroics, but rather the saga of an idea and an ideal.

Here is the history of the community. About twenty-five years ago, Reverend E. J. Flanagan, consoling a criminal who was about to be executed, heard him say that if he only had had one friend when he was twelve years old, he might have become a good citizen, certainly not a murderer. Reverend Flanagan had been conducting a "flop-house" for adult men. The words of the condemned man made a powerful impress upon him. Witnessing the acts of some boy hoodlums made that impress more vivid. He realized that if homeless boys might be helped when they were around 12 years old they might be saved for society. In the face of almost insurmountable handicaps, lack of finances, public indifference, even outright opposition, he founded Boys Town. Today the community stands a symbol to faith in an ideal. It is a haven for helpless boys, but it is not a corrective institution. There are no fences around it. It has chapels, school rooms and workshops instead of jails. Its boys govern themselves. They live under the honor system. There are no fees. Any boy, no matter what his race, creed or color, may become a citizen of Boys Town if there is room for him.

Now as the theme sticks to fact, but makes use of necessary theatrical license, the picture tells the story of Reverend Flanagan and Boys Town.

Reverend Flanagan, played by Spencer Tracy, hears convict "Farrow's" bitter story. With the willing but sometimes skeptical moral and financial support of pawnbroker "Dave Morris," he starts the first poverty stricken "Boys Town." The courts, social organizations and the press, even the Bishop, at first, doubt that he can succeed, that he can reclaim potential criminals. But as the priest pleads and prays, the community grows. "Boys Town," that started in a ramshackle hovel, that began with a few, soon has hundreds of citizens. It has its own fine building which the boys themselves built and of which the doubting "Morris" was the financial agent.

Comes to it a thoroughly bad boy, a yegg in the making, "Whitey Marsh." He sneers at the ideals of "Boys Town." It's not a place for a "big shot" but no one lets him think he is one. He's nothing and the boys tell him he can be nothing. In ruthless ways, but ways that have touches of humor, he tries to dominate things. Failing, his resentment toward the institution, the priest and boys intensifies. He runs away, but the dinner bell brings him back. Beaten in a supervised ring bout by "Freddie," he starts to run away again, but when his little pal "Pee Wee" is hit by an auto, he brings him back. Still he's outcast in the community, and he makes good his determination to run away. Wandering around the streets of Omaha, he is wounded in a bank holdup. One of the criminals is his brother, "Joe," an escaped convict, who had asked the priest to take him in charge.

Hidden in a church by "Joe," he is found by the priest, and as "Hargraves," publisher, indulges in flaming headline scandal-mongering, condemning the priest and his school, the man and the community come to a crisis. "Whitey" won't talk. The priest gives him up as a bad boy. Somehow "Whitey" knows where "Joe" and his gang are hiding out. Escaping—but followed by several boys—he goes there. The boys report to the priest. Going to the hide-out, the boys and the priest, bent on avenging an ideal and a spirit, capture the criminals.

The money reward, which saves "Boys Town" from financial failure, is nothing in comparison to the profound joy and happiness that knows a bad boy has been saved. In the heart warming climax, the honor of being Mayor of the community comes to "Whitey" by acclamation.

While the screen has had many stories concerned with juvenile regeneration, it never has had one like "Boys Town." That it is sure to receive the commendation of all right thinking forces is a foregone conclusion. Whether "Boys Town," as an item of screen merchandise or as a social document that is not a preaching, gets the financial returns at the box office which it merits as human interest entertainment, depends in the final sense upon the exhibitors who may play it. If screen names alone are to be considered, MGM has made available Academy Award winner Spencer Tracy, who was the priest in "San Francisco," and the skyrocketing Mickey Rooney. They perform masterfully, and Henry Hull gives as fine a characterization as anyone would want to see. The boys are just boys, who seem to be living the story rather than acting it.

Literally, based on a semi-biographical story by Dore Schary and Eleanore Griffin, the well written screen play by John Meehan and Dore Schary is a blending of understandable dialogue and vivid action sequences. Under Norman Taurog's capable direction the spirit of the story always is within the understanding and appreciation of any mentality.

Previewed in the Village Theatre, Westwood, Cal. A significant burst of applause accompanied the title credits. There was applause several times as the picture progressed. Generally, however, the spectators watched and listened silently, but they almost tore up the seats at the finish.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Distributed by MGM. Produced by John W. Considine, Jr. Directed by Norman Taurog. Screen play by John Meehan and Dore Schary. Story by Dore Schary and Eleanore Griffin. Musical score by Edward Ward. Musical arrangements by Leo Arnaud. Montage effects by Slavko Vorkanich. Elmo Veron, film editor. Photographed by Sidney Wagner. P.

Pygmalion

(Pascal Production)

Whimsical Comedy

[This George Bernard Shaw play, translated to the screen by Gabriel Pascal as the first of the Irish dramatist's work to be produced as a feature motion picture, has been purchased for distribution in the United States by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Although a release date has not been set it is expected that the picture will be included in the MGM 1938-39 program. Exploitation plans, involving the use of the Shaw name, are reported being formulated.]

For three reasons "Pygmalion" is an experimental production. It is the first George Bernard Shaw full length film; it marks the entry into the British field of Producer Gabriel Pascal, and it introduces an artiste new to the English screen, Wendy Hiller. On all three it would seem to be a success. Despite the incessant loquacity of Mr. Shaw the play adapts itself into a pleasant and witty whimsy; Pascal's production is of superlative quality, with imaginative and zealous directorial support from Anthony Asquith—assisted by Leslie Howard—and in Wendy Hiller a star is born whose strange wistful charm, uncanny intelligence and arresting histrionic powers offer a combination unprecedented in British films. Critical caution with superlatives hardly deters the deliberate judgment that Miss Hiller is magnificent.

Shaw's whimsical comedy concerns an impulsive and emotionally remote professor of phonetics who, for a bet, adopts a Cockney flowergirl and builds her into a social blossom which deludes Duchesses and Ambassadors to the belief that she is a Princess. It is a characteristically Shavian conception, dressed out with discursive dialogue and acid barbs in the approved G. B. S. manner. Asquith's direction and the moving portrayal of Wendy Hiller introduce a fascinating humanity into the theme and the psychological riposte, when Eliza realizes that, the experiment over, she is left with nothing, between both worlds, so to speak, is both pointed and poignant. As most films do, it ends happily, with the stereotyped dawn of love in the final fadeout.

The loquacity of the film, incessantly witty, often brilliant and seldom dull, at times verges on the verbose, and indicates an appeal rather to the more sophisticated type of audience, but the unusual comedy of the film devised for the most part around "Eliza's" struggles with the intricacies of polite speech, the famous "Not bloody likely" scene, and the vivid breathless characterization of Miss Hiller, provides entertainment in a new genre, stagey in some respects maybe, but courageously refreshing. Though Leslie Howard struts and storms a charming way through his role of Professor Higgins, the critic will see romanticization of the mundane in his reading of a dogmatic scientist, but the ordinary patron will, none the less, vote him a gay and charming fellow. The whole cast—mostly of names renowned on the British stage—is excellent. Wilfred Lawson's philosophizing dustman is one of the best efforts, despite a lapse into the vaudevillian, Marie Lohr as the composed calm mother of Higgins, Esme Percy as a mincing Count, and O. B. Clarence as a shocked and dumbfounded Vicar, are but three selected from the cast. It is Wendy Hiller, however, who shines with an easy brilliance which dims the rest, offering a characterization many will hail as the best yet seen on the British film.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

The Asquith-Howard direction is imaginative and inventive in its transmutation of the staginess of Shaw into screen terms, and technical qualities—despite an occasional backcloth of fictitious genre—are first rate. "Pygmalion" is mature production and entirely engaging entertainment. With the name of Shaw, the selling angle of Leslie Howard, and the promise of a new experience in Miss Hiller, British exhibitors should find it possible to sell it without reminding their audience that it is a British film—for it is something more—a good film.

Previewed at the Piccadilly Theatre to a trade audience the film was hailed as a meritorious effort in all ways. Laughter punctuated the screening with a boisterous outburst for the "not bloody likely" scene. Miss Hiller was hailed as a find. Only the excessive talkativeness of the dialogue came in for criticism.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Room Service

Comedy

The Marx Brothers space out their screen appearances in such leisurely release as to suggest that the first and most significant step for any showman to take in behalf of any Marx Brothers comedy is to shout loudly, "Here they are again." To a great number of persons on this planet any further announcements are superfluous. This time, of course, it is also essential exploitation information that the stage play in which they are here to be seen is a famous New York success, a statistically demonstrable assertion.

Those who have not seen or heard much about the stage play may need to be told that the action transpires within the premises of a New York hostelry wherein a shoestring producer and his unfinanced cast of 22 have been housed on wobbly credit for some six months when the picture opens, and that most of the action and dialogue have to do with the producer's efforts to obtain backing for his show before the management evicts the personnel. They will assume, properly, that the means and methods employed by Groucho, Harpo and Chico toward this end are ludicrous, fantastic and fundamentally comic in character.

Players principally involved in the mad Marxian operations are Frank Albertson, as a hick playwright, Ann Miller as his city girl friend, Donald MacBride and Cliff Dunstan as hotel executives. Morrie Ryskind wrote the screen play from the original by John Murray and Allan Boretz. George Abbott produced and William A. Seiter directed.

The picture differs from previous Marx Brothers offerings in several respects, one or two of which require notation here for the benefit of showmen called upon to answer pattern questions asked by prospective clients. This time Harpo does not play his harp and Chico does not play the piano. There are no musical comedy numbers and there is no dancing. A preponderance of the action takes place in a hotel room and consists of a practically continuous sequence of gags.

Previewed at the Pantages Hollywood theatre, where it experienced mixed reactions. Loudest and most sustained laughter attended the second of two simulated suicides. There was quite a bit of foyer sentiment in favor of sticking in a harp number by Harpo and giving Chico a go at the pianoforte.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

The Higgins Family

Family Affair

Republic with this production offers Exhibit One in a new family series. It is an auspicious exhibit. The Higgins family is genuinely American, likeable, humorous and inclined to be eccentric. Given adequate material, such as they have in Exhibit One, the Higgins family can be expected to find and hold a legion of friends. After playing Exhibit One exhibitors should look forward with pleasure to the advent of Exhibit Two.

The production has comedy in abundance, pathos and romance. In the selection of a cast the producer has made it a real family affair. It might very well have been called The Gleason Family. James Gleason, who has been around and about the stage and motion pictures, invariably doing a good job, these many years, is the father. His wife, Lucille Gleason, plays herself in the picture, as does Russell Gleason, his son. The only member of the immediate Higgins family who is not a Gleason is Lynn Roberts, who portrays the daughter.

"Joe" works in an advertising agency. For 15 years he has been turning out copy for the same agency. His big chance comes when the head of the agency is ordered to take a trip for his health and in the absence of other executives "Joe" is left in charge. His first job is to clinch an important deal for a breakfast food account. "Joe" invites the head of the company to dinner, where the man is properly embarrassed by the disparaging remarks "Mrs. Higgins" makes of his product.

"Joe" patches things up and gets the contract but "Mrs. Higgins" in the meantime signs for a radio program for a competitor. "Joe" is fired. "Joe," his eccentric son, "Sidney," and "Marian's" boy friend, "Eddie," pool their resources and open an agency. Prospective customers quickly fade out of the picture when "Mrs. Higgins," on a radio program, belittles their products. "Joe" and "Mrs. Higgins" decide to divorce. But all is patched up.

The Mexicali Kid

Western

This western is cut to a pattern. However it is a pattern of the old school for the star here does not play an instrument or sing a song. Otherwise there is the usual amount of action and romance. The story concerns the adventures of the leading character in his hunt for his brother's slayers. His travels lead him to involvement with a gang which as it turns out harbors the men he has been hunting for.

The picture presents Jack Randall in the starring role. In support is Wesley Barry, former star of the silent screen and remembered for his freckles, and Eleanor Stewart, for romance. The picture was produced by Robert Tansey and directed by Wallace Fox.

When his brother, a bank clerk, is slain, "Jack" quits his job as foreman of a ranch and sets out to hunt for his brother's slayers. While riding across a desert he comes upon the "Mexicali Kid," who is unconscious from heat exhaustion. "Jack" takes care of the "Kid" and the two become friends. The "Kid" introduces "Jack" to "Gorson," who is planning to acquire ownership of the Payson ranch.

The Payson ranch is controlled by "Jean." "Gorson" has "Jack" impersonate the long missing heir of the ranch. "Jack" pretends to go through with the plan but secretly works to find out the hideout of "Gorson's" gunmen. Suspecting "Jack" of double crossing him "Gorson" orders his gunmen to kill "Jack." In the final showdown, a gun battle between the gang and the law, "Gorson" and his gunmen are all slain.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS OF PRODUCT

Mickey's Parrot (Disney - RKO Radio)

Excellent

Mistaking a parrot visitor for an escaped "killer," Mickey and his pal, Pluto, have a wild and scary time in caging the supposedly dangerous person. The fun for the audience and the worry for the rodent and the canine begin when the bird is tossed from a moving van and enters Mickey's domicile just when word is heard that "Machine Gun Butch" is on the "lam." The parrot is involved in a set of tricky and cleverly manufactured sequences to create the mood of suspense and laughter. One instance wherein Pluto eyes a gold fish with the suspicion that the finny creature is giving him some back talk is a riot of amusement. The whole affair is topnotch Disney stuff.—Running time, eight minutes.

Brave Little Tailor (RKO Radio)

Mickey a la David, Giant Killer

Taking a tip from the Biblical giant slayer, David of the sling shot, the rodent Mickey is pictured herein as a meek and mousey little tailor who inadvertently is given the charge of downing the monstrous "Man Mountain Dean" of a Goliath who has been terrorizing a peaceful medieval countryside. Armed with nothing more formidable than did his ancient prototype carry into combat, Mickey with his trusty needle and thread ties the brute up in inglorious servitude. The animation is done in high and imaginative style, particularly the entrance of the giant upon the scene. The business of the drawing is effected along wholesome and exciting lines except for the sequence wherein Mickey is literally mouthed by the monster. This portion of the fairy tale fiction may be a little too strong for the young and squeamish to stomach. However, on the whole the entire fabrication will have the legion of Mickey Mouse fans rooting lustily for their champion.—Running time, nine minutes.

Lights! Action! Lucas! (Paramount)

Different Band Act

Decidedly different in the presentation of this musicale by Clyde Lucas and his smoothly synopated orchestra from the usual run of band act setups, this melody turn presents several moments of short subject ingenuity and tantalizing tune making. Instead of the perennial hotel locale or night club spot for the act's bandstand location, Maestro Lucas and his lads are picked up at a motion picture studio in the process of filming some of their orchestrations. Interwoven into the melodic business is an interesting bit of on the set investigation with just enough of the behind the scenes ritual to intrigue the movie fan. The programme offered is a varied one and ranges from a comic novelty number up to and including a Hawaiian specialty, shag tune and waltz arrangement.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Violent Is the Word for Curly (Columbia)

Minor Stoogian Stuff

This latest assault on the nation's funnybone from the concerted comic efforts of the Three Stooges is "violent" enough but scarcely aimed to score the bull's eye mark for laughs that the trio of lads has been accustomed to make in their previous comedies. In this instance, the boys are first seen as service station attendants who lose out at their stand because of their overzealous devotion to their calling. On the loose, they are mistaken as a visiting delegation of college professors. Higher education and low comedy meet in a mad tussle with the advancement of learning being thrown for a considerable setback. Hardly one of the best Stooze slapstick shorts, this film will cause the boys' calculated legion of admirers to waver a bit in their devotion to the Stoogian art.—Running time, 18 minutes.

The Whalers (Disney - RKO Radio)

A Scream

Down to the sea in ships go Captain Mickey and his trusty crew of Donald and the Goof. The main treat of the subject depicts the Goof's goofy efforts to harpoon a whale. When this delightful creature becomes a cartoon version of Jonah, the acme of laughs is reached. Not far behind in comedy value is Donald who is just as excitable on the broad expanse of the sea as on terra firma. The whole piece is salted with a rich flavoring of honest laughter.—Running time, eight minutes.

Hollywood Graduation (Columbia)

Fair

The trick has been done before by this company in its "Hollywood Picnic" of last season. The business is to have wellknown film personalities cartooned with all their distinguishing character traits quite open to recognition. This time the screen favorites are attending a graduation exercise and the drawings picture them in several amusing situations. If the subject's forerunner met with successful audience reaction, it is reasonable to expect that this newest spoofing of the Hollywood scene should be greeted with equally positive pleasure. The degree of audience acceptance depends on individual awareness of the cartoon characters and their distinctive personality trademarks.—Running time, seven minutes.

"Ragtime Band" Draws 750,000 in Five Weeks

"Alexander's Ragtime Band" concluded its record-breaking five-week run at the Roxy Theatre, New York, Thursday night with attendance for the engagement totalling more than 750,000 and the gross aggregating about $340,000.

The daily attendance for the fifth week was Friday, 14,200; Saturday, 23,663; Sunday, 24,418; Monday, 23,628, and Tuesday, 12,388, making a total for the five days of 98,297. The total attendance for the first four weeks was 636,253, and the gross was $285,372. The gross for the first five days of the fifth week was $43,394. The picture is the first to have played more than four weeks at the Roxy.

Due to holdover demands, Twentieth Century-Fox announced, 378 prints of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" have been turned out, an all-time high for the company for any single production.

Symphonic Films, Inc., which has a re-leasing contract with Paramount for six one-reel subjects, is negotiating with the company to handle a three-reel musical, "Slavinka," produced by Frederick Feher with an orchestra of 122 musicians.

'Politics' Charged In Venice Festival

by JOSEPH D. RAVOTTO in Rome

Three awards, including one which was described as a "camouflaged Horsconcour Medal," were won by United States at the Venice Film Festival which ended this week.

Harold Smith, European representative for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, termed the award for "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" a "camouflage" in protest against awarding the Mussolini Cup to the "German Olympia." He was joined in the protest by Neville Kerney, British delegate to the festival. They contended that "German Olympia" is not a feature but is documentary in nature.

American films, Mr. Smith declared, drew the greatest applause from the audience present. He then charged that "politics" dictated the awarding of the cup to the German picture.

Norma Shearer, for her work in "Marie Antoinette," shared the Volpi Cup with Leslie Howard, who was designated for his work in G. B. Shaw's "Pygmalion." "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" shared the National Fascist Party Cup with "Giuseppe Verdi," an Italian film. The British took the City of Venice Cup with "Drums," an Alexander Korda production.

Additional awards to United States films were listed in a United Press dispatch from Venice. The Press association reported the awards included a plaque to the Farm Security Administration's "The River" for the best documentary film. Paramount's "Sinbad the Sailor Meets Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" was declared the best animated cartoon, and received a plaque. Medals for the best all around cast were awarded to Warner Brothers' "Jezebel" and RKO's "Vivacious Lady," for the best interpretation to Universal's "The Rage of Paris," and for the best technique to United Artists' "Goldwyn Follies."

Liquidation Petition For Harman-Ising Denied

A petition for immediate liquidation of Harman-Ising, filed by a group of creditors, was denied Tuesday by Leon R. Yankwich, United States district court judge in Hollywood.

The petitioners said it was their belief that the cartoon company could not be successfully reorganized under Section 77B, but the court ordered the company to file a reorganization plan within 30 days. Mr. Yankwich also informed the group that two proposals were being considered by the company, one to finish pictures in work with fresh capital and the other to place the corporation under contract to an unnamed producer.

JAPANESE RENTALS UP; PRODUCTION DECLINING

Economic Pressure Forcing Increases Up to 20 Per Cent; Newsreels Hold Popularity

by HIROMU TOMINAGA
in Tokyo

Affected by the current emergency situation, and the general trend of business operation, film rentals for Japanese motion pictures have shown a tendency to advance by as much as 20 per cent. While it was generally anticipated that the raising of film rentals would be effected sooner or later, due to the financial difficulties of various domestic film companies caused by the increased price of raw film and various materials for film production since last year, they have none the less been operating until now without increasing rentals in spite of the prospect of fewer pictures and the recent legislation limiting programs to three hours.

As a result, however, of the probability now indicated that the general emergency situation will continue, domestic film producing-distributing companies are considering seriously announcing increases up to 20 per cent in order to tide over the present difficulty. Meantime, the theatres except first-runs and those of major category, are struggling under unusually bad conditions. They have to operate under the increased burden of admission and show taxes, and to take every possible means to curtail their running expenses. Many local houses of lesser rank are becoming unable to operate at a profit.

On the other hand, the production activity of various domestic film producing companies has shown a marked decline, particularly since April in spite of being in the advantageous position of availing themselves of the current situation confronting the foreign film distributing firms who have long been unable to import pictures. As reasons for such inactivity of the Japanese companies, the indecisive production plan to meet the three hour law and the lack of unification in the planning of production schedules at each studio, are cited, as well as the markedly low supply of raw film which has hampered our film production to a great extent.

Since the beginning of April, Daito has released 16 pictures, Shochiku 13, Nikkatsu 10, Shinko 9, Toho 8, Zensho 6 and Kyokuto 4, making a total of 66. Except Daito and Shochiku, others hardly have been able to produce sufficient films to meet the demand for regular release of the theatres of their respective circuits.

In the case of Nikkatsu, the poorer supply as compared to its normal production efficiency may be attributed to the long continued internal fracas between the company and its creditors, which finally forced K. Negishi, head of its Tokyo studio out of its board of directors. However, the trouble regarding the dismissal of Negishi has now been settled by re-engaging him to assume the directorship of the Tokyo studio.

In the case of Toho, it is expected the production activity of the company may resume its former level soon because of the recent reappointment of I. Mori as production director. Improvement of its production activity is expected to follow the wholesale reform of its production organization which has just been started.

Production for Export Increases

Efforts and enthusiasm towards finding outlets for Japanese productions in the peace-restored North and Central China are shown in recent moves of Japanese film traders toward extending the market for domestic films which is stagnant due to various obstacles existing under the emergency restrictions on film activity. Favored by the direct or indirect co-operation of the governmental offices, production of photoplays, cultural and scenic films for export has become increasingly active, a trend which accounts for a striking increase in the number of export pictures registered for the past five months.

Including photoplays, cultural films, newsreels and other short subjects, the total of Japanese pictures exported as of June 4th amounted to 1,096, almost double the 602 exported during the corresponding period of the last year. Considering that it was September last year before the number of our exports reached 1,100, the number for this year is now generally expected soon to exceed 1,797 which was the total number of Japanese pictures exported during 1937. It is reported the number of feature-length Japanese photoplays exported to date is still rather low, despite a tremendous increase in the number of newsreels exported chiefly to Shanghai and other north and central key centres of China, but the Japanese film companies are concentrating on the export of our outstanding feature-length films represented, for instance, by "Gonin-no-Sekkohei," or "Five Patrols"; "Chusingura," "Kokuminno Chikai," or "The Oath of the Nation" and "The Way to Oriental Peace." Though the destinations of Japanese pictures previously were Los Angeles, Honolulu, San Paulo, etc., they will hereafter be exported to more extensive foreign markets in large number now that the Foreign Office has promised positive aid to the export of domestic films, taking over the entire business formerly carried on by the International Motion Picture Association of Japan.

Censorship Figures Show Increase

The Home Office censorship statistics completed just recently show an increase of 66 per cent in the number of motion pictures censored in Japan for 1937 as compared with 1936 figures which were reported as the record for the previous 11 years. Following is a table covering the figures of films censored for the past five years.

	Number of films censored	Number of reels	Length in Meters
1933	14,985	71,204	16,198,963
1934	17,468	80,126	18,223,908
1935	21,075	88,804	20,029,092
1936	25,008	96,383	21,905,867
1937	41,560	115,672	25,683,356

Noticeable in the above figures for 1937 is the comparatively small increase in the number of reels, and particularly of meterage, it being due to the fact that short subjects, such as newsreels, sport series, cartoons and short reel cultural pictures occupy the major proportion of pictures censored. Newsreels alone increased from 7,736 pictures totalling 1,856,158 meters in 1936 to 22,730 films totalling 5,041,055 meters in 1937. Of these 21,869 were Japanese, 734 American and 124 European. The marked increase in newsreels is laid to the extraordinary interest in the China Incident.

BLADE COMPANY AIDS CONTEST

The Toledo Blade Company is running a series of eight two-column advertisements in Toledo, Ohio, publicizing the "Movie Quiz" contest which is part of the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year drive.

The razor blade company and the Toledo Loew's theatres have also arranged a contest to select 12 Toledo girls as "Movie Queens."

report of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

With company officers and directors in several film firms renewing activity in the market, the S.E.C. showed that Joseph M. Schenck, Fox board chairman, disposed of 19,600 shares and Darryl F. Zanuck, production chief, of 10,000 shares of common in their corporation. These were the biggest sales in several months.

Throughout the month, Mr. Schenck reduced his investment. By a series of 16 transactions, he cut his holdings to 129,843 shares of common. The largest transaction was the disposal of 4,100 shares July 2nd. He retains 23,284 shares of the $1.50 cumulative preferred.

Mr. Zanuck sold his stock in five lots the biggest being 3,300, on July 16th. At the end of the month his holdings comprised 152,130 shares of common and 21,946 of the preferred.

Other film stock transactions reported to the commission were:

Gurdon W. Wattles of New York, director, sold 400 shares of Pathe common, retaining 800 at the end of the month; Loew's, Inc., acquired 29 more shares of Loew's Boston Theatres common; Daniel M. Sheaffer of Philadelphia, director, acquired 600 Universal Corp. voting trust certificates; while P. D. Cochrane of New Rochelle, director, reported that a partnership in which he is interested sold 688 Universal Pictures Co. certificates of the No. 1 series and 1,408 of the No. 2 series of April, 1936, along with 184 shares of second preferred stock.

The S.E.C. summary also showed S. P. Friedman of New York, officer and director, gave away $5,000 worth of Warner Bros. debentures, while Samuel Paley of Philadelphia sold 1,000 shares of CBS Class A and Herbert Bayard Swope of New York disposed of 200 shares of the same type of CBS stock.

Loew's Estimates

Loew's, Inc., will probably report a net profit equal to between $5.75 and $6 a share on its common stock for the fiscal year ended August 31st, Wall Street Journal predicted this week, explaining that showing will be after allowing for reserves expected to amount to around $2,000,000 set aside to take care of various excess studio costs. A portion of these charges accruing from prior years will be made against surplus.

This showing will compare with a net profit of $14,426,062, equal to $8.47 a share on 1,599,053 shares of common stock, in the 1937 fiscal year. In the 40 weeks ended June 9, 1938, Loew's reported a net profit of $8,352,675 or $4.80 a share.

"Although business this summer has been dull, Loew's income held up well," said the financial paper, adding:

"The company charges the year's overhead ahead to operations during the first 40 weeks, leaving the dull summer quarter clear of running expense."

Loew's has its usual number of feature films coming along for fall release. The list includes "Too Hot to Handle" with Clark Gable and Myrna Loy, "Great Waltz," based on the musical play, and "Sweethearts" with Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, made in color, continued the analysis.

Loew's has been specializing for the past year in building up the quality of its Class B pictures without increasing the cost and the results have been most successful, said the paper, citing as outstanding in this class the "Judge Hardy's Children" series including the recent "Love Finds Andy Hardy."

"These pictures have shown excellent profits by featuring little known actors or new stars and thus avoiding starting with the huge overhead that payments to a first rank star necessitates," continued the analysis.

"Another new film expected to do well is 'Listen, Darling,' with two junior stars, Freddy Bartholomew and Judy Garland. Mickey Rooney is another adolescent star built up by Loew's in the last year or so whose films are doing well. He will appear in 'Stable Mate' shortly with Wallace Beery.

Class A Films in England

Loew's is continuing its policy of making Class A features in England, thus meeting the British film quota requirements with more than mere technical compliance with the law. This policy should tend to answer British objection to the predominating position of American producers since practically all of the production money is spent in Great Britain and British casts are generally used, although a famous Hollywood star is given the lead.

"Yank at Oxford" with Robert Taylor has been a success both here and abroad. The latest production, 'Citadel,' based on the popular novel, has just been completed in England.

"Increasing interest in movie shares is exemplified with strength in Loew's which moved up three points recently. As a leader in the group, this stock receives considerable investment attention and is favored by many buyers in Times Square and Hollywood. Understood that some of those who sold moving picture stocks a few months ago have been replacing same recently in anticipation of a fairly satisfactory season. Of course, much is expected in local theatres as a result of the World's Fair and some buyers are taking a long pull attitude toward stocks like Loew's and Paramount," said the publication.

Dividends Declared

The board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation at its meeting last Thursday declared a cash dividend of 37½¢ per share for the third quarter of 1938 on the outstanding preferred stock, payable September 30, 1938, to stockholders of record at the close of business September 20, 1938. The board also declared a cash dividend of 50¢ per share on the outstanding common stock, payable September 30, 1938, to stockholders of record at the close of business September 20, 1938.

The board of directors of Pathe Film Corporation declared a quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share on the $7 convertible preferred stock, payable October 1, 1938, to stockholders of record September 23.

United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., declared a regular quarterly dividend for stockholders of record September 1, payable September 15, of $1.25 per share at the rate of five per cent on preferred stock.

The second best August in the history of the network has been marked by Columbia Broadcasting, with the billings for the month aggregating $1,423,865. However, the August, 1938, billings are below the mark established for the same month last year, which was $1,955,280. The decline is attributable to the fact that last August was an unusual one for CBS, it being 68.6 per cent ahead of August, 1936.

The CBS cumulative billings for the first eight months of the year amounted to $18,373,777, down two per cent compared to the cumulative billings for the same period last year, which were $18,746,957.

Mutual's billings for the month, and the cumulative total, are far above last year's marks. August, 1938, billings for this network amounted to $164,625.80, compared to $96,629.27 for the same month last year, a 70.4 per cent gain. The billings for the year to date are $1,673,913.08, compared to $1,353,707.21 last year, a 29.7 per cent increase.

Radio Networks Optimistic

Reassured by signed contracts for network time in hand, broadcasters who a month ago would make no prediction, now express the opinion that radio networks generally will "have a healthy fall and winter season," it was said by Wall Street Journal.

Most of the major contracts for network time usually are signed in August and September in order to allow the programs to get under way by early fall. Both National Broadcasting Company, wholly owned subsidiary of Radio Corporation of America, and Columbia Broadcasting System, are "receiving signed contracts for fall and winter at a good rate," continued the report. These contracts, which are for a 12-month period, contain a cancellation clause permitting the program to be withdrawn after 13 weeks on 30 days' notice to the network.

$8,690,000 Time Sales

CBS recently reported signing eight new shows and nine renewals of contracts for the 12 months, starting this fall, and estimates this business aggregates $8,690,000 in time sales for this period.

All of this sum will not accrue to the network in any one quarter of the year, but is spread over the entire contract period and is subject to the cancellation clause contained in all radio broadcasting contracts.

While NBC is making no announcement as yet on business booked for the fall and winter, time sales for the combined red and blue networks of this web for the seven months ended July 30 aggregated $23,982,384, an increase of 5.9 per cent over like 1937 period. For every month so far this year NBC time sales have shown an increase over the like month a year ago.

Increase Over Last Year

In the seven months ended July 30 last, time sales for CBS aggregated $16,948,652, an 0.9 per cent increase over the like period of last year. July time sales of the network, however, showed a 31.2 per cent decrease from the same month of last year which was the best July in CBS history. Explaining this decrease in time sales the radio chain states it is due to the fact that last year advertisers continued their broadcasting later in the summer than they did this year. However, July, 1938, marked the second best July in the records of the network.

With such a sudden lowering in July time sales it is only natural that CBS would have more network time available to advertisers than NBC whose billings continued to show monthly increases over the corresponding 1937 periods, the Wall Street Journal analysis continued.

POSTHUMOUS LETTER RECEIVED FROM HAWKS

A letter from Captain Frank Hawks, aviator, was received at the headquarters of the industry's promotion drive on the day after he was killed in a flight.

In the letter, Captain Hawks praised the industry's efforts to present "good, clean entertainment" and urged that something be done to eliminate double bills and giveaways.

The letter was postmarked at Buffalo at the hour of the aviator's death.

Reverend Flanagan Guest Of Mayer at Luncheon

Reverend E. J. Flanagan, founder of Boys Town, Nebraska, subject of the picture of that title, was guest of honor at an exclusive luncheon tendered by Louis B. Mayer this week in the private dining room of the new Irving Thalberg Building at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. (A review of the feature "Boys Town" appears on page 55).

Leaders of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergy, together with representatives of the Motion Picture Producers Association, trade and newspaper publishers, MGM executives and stars of the film were shown the one reel subject, "City of Little Men," produced by MGM as a record of Father Flanagan's two year development of Boys Town.

Following the luncheon Mr. Mayer, Will Hays, Bishop James Hugh Ryan of Omaha and Rabbi Edgar Magnin of Hollywood paid tribute to Father Flanagan, emphasizing the importance of his work among boys as a safeguard against the undermining of democracy, to which the founder of the non-sectarian institution which has graduated 4,000 young men rescued from underprivileged boyhood responded modestly.

The premiere of "Boys Town" was held Wednesday at Tri-States' Omaha Theatre, Omaha, Neb. Attending the opening were Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, the stars of the film, as well as Director Norman Taurog, Producer John Considine, Jr., Frank Whitbeck, advertising director, and Maureen O'Sullivan. Miss O'Sullivan does not appear in the picture.

Van Praag Joins Trailer-Made, Inc.

Morton Van Praag, former sales executive of Universal and National Screen Service, has joined Trailer-Made, Inc., trailer company recently formed, as general sales manager and assistant to E. Schwartz, president.

Mr. Van Praag started in the industry 20 years ago, and worked successively for General Film, Pathe, Universal, Advance Trailer Service Corporation and National Screen.

Mr. Schwartz announced this week that O. Henry Briggs, president of Pathe Film Corporation, has been elected to the board of directors of Trailer-Made, Inc.

Stevenson Is Elected New ERPI Head

T. Kennedy Stevenson, comptroller of manufacture for Western Electric Company, was elected president and a director of Electrical Research Products, Inc., at a special meeting of the board of the latter company held this week. He succeeds the late Whitford Drake, who died August 24th.

Mr. Stevenson has been associated with Western Electric for the past 24 years, the last 10 of which have been as comptroller of manufacture. He was also comptroller of Nassau Smelting and Refining Company, another Western Electric subsidiary.

He was in the employ of the American Locomotive Company for five years and was connected with Duplex Metals Company for four years as assistant treasurer, foreign representative in Europe and South America and finally as chief engineer.

Mr. Stevenson entered the distribution department of Western Electric in New York in 1914, later going to the company's St. Louis sales office. In 1919 he returned to the New York office on statistical work and two years later became assistant comptroller. He was made assistant general auditor of ERPI, in addition, when that company was formed in 1927.

20th-Fox, GB Discuss Filming

Production by GB in England for Twentieth Century-Fox is being discussed and the deal may be completed in December, when Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, intends to return to London, he said on his arrival from Europe Monday.

He denied that his discussions with the Ostrers involve resumption of negotiations for GB control by Loew's and Twentieth Century-Fox.

Mr. Schenck also said he believed the government anti-trust suit would serve "a good purpose" in that it will clarify the law and "we will know what to do and what not to do," with relation to theatre acquisition.

The company's business in England is 50 per cent better than last year and on the upgrade generally in Europe, Mr. Schenck said. He left for the coast Tuesday.

Meanwhile Arthur A. Lee, vice-president and general manager of GB, is considering calling a second meeting of American representatives of British producers early next week to discuss a promotional plan for British product to be staged in the fall and early winter.

Two Weeks' Work

Getting the record straight as it pertains to how many pictures started and finished after one has been off on a vacation is a mind-baffling job. It's particularly hard when there has been a great deal of activity as was the case during the last two weeks of August. Yet out of a welter of checking and rechecking we learn that while we were away, twenty-two films were started and twenty-three were finished. Broken down into separate weeks, this is about an average figure for this season of the year.

Five new pictures went into work at 20th Century-Fox. "The Arizona Wildcat" will present Jane Withers with Leo Carrillo, Henry Wilcoxon, Pauline Moore and Douglas Fowley. Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott, John Carradine, J. Edward Bromberg, Brian Donlevy, Jane Darwell and Donald Meek will be seen in "Jesse James." The principals in "Mr. Moto Takes a Vacation" are Peter Lorre, Virginia Field and John King. Featured players in "Kentucky" are Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan and Ralph Morgan. "Hard to Get" will have Preston Foster, Phyllis Brooks and Tony Martin as its headliners.

Warners Start Four

Warners started four pictures. Kay Francis, William Gargan and Victor Jory will be seen in "Women in the Wind." Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell are the stars of "Unfit to Print." "Nancy Drew—Detective" will feature Bonita Granville, John Litel and Frank E. Thomas. Among those cast in "Crime Is a Racket" are Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page, Billy Halop, Harold Huber and Henry O'Neill.

At Paramount work began on three productions. The principals in "Say It in French" are Olympe Bradna, Ray Milland, Irene Herve, Janet Beecher and Eric Rhodes. Gail Patrick, Otto Kruger, Robert Preston and Sidney Toler head the cast of "Disbarred." In Harry Sherman's "Frontiersman" Evelyn Venable will be featured with William Boyd, George Hayes and Russell Hayden.

Carole Lombard, James Stewart and Charles Coburn are the stars of Selznick-International's "Made for Each Other." Also for United Artists Walter Wagner began Tay Garnett's "Trade Winds." Frederic March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern and Alan Baxter are the key players. Third UA starting feature, "Topper Takes a Trip," a Hal Roach production, will offer Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Alan Mowbray and Billie Burke.

Circus Picture Started

For RKO-Radio distribution, Sol Lesser started "Peck's Bad Boy with the Circus." Tommy Kelly is teamed with Ann Gillis in the leads supported by Edgar Kennedy, Benita Hume, Spanky MacFarland and Grant Mitchell.

Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Melvyn Douglas and Robert Young head the cast of MGM's "The Shining Hour." In Universal's "The Storm" Nan Grey will be seen with Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane, Preston Foster, Tom Brown and Andy Devine.

Republic began work on "Prairie Moon" which will present Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette and Shirley Deane with David Gorcey,

SEA CRUISES PROVIDE RAILROAD SETTING

To get the proper atmospheric inspiration for "Union Pacific" which will be a railroad story and which he will produce and direct, Cecil B. DeMille has been taking his corps of writers and technical experts on week end deep sea sailing cruises up and down the Pacific Coast. There have been half a dozen or so of these cruises and to the accompaniment of ocean breezes and lapping waves, the script has been whipped into shape. The last voyage has been made and it is expected that September 15 will be the starting date of "Union Pacific."

William Pawley, Warner Richmond and Tom London.

"Miracle Racket," RKO-Radio, will present Sally Eilers, Ann Miller, Alma Krueger, Paul Guilfoyle, Jonathan Hale, Jack Arnold and Cecil Kellaway.

Oddly the completed pictures came off the lines in bunches. Paramount checked four from its active list. "The Arkansas Traveller" will feature Bob Burns with Fay Bainter, Jean Parker, John Beal, Lyle Talbot, Irvin S. Cobb and Dickie Moore. The featured players in "Illegal Traffic" are J. Carroll Naish, Mary Carlisle and Robert Preston. "Bulldog Drummond vs. Scotland Yard" will present John Howard, Elizabeth Patterson, Heather Angel, H. B. Warner, Reginald Denny and E. E. Clive. In "Thanks for the Memory," Bob Hope, Shirley Ross, Charlie Butterworth, Otto Kruger, Hedda Hopper, Roscoe Karns and Laura Hope Crews will be seen.

Four pictures were also finished at 20th Century-Fox. Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft, Slim Summerville and John Carradine are the important personalities in "Submarine Patrol." "By the Dawn's Early Light" will provide Warner Baxter, Alice Faye, Charles Winninger, Kaye Luke and Arthur Treacher as marquee adornments. Michael Whalen, Jean Rogers, Chick Chandler, Douglas Fowley and Jane Darwell are important in "A Very Practical Joke." The Jones Family are the centers of interest in "Down on the Farm."

Three at Universal

Two studios each finished three pictures. "The Last Express," a Universal Crime Clubber, will feature Kent Taylor, Adrienne Ames and Don Brody. Deanna Durbin is the star of "That Certain Age" which also lists Melvyn Douglas, Jackie Cooper, Irene Rich and Nancy Carroll in its cast. "Swing That Cheer" will present Tom Brown, Andy Devine, Robert Wilcox and Constance Moore.

For Columbia, David Loew productions finished "Flirting with Fate." It stars Joe E. Brown with Leo Carrillo, Beverly Roberts, Steffi Duna, Stanley Fields and Charles Judels. The Coronet contribution to this company's releases is "Call of the Trail" in which Buck Jones will be seen with Dorothy Fay, Kenneth Harlan, Don Douglas and Bob Kortman. On its own hook the studio finished "South of the Rio Grande" in which Charles Starrett, Ann Doran, Hal Talliaferro and Dick Curtis are featured.

Four studios each completed two productions. The MGM items are "Stablemates" and "Listen, Darling." Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney are featured in the first. Freddie Bartholomew, Judy Garland, Mary Astor, Walter Pidgeon, Scotty Beckett, Gene Lockhart and Alan Hale comprise the cast of the second.

In RKO-Radio's "A Man to Remember," Edward Ellis, Ann Shirley, Lee Bowman, Granville Bates, Harlan Briggs and Frank M. Thomas will be seen. Jack Oakie, Lucille Ball, Bradley Page, Ruth Donnelly, Ralph Forbes and Alice White are the principals in "Annabel Takes a Tour."

Monogram finished "Mr. Wong, Detective" in which Boris Karloff is featured with Grant Withers, Evelyn Brent and Maxine Jennings. Tex Ritter and Dorothy Short are the stars of "Where the Buffalo Roam."

Republic finished "Down in Arkansas" which will present the Weaver Brothers and Elvira with Pinkie Tomlin, Ralph Byrd, June Storey, Guinn Williams and Berton Churchill. Robert Armstrong, June Travis, Robert Livingston and Paul Fix will be seen in "Night Hawk."

Completing the list of finished pictures Warners wound up "Torchy in Chinatown." Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane, Tom Kennedy, Patrick Knowles, James Stephenson and Joe Cunningham will be among those seen.—GUS McCARTHY.

Excitement Trends

"The Hurricane's" hurricane, the spectacular fire sequence of "In Old Chicago," the to-do about glaciers and icebergs in "The Spawn of the North" have given vogue to the idea that vivid thrill action, nowadays, must be a part of picture production. "Too Hot to Handle" will be crowded with the quality. Darryl Zanuck is spending thousands of extra dollars on the wind storm scenes that will be an exciting part of "Suez" and Frank Lloyd is remaking scenes that the nerve tingling mass action shots in "If I Were King" shall be more sensational.

Out at Universal where they're making "The Storm," plans are being laid that there will not be one but half a dozen spectacular thrill action shots of a caliber calculated to leave spectators limp as they witness them on the screen. Listed already are an explosion on an oil-tanker in mid-ocean, the crash of a liner into an iceberg and to top all others the melodramatic action at sea fighting their way through a typhoon and later a hurricane.

Swing to Swing

There will be swing music in Deanna Durbin's next picture, "That Certain Age," but Deanna won't sing it. The hot music will be played in a sequence just added to the film by producer Joe Pasternak. Consisting of an arrangement of the title theme song it will be played by Leonard Sues on a trumpet, Buddy Pepper at the piano and Jackie Cooper at the drums. Much as the youthful vocalist wishes to sing an accompaniment there won't be any.

Warner Stresses Motion Pictures' Education Value

Ideals of public service demand that producers recognize the educating possibilities of certain types of picture subjects, Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, declared this week in a message read to 1,000 educators attending a showing of the company's historical short subjects at the Warner Hollywood theatre.

Unable to attend, Mr. Warner had John Litel, actor, read the letter which said in full: "A medium with the widespread range of the motion picture screen has an obligation over and beyond exclusive consideration of profit and loss. Ideals of public service demand that producers of films recognize the educative possibilities of certain types of picture subjects.

"Educators have come to realize that certain historical episodes around which America has built its democratic progress can be made more impressive to the younger mind and more illuminating to the adult mind by the motion picture. These educators have encouraged us in our efforts to bring these notable historical moments to life.

"Their help has inspired us to put more time, effort and money into them. The result is a series of which we, of Warner Brothers, are proud, not merely because they are interesting to audiences but because they represent part of our contribution to a better understanding of the ideals and achievements of those patriots who laid the foundation of our United States of America.

The short subjects screened were: "Romance of Robert Burns," "Song of the Nation," "Man Without a Country," "Romance of Louisiana" and "Give Me Liberty."

Schedule Second Annual Theatre Convention

The Second National Convention of the Legitimate Theatre will be held at the Hotel Astor, New York, next Tuesday and Wednesday. The program will consist of an opening luncheon, followed by a business session in the afternoon. The second day of the convention will have three sessions, morning, noon and afternoon, and close with supper and entertainment Wednesday night.

The purpose of the convention will be concentrated in an effort to establish the American Theatre Council on a permanent functioning basis, to review specific plans to revive the road, facilitate play-going, consider the results of last year's convention and to further crystallize a sentiment towards greater cooperation in every department of the legitimate theatre.

The publicity committee consists of Ned Armstrong, Arthur Levy and Alfred Tamarin.

The three story Movietone studio under construction at 10th Avenue and West 53rd Street, New York, is scheduled to be completed by September 15th and will be opened late in September, doubling the present space used by Movietone. The new structure will be used for short subject production.

OKLAHOMA JUBILEE DECLARED SUCCESS

The "August Jubilee of Movie Hits," conducted at the Criterion and Midwest, Standard first run houses in Oklahoma City, has proved a sound success and has boosted gross receipts considerably, according to Walter B. Shuttee, Standard general manager.

Special trailers were shown in all nine theatres with the major congratulating Mr. Shuttee on the "Jubilee."

Three Exhibitor Meetings Held

Three exhibitor organizations held meetings this week. They were Allied Theatre Owners of New York, which met Thursday at Syracuse; West Virginia Managers' Association, holding its fourth annual convention Monday and Tuesday at White Sulphur Springs, and Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association, which held its annual convention Wednesday and Thursday in Kansas City, Mo.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, has informed Morris Loewenstein, MPTOA secretary, that the national convention of the association has been definitely set in Oklahoma City for the month of October, with the latter part of the month now in favor for the meeting.

The Oklahoma Theatre Owners, Inc., of which Mr. Loewenstein is president, will meet at the same time the national convention is held in Oklahoma City. Fred Wehrenberg, president of the MPTO of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, has written Mr. Loewenstein that the annual meeting of his association has already been held and it cannot participate in a southwestern get-together of exhibitor associations.

The Allied meeting was attended by Edward Golden of Monogram, who was scheduled to speak; Ted O'Shea, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Milton Kusell, Paramount; William Sussman, Twentieth Century-Fox; Eddie Schnitzer, Warner Brothers; Eddie McAvoy, RKO Radio; A. Montague, Columbia; Charles Stern, United Artists; Jack Bellman, Republic, and William Scully, Universal. Discussions of the industry campaign, the government anti-trust unit, and legislative problems including a possible theatre divorce law for New York state, were held. "Radio Broadcasts vs. Exhibition" was another subject at the meeting which was held at the Hotel Syracuse.

The meeting of West Virginia managers was headed by S. J. Hyman, president; W. H. Holt, secretary-treasurer, and the following vice-presidents: Mrs. P. M. Thomas, Richard Marks, N. B. Carskadon, L. E. Rogers and R. W. Phelan. The entertainment and reception committee consisted of J. C. Shanklin, chairman; W. B. Hines, Mr. Marks, Mr. Phelan, P. L. Dysard and Mr. Rogers.

Northwest Allied plans a testimonial dinner for Mr. Golden at Minneapolis October 19th.

Republic Plans Series for Radio; MGM on Air

Republic studio will offer, as soon as the format is completed, an air show starring either Roy Rogers, new cowboy star, or Gene Autry, for a national network, it was indicated this week. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer started its second season on the air Thursday with its "Good News of 1939."

Owen Crump, Hollywood air producer, will produce the Republic radio show with Beverly Barnett, publicity man and who suggested the idea of the show to Herbert J. Yates, writing the script. The program, as now planned, will be 30 minutes long—15 minutes variety and 15 minutes of drama. Smiley Burnette will be given the second featured spot on the program. Other studio personalities will be called on.

The return of the MGM air show was featured by a preview of the film, "Boys Town," in a "Theatre of the Air" presentation. The cast included Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, stars of the picture. Others who appeared on the program were Father Flanagan, founder of Boys Town, Neb., Alice Faye, Louis B. Mayer, Fanny Brice, Frank Morgan, Hanley Stafford, Meredith Wilson's orchestra, Max Terr's chorus and Robert Young.

Coast Executives Receive Summons

Returns were filed in the federal court in New York this week by a number of marshals of the federal court in California which revealed that James P. Normanly, Louis B. Mayer, Edgar J. Mannix, Harry Rapf, Mary Pickford, Screen Gems, Inc., Columbia Pictures Corporation of California, Ltd., Adolph Zukor and Henry Herzbrun have been served with subpoenas in the government anti-trust suit.

Others served with subpoenas on the coast were Theodore J. Elias, Charles B. Mintz, George Winkler, William Goetz, Mendel Silberberg, William F. Holman, Charles Rogers, Adolph Ramisch, S. Charles Einfeld, Jack Warner and Charles Chaplin.

Additional returns indicated that unsuccessful attempts were made to serve Douglas Fairbanks, Darryl Zanuck and Joseph M. Schenck.

Meanwhile O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery filed notice on Friday that they had been retained as attorneys in the United States district court in behalf of United Artists Corporation, George I. Schaefer, Harry D. Buckley, Arthur W. Kelly, Harry J. Muller, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Dennis F. O'Brien and Edward C. Raftery.

Columbia Signs Howell

Columbia has signed Kenneth Howell for the role of Edgar in "Girls' School," and Walter Merrill, Hank Warden and Horace Murphy for parts in "Stranger from Arizona," formerly titled "Phantom Trail."

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The while great corporations of this great motion picture business are going ahead with the spending of a million dollars to advertise their fall line, the movies' Mary Pickford, herself, is engaging in a bit of advertising for her own wares, Mary Pickford Cosmetics.

Mary Pickford's venture into the cosmetic business, which will get under way this fall after a year of preparation, will be signalized by a national advertising campaign in women's magazines, supplemented by outdoor and newspaper space in key cities of the east. The promotional program will be handled by Campbell-Ewald Company.

Mary Pickford Cosmetics, Inc., is a brain-child of "America's Sweetheart," who conceived the idea of manufacturing beauty products while she was still starring in motion pictures. From specifications to suit her own needs, the star had cosmetics of various kinds made up for her own use and these formulas were developed further by experience through the years. Miss Pickford while in films endorsed but few cosmetics, and as a result fashioned a good background from which to launch her own business. She probably hasn't loaned her name to any such since she went in for calendar art for "Pompeian Cream," in the 1915 period.

It was about a year ago that she took the first steps, in the formation of Mary Pickford Cosmetics, Inc., of which she is the president and very active head. Associated with her is H. J. Emptage, who for the past 17 years has been with the Andrew Jergens Company and Jergens-Woodbury Sales Corporation. He is vice-president and general manager of the new corporation.

Offices are to be opened at 580 Fifth Avenue, where Miss Pickford will establish her headquarters. She is planning to devote a substantial part of her time to the new business.

The Pickford line will include, at the start, cleansing cream, tissue cream, cold cream, skin freshener, beauty soap, face powder in six shades, rouge in six shades, and lipsticks to harmonize. Other products may be added.

The line will be packaged in a color combination of white and Wedgewood blue. A cameo profile of Miss Pickford will be the trademark. Miss Pickford's well-known face will also be featured in introductory ads.

Mary Pickford cosmetics will be distributed through drug and department stores.

Meanwhile, David Selznick hopes to get Mary to make a motion picture for their United Artists company.

They say sales are up 150% over last year.

AN ODD FORM OF PICKETING

Gilbert Courshon, manager of the Embassy, Neenah, Wis., this week was fined $1 and costs by Justice L. O. Cooke on charges of assaulting Edwin Hockbolzer, 16, who had picketed the theatre with a sign reading: "This Theatre Is Unfair to the Citizens of Neenah."

The picketing was declared to be in protest against the closing of the house and was conducted on the day the theatre was opened for a one-day stage show. The Embassy is Neenah's only theatre.

The court, in its opinion, suggested that "those dissatisfied with local theatre conditions refrain from future picketing and direct their energy in an effort to organize citizens and business men and secure a modern theatre if disappointed in the operation and management of another's legitimate theatre business."

Some 25 years ago, three young lads went to the St. Louis sector to make two motion pictures, entitled "Perils of the Plains" and "Raiders of the Mexican Border," in both of which the career of Missouri's notorious desperado, Jesse James, figured prominently.

The finances of the young men were slim, their equipment meager, and the results of their efforts not particularly outstanding. But, they went on to bigger things, the while the Missouri countryside thereabouts went back to a normal existence. The three were the Brothers Warner, Harry, Jack and Albert.

Now Hollywood has gone once again to Missouri, and again to picture the exploits of Jesse James and his outlaw band of Civil War days in their former shooting grounds.

Director Henry King is now on the scene at Pineville, but under much different circumstances, and with the vast resources of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation for the making of the new Jesse James picture. Already, before a camera has turned, Director King from Hollywood has spent more money on the project than the natives of drowsy little Pineville in southwestern Missouri, which will be the center of the action, had any idea was in circulation.

First the director took care of the comfort of himself and his Hollywood stars by air-conditioning the entire hotel at Noel, ten miles from Pineville. Next he completely disrupted the plans of the United States Government's WPA in the district by employing practically everyone in the community for miles around who was willing to work at considerably better wages than the WPA pays. He even built a four-inch cushion of soil over the concrete pavements so that the pseudo outlaws from Hollywood, when they ride in the picture, can gallop into town and depart in the traditional "cloud of dust."

George R. Hart, former owner of motion picture theatres in Florissant, a suburb of St. Louis, is now known as the "Marrying Justice of the Peace," who will perform a wedding ceremony for anyone at any time under any conditions—well, almost any conditions. However, he now finds he has on his books about $3,000 of credit extended to persons anxious to wed but without the price or license or the judge's fee. Mr. Hart will exchange the wedded couples' promissory notes for a second-hand movie screen and some old chairs.

After patrons had departed from a Negro theatre in Richmond, Va., Otis Taylor, usher, saw one man sleeping in a back row seat. Shaking failed to awaken him, and a wet towel was applied to his face. It worked well. The sleeper arose, whipped out a pistol and fired it, sending Taylor to the hospital.

Now, more than ever before, copyrighters—including those in motion pictures—should remember that the sins of the fathers are visited upon the sons to the third and fourth, and maybe the 20th generations.

If they choose to disregard this warning, their descendants may be embarrassed to tears, for very shortly Westinghouse Electric will deposit on the New York World's Fair grounds a "time capsule" containing a "cross-section of our times." The expectations are that archaeologists will dig the thing up 5,000 years hence, and from newsreel films and other records learn how we live today.

And they'll probably laugh and laugh and laugh.

The average Latin-American no longer puts off until tomorrow what can be done today. He has traded his guitar for a radio and his faithful steed for a second-hand car, and has almost forgotten the old custom of courting his girl beneath the balcony. Instead, he now takes his girl to the movies, though mother still insists on her ancient right of going along.

These are the observations of Albert K. Dawson of the American Express Travel Service, who is back in New York from a tour of seven South American countries.

Typewriter or linotype manufacturers, or both, might do well to discontinue placing the letters "i" and "o" in juxtaposition in copy furnished Cincinnati newspapers. Following closely on the heels of a "shirt wave" radio story recently, another Cincinnati daily carried the headline on the theatre page: "New shirts at Cincinnati theatres."

"Who said reissues are only applicable to theatres?" asks Roy Rowe, operating theatres at Burgaw, Elizabethtown and Bethel, N. C., Mr. Rowe pointing with pride to his third term in the North Carolina Senate. We wonder, however, if he is not mistaken about the term "reissues." He seems to be enjoying rather what the motion picture industry knows as "extended playing time."

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Suez

(20th Century-Fox)
Historical Romance

Such pictures as "The Bowery," "House of Rothschild," "The Mighty Barnum," "Clive of India," "Cardinal Richelieu," "Lloyds of London" and "In Old Chicago" are symbolic of Darryl F. Zanuck's exceptional talent to give special entertainment significance to film stories that have a historic setting or which are based on political, economic or social subjects and the vivid picturesque personalities who participated in them.

It is a matter of record that Ferdinand de Lesseps inspired and carried through to completion the Suez Canal which connects the Mediterranean and Red Sea. Always important, it is, in the light of today's happenings, the key water-way of the world.

In that direct and complete way in which Mr. Zanuck in cooperation with his corps of aides does things, with all modern advances in the science, art and technique of production enlisted, with talented and commercially important screen personalities assigned to play the actual and fictitious roles, with historical facts blended with imaginative phases, "Suez" is being brought to realism on a scale that should assure its becoming one of the most important entertainment events in recent years.

Thematically it will tell the story of the building of the canal. But it is not merely a story of ditch digging. Substantiating amplification will detail a welter of political intrigue, the rise and fall of personal ambitions, the conflict of romance that lead a man and woman to the realization of their separate dreams, the dangers of war and peril in the desert. These will be action and glamour, heroism and sacrifice and spectacle, too. As he created the amazing fire sequence for "In Old Chicago," Mr. Zanuck has created a sensational storm scene for "Suez" in which a desert typhoon, fully as thrilling as "Hurricane's" big wind, sweeps death and destruction in its path.

The story's time is that of the president of the French Republic Louis Napoleon, Bonaparte's nephew who sought to emulate his uncle and become emperor. The locales are Paris and the canal site. Except for the fictitious character which Annabella plays, all the principals will re-create actual historic figures. The notables de Lesseps, Countess, later Empress Eugenie, Louis Napoleon, Prince Said for whom Port Said was named, England's Prime Minister Disraeli, Sir Malcolm Cameron, Victor Hugo and Bismarck will live again.

While the historical identities may be vague to many, the identities of the actual screen players certainly are not. Thus the cast will have Tyrone Power, direct from "In Old Chicago," "Marie Antoinette" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band"; Loretta Young, not inexperienced in portraying historical characterizations, and Annabella, seen earlier in "The Baroness and the Butler." The featured player roster lists J. Edward Bromberg, Joseph Schildkraut, Henry Stephenson, Sig Ruman, Sidney Blackmer, Maurice Moscovitch, Nigel Bruce, Miles Mander, George Zucco and Leon Ames. Others who will be prominent are Rafaela Ottiano, Victor Varconi, Georges Renavent, Frank Reicher, Carlos de Valdez, Albert Conti, Brandon Hurst, Marcelle Corday, Montague Shaw and Leonard Mudie.

Director-in-chief of this $2,000,000 production on which Gene Markey is serving as associate producer is Allan Dwan, who was assisted by Otto Brower and Stanley Logan. The screen play was written by Phillip Dunne and Julien Josephson, and is based on a story by Sam Duncan. Pevrell Marley, who photographed many of Mr. Zanuck's historical romances as well as "In Old Chicago," is the man behind the camera.

The Arkansas Traveler

(Paramount)
Comedy

During Bob Burns career with Paramount, he has been seen in featured support roles. His work in pictures, his radio broadcasts and his newspaper contributions have won him a large following. In "The Arkansas Traveller" he will be given his first opportunity to be the central figure in a film, the one who carries the show. The vehicle chosen is one that should give Burns many chances to display those peculiar talents of his which, together with his whimsical philosophies, have made him a screen figure to be depended upon for wholesome entertainment.

He is cast in the role of a tramp printer, a now almost legendary character. His job in this case is to help a widow, her young daughter and small son to run their small town newspaper. The attempt to do so brings him into conflict with a pair of rural politicians who are plotting to mulct the community. They are determined to get the widow's paper by any means possible, to carry out their scheme. Busy in preventing this, Burns must also act as a grownup cupid for the daughter and boy friend, who, for theatrical purposes, necessarily must be the son of the political boss. When it is discovered that the paper has a radio franchise, Burns, with a bit of help from the local constable and the boy but with a lot more from an army of hobo pals, builds the station in time to save the property for the widow, foil the plotters and of course make it possible for the boy and girl to join hands.

In support of Burns are Fay Bainter, Jean Parker and Dickie Moore. Lyle Talbot is the political boss, Porter Hall the mayor and John Beal his son who becomes Burns' ally. Irvin S. Cobb will be seen in the role of the constable and the hobo contingent is headed by Jeff Davis, famed as "King of the Hoboes," to whom came much publicity from his excursion into pictures.

Direction is in the hands of Alfred Santell, whose most recent credits are "Cocoanut Grove" and "Breakfast for Two."

Release date: Oct. 14, 1938.

Wanted by the Police

(Monogram)
Melodrama

To support himself and mother and enable his sister to marry her policeman fiance, a boy takes a job in a garage. Soon he is the innocent but central figure in the stolen car racket. Details of that criminal business, how he figures in an incident that eradicates one gang and the hero of another incident that rounds up the members of a second, is the action theme of "Wanted by the Police."

Frankie Darro will be the star of the picture, the first of a series of four in which he will appear for Monogram. The romantic content of the story will be shared by Robert Kent and Evalyn Knapp, who last was in Republic's "Bulldog Edition." The rival gangs will be headed by Matty Fain and Willy Costello. Lillian Elliott will be seen as Darro's mother. Other members of the cast are Don Rowan, Sam Bernard, Maurice Hugo, Thelma White, in pictures before but recently in New York musical shows, Walter Merrill and Ralph Peters.

Being produced under the direction of Howard Bretherton, the original story used was written by Donn Mullaly and Renaud Hoffman, with the screenplay by Wellyn Totman.

Release date: Sept. 16, 1938.

The Mad Miss Manton

(RKO Radio)
Familiar Stuff Refurbished

Over at RKO-Radio, where P. J. Wolfson is producing "The Mad Miss Manton," Nan Blake, whose job it is to give out advance information about the venture, describes it thus: "It will combine all the best entertainment and commercial values of a hectic romantic love story, the excitement of a baffling murder mystery, the thrills of a detective yarn and the laughs of a high-speed comedy, as it details the exploits and adventures of a madcap society girl and her gang of debutantes, when, in spite of police and newspapers, she sets out to capture a killer. It will be played by a grand pair of stars and a swell supporting cast. The director in charge, Leigh Jason, knows his way around, and Philip G. Epstein knows how to whip up the right kind of screen plays as 'The Bride Walks Out' and 'Grand Jury' prove."

The story is as Miss Blake described. The form chart on the stars bears her out. Last in "Always Goodbye" for 20th Century, Barbara Stanwyck has appeared for Radio in "Breakfast for Two," "Plough and the Stars," "The Bride Walks Out" and "Annie Oakley." She starred in Goldwyn's "Stella Dallas." Henry Fonda is in "Blockade," "Spawn of the North," and was in "Jezebel" and "I Met My Love Again." Sam Levene, comedian, was seen in "After the Thin Man" and "Yellow Jack." The quintet of "debutantes" includes Frances Mercer, Vicki Lester, Whitney Bourne, Eleanor Hansen, Catherine O'Quinn and Linda Terry. Other featured players in the cast of thirty are Ann Evers, Hattie McDaniel, Paul Guilfoyle, William Corson and Penny Singleton.

It is the first production effort of Mr. Wolfson, known as the author or collaborator on such screen plays as "Vivacious Lady," "Shall We Dance," "That Girl from Paris" and "The Bride Walks Out." The two last-named are numbered among Jason's directing credits.

Release date: Oct. 7, 1938 (tentative).

"Chips"

First moves have already been made on the production of the new MGM opus "Good-bye, Mr. Chips," which goes on to the floor shortly with Robert Donat in his second leading role for MGM. The production unit have been shooting school scenes in the grounds of Repton School, noted English Public School.

Donat has the role of the kindly schoolmaster in Hilton's best-seller, through whose eyes filmgoers will see the pageant of adolescence in a great English Public School.

Repton has been chosen as a representative specimen, and three hundred of her scholars returned prematurely from their summer vacation to act in their term-time roles in this new MGM opus.

Victor Saville is in charge of the unit, which lived under canvas in the playing fields during shooting.

Bergner Drowned

For the primary purpose of drowning Elisabeth Bergner—purely for the dramatic objective of the film—the "Stolen Life" unit moved last week from Pinewood, Bucks, England, to the coast of Brittany, France.

In the film Miss Bergner plays a dual role, that of twin sisters, one of whom is drowned in a fishing boat caught in a storm.

With the completion of shooting on this sequence the unit moved off to Chamonix, where mountain backgrounds were to be photographed. On the conclusion of these two little foreign interludes the unit will return to England, where two further weeks will be spent shooting in the studio.

Miss Bergner's film, in which Michael Redgrave is her leading man, is being produced by Orion Productions and is directed by Dr. Czinner.

Hyde Park Scene

Hyde Park, one of central London's lungs, with its bandstands and the world famous Orator's Corner at Marble Arch, forms the background for certain sequences in "The Return of the Frogs," which has been concluded at Beaconsfield recently under the direction of Maurice Elvey and the Imperator-British-Lion mark.

Gordon Harker, noted Cockney character actor, has the leading role of Inspector Elk.

Strange Cargo

The decrepit paddle boat, the S. S. Zaire, grizzled veteran of the "Zambooli River," crocodile-infested stream of the West African jungle, has been photographed for most of the sequences shot by the "Old Bones of the River" unit on the placid waters of the creek which runs through Sound City, Shepperton. Dramatic figure and central location in the Will Hay comedy, this ancient launch has been built up on oil-drums, has wheels constructed from disused

Two hundred Negroes and colored actors have been taking part at Shepperton in frenzied scenes of tribal warfare, joustings and junketings.

The film is being directed by Marcel Varnel for Gainsborough, and released under the MGM banner.

Flight to Venice

Fourteen-year-old "Elephant Boy" Sabu flew to Venice in order to be present last week at the Venice Film Festival where "The Drum" was screened. In London it was reported that Samuel Goldwyn will lend Sigrid Gurie to Alexander Korda for a role in Sabu's newest film, "Burmese Silver."

"Prison" Premiere

A West End showing is promised for the London Film Production "Prison Without Bars," and it is hoped that a New York screening will be arranged to take place at the same time, probably in early September. A rough cut of the film has convinced the studio of its box office potentialities, and speeding up has been applied to the final processes. The film was directed by Brian Desmond Hurst.

Big Advertising Campaign For "Drums" Planned by UA

One of the most extensive advertising, publicity and exploitation campaigns ever accorded a British production will be undertaken by United Artists for Alexander Korda's "Drums," the company said this week.

The $60,000 magazine advertising campaign appropriation includes a four-color page in the American Weekly, single pages, some in two colors, in Life, Look, Saturday Evening Post, Liberty, Collier's, Scholastic, Parents' Magazine and in eight "fan" magazines. The combined circulation of these is about 40,000,000.

In addition, the cooperative advertising which the company ordinarily conducts for its most important releases will appear in daily newspapers in 59 cities, representing the 48 states, and calculated to reach some 60,000,000. A trade paper campaign is also planned.

The native star Sabu arrives in this country September 12th for an extended schedule of personal appearances. The picture will open at the Radio City Music Hall in New York, September 22nd or 29th and special sales effort will be devoted to it.

BRITISH TRADE PROBLEM HINGES ON "NON-FLAMMABLE" DEFINITION

Setting of Film Standards Would End Confusion Over License and Censorship Con- trol by City Governments

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

It is perhaps not uncharacteristic of the British mentality and scene that major issues of a great industry should hinge upon the definition of a word. That precisely is the case with regard to the British film industry and the term "non-flammable." Upon the exact and authoritative and legal definition of that term hang not only purely commercial considerations of extra trade competition, but the no less vital one of human safety.

The absence of a precise and constitutional definition of the term from the 1909 Act has caused and sustained a state of muddled confusion as baffling to our legislators as to the trade and public themselves, for it has failed to define the control which administrative authorities have the right to exercise over the bulk of unlicensed film shows.

Recent developments in the non-flammable situation in Britain have sharpened the issue, and it is not unlikely that one of the first tasks to face the Home Office Advisory Committee, over which presides the Lord Stonehaven, will be to consider the insistence on a standard from which there shall be no deviation. With the return of many members of the Committee from their summer vacation, an early meeting is likely, and it is understood that certain members, notably Mr. Reginald Stamp, Chairman of the London County Council Entertainment Committee, are anxious to have the matter settled sharply and finally. Until licensing authorities are enabled to go back to a constitutional precedent or a legalized definition, the Home Office, governing body administering the Act, cannot hope to secure unity.

Licensing and Control Involved

Bound up not indirectly with the "non-flam" issue, inasmuch as it is directly bound up with the 1909 Act, are the questions of advance theatre licensing and seat price control, on both of which subjects some impatience has been shown by the London County Council, in regard to the latter, by announcing its intention to promote special legislation on the matter. Pressure on these and other points will certainly impel the Government either to take or promote action in the direction of consistent legislation throughout the country.

During the last few days the "non-flam" problem has been brought to a head by the action of the Surrey County Council in claiming control over allegedly "non-flam" film exhibitions given in unlicensed premises. The body concerned, and its parent organization, have challenged the Council ban and threatened a legal fight.

The decision of the Council, with its resultant controversy, probably spurred on the British Standards Institution to the preparation and circulation to trade bodies of a draft specification defining "non-flam" film. Their proposals are in line with the International Standards

ITALIAN PRODUCT SET FOR ENGLAND

An officially sponsored organization, B.M.D., Ltd., headed by several Italian public figures, plans to market a number of dubbed Italian pictures in England. An exchange of British films to be shown in Italy is reported to be part of the agreement but plans have not been elaborated. The first film to be released under the plan is "Tonight at Eleven," which is completed. Fifteen others are promised by Z. de L. Bakanowski, managing director of the new company.

Institution's definition, and lay down that safety or "non-flam" film shall be the term applied to slow burning film the burning time of which for a 35 mm. strip is not less than 45 seconds for film .08 mm. thick or over, or not less than 30 seconds for film within that limit. Stock should be deemed "difficult to ignite" if it does not ignite within 10 minutes in a temperature of 300 degrees centigrade. The proposal is intended to apply both to the 35mm. and 16mm. stock.

The trade would welcome an unequivocal definition with its inevitable sequel of sharpened control, for it would put an immediate bar up against the increasing menace of non-theatrical shows given under the auspices of churches, chapels, drinking saloons, political organizations, cooperative bodies, advertisers and so forth, shows often given in premises in which flammable film shows would never be permitted, and which are in the highest degree dangerous, and a direct provocation to potential panic.

The Surrey incident arose when a local—Sutton—Society were informed that it would be necessary for full cinematograph licenses to be taken out for shows given by them on what was alleged to be "non-flam" film. It was the contention of the Council that all "non-flam" stock so far shown is actually flammable, and that no exception could be made where that type of film was shown. They have no jurisdiction, of course, over private houses, but claim control over performances to which members of the public are admitted either by payment or otherwise, and insist upon certain provisions in regard to exits, gangways, seats, etc., exactly as in theatres. (The Sutton shows have been given in a converted stable). The amateur body involved and its parent organization, the Institute of Amateur Photographers, contend that the Council have no jurisdiction over private shows.

Though the matter at first sight might appear to have but little trade significance, inasmuch as it centres upon an obscure amateur activity, trade interest is widespread and intense, because the whole question is bound up inextricably with the non-commercial film show. On this aspect, and with the determination that outside shows should not be permitted, neither from the point of view of trade competition nor that of public safety, to make use of a loophole in the Act. British exhibitors are not only watching the matter, but will bring it to the forefront of their discussions in the immediate future.

The Sub-standard Cinematograph Association, trade body embracing the manufacture of substandard film and apparatus, is likewise interesting itself.

London County Council, it will be remembered, recently took upon itself the right to exercise control over the showing of "non-flam" films in licensed theatres. The case was reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of August 13th. The Council hinted at precipitate action if a certain licensed theatre showed an uncensored film on "non-flam" stock. The decision of the theatre not to show the film, prevented the hearing of a test case of paramount importance. It is true that the matter in question was bound up rather with the question of censorship than that of public safety, but the test of control over film stock, i.e., "non-flam," not embraced under the 1909 Act, would have nation wide repercussions.

Danish Film Tax Used For Educational Films

Danish motion picture theatre owners paid fees totaling Kr. 77,000 to the government in 1937, according to a report received by the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce, Washington. Of this amount Kr. 55,000 will be divided among various social service organizations and Kr. 10,000 will be used to produce a traffic propaganda film.

The surplus of the Danish film censor totaling Kr. 87,000 for 1937 will be used as follows: Kr. 70,000 to Dansk Kulturfilm (Danish Cultural Film) for the production of an educational film; Kr. 10,000 for a propaganda film showing fire preventive measures and Kr. 7,000 for a film about Danish radium stations.

Victory To Produce Eight McCoy Features

Sam Katzman, president of Victory Pictures, announced this week that his company will produce and distribute eight Tim McCoy westerns for the new season.

The titles and release dates are "Lightning Carson Rides Again," October 10th; "Singing Six Guns," November 25th; "Outlaw's Paradise," January 10th; "Phantom Guns," February 25th; "Texas Wildcats," April 10th; "Pecos Troublemakers," May 25th; "Return of the Terror," July 25th, and "The Fighting Renegade," August 10th.

16mm Rights Obtained

Post Pictures Corporation of New York has obtained the exclusive 16mm rights to the feature, "The Fight for Peace," from Warwick Pictures, Inc., and the short subject, "Dawn to Dawn," from Cameron O'Day Macpherson.

May Direct Only

Jessie Matthews, English actress, and Sonnie Hale have become permanent directors of the new company, Hale's Productions, Ltd., which will produce stage plays. The incorporation of the new firm is seen in London as presaging the approaching end of Miss Matthews' screen career. The first stage offering of the company will be "Stardust."

Columbia

COUNSEL FOR CRIME: Otto Kruger, Jacqueline Wells, Douglass Montgomery—Very good. The kind of picture that draws better on the second day due to word of mouth advertising.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

MURDER IN GREENWICH VILLAGE: Fay Wray, Richard Arlen—Just fair. Made for and played on a double bill.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

OLD WYOMING TRAIL, THE: Charles Starrett, Barbara Weeks, Donald Grayson—The Starrett series while altogether different in stories can always be summed up the same. Lots of action, excellent music. Good western.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

PAID TO DANCE: Don Terry, Jacqueline Wells—Good enough for the best half of a double bill. This Don Terry is well liked by our patrons.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, Jean Parker, John Howard—I will donate ten bucks to fund to tear down Columbia's prison set as they seem to make only gangster type and prison pictures on their schedule. I am surprised they don't go to making their westerns on this set, as they make about seventy per cent of their product crook type pictures. It must be their environment. Surely they should mix with people like Fox is doing in making a picture here in Missouri and I'll wager a century note they go back to the coast with an entirely different attitude towards old Missouri. It would pay this company to get those writers of tiers off St. Nicholas Ave. and write a story about people who have never been in prison. Columbia Pictures, just note the titles. "Convicted," "Extortion," "Reformatory," "The Shadow," "Under Suspicion," "When G-Men Step In," "Women in Prison," "Homicide Bureau," "I Am the Law," "Juvenile Court," "Who Killed Gail Preston," Compare one of their western titles like "Outlaws of the Prairie" with another title from another company. Such as "The Man from Music Mountain." Then, ask yourself which picture the kids want to see and parents and teachers who don't come to your theatre will send their children to see. Why, oh, why, Mr. Columbia, don't you get someone in your studio without a prison or a crook complex.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar's Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Rural patronage.

ROLLING CARAVANS: Jack Luden, Buzz Barton, Eleanor Stewart—If there are no "Hopalong's" or Starretts available, you might be excused for using this one. START CHEERING: Jimmy Durante, Joan Perry, Walter Connolly, Charles Starrett—Good musical comedy. Too bad more didn't turn out to enjoy it. Played July 29-30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

START CHEERING: Jimmy Durante, Joan Perry, Three Stooges, Charles Starrett, Walter Connolly—No dice. Just another picture, some music, some supposed comedy. Another one built and produced for a doublebill and we don't practice it so we take the loss on the run.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

START CHEERING: Charles Starrett, Jimmy Durante, Joan Perry, Walter Connolly—I thought Columbia had reached bottom with some of their pictures they have been releasing this season but this one reaches a new low I did not even know existed. Jimmy Durante is about as funny as a crutch but not quite as funny as Columbia when they put this picture in the higher allocation. This would be an ideal picture to play just before you close for the summer so your customers can enjoy their vacation and feel that they are not missing anything. The gags they resurrected in this picture will make your great grandfather turn in his grave. With product like this the producers wonder why business is in the red. Running time, 79 minutes. Played July 2-3.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

this year and Columbia didn't hold us up on the price; neither did they want a percentage. Picture like this at Columbia's live and let live prices will keep the small theatres open. Don't be afraid to use adjectives when you advertise this picture. Running time, 81 minutes. Played August 21-22.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. General patronage.

THRILL HUNTER (Reissue): Buck Jones—These Jones reissues do very nicely for us. Old enough in the first place not to be remembered and in the second place they are not too old to be recognized as reissues in the first place.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

TRAPPED BY G-MEN: Jack Holt, Wynne Gibson—Fair enough for double bill. A really good picture would put Holt right back on top. Understand "Reformatory" is a step in the right direction. We shall see.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown, Jane Wyman—Just another program picture for the bottom of a dual bill. Joe never did have any drawing power with us and this picture was no exception. Played July 16-17.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

ADVENTUROUS BLONDE, THE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Pretty good program fare. Played on Bargain Night.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

CRIME SCHOOL: Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End Kids," Gale Page—A very good picture with a good moral and plenty of entertainment and box office appeal. Another hit from Warners. I hope they will keep the good work up. The recording could have been improved quite a little. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Dennis O'Keefe, Bruce Cabot—A western that is a western. Whether your people care for this type of picture or not this one will make you money. We played it on Sunday and business was good. Running time, 89 minutes. Played July 17-18.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Lionel Stander—A stand-out picture that will do business in any spot. A programme picture plot built around an all star cast brings a bit of work that has the men as well as the women raving about Taylor which is unusual. After this one Taylor can be counted on for big grosses his next time out. Running time, 89 minutes. Played August 17-21.—Peter Panagos, Indiana and Sipe Theatres, Kokomo, Ind. General patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan—Here's a picture for any spot. Extended runs and give her gas. All the way a sweetheart of an American picture for all the family. Running time, 88 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DAVID COPPERFIELD (Reissue): W. C. Fields, Freddie Bartholomew, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Barrymore, Madge Evans, Edna Mae Oliver—A very good picture that most people enjoyed seeing the second time. Words can't truly give honors to this picture and so I will simply say it should stand a return engagement in almost every theatre. Running time, 122 minutes. Played August 27.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice—Here's another humdinger from MGM. There's nothing like an MGM comedy for this town and this one is exceptionally good. Try it.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice—Entertaining program. Stand alone in small spots, good for second halves in big spots. Murder mystery and you never saw one that was good. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeannette MacDonald, Allan Jones—A picture that I liked myself, but failed to click with my patrons. This is not a small town picture and should not be sold to a small town. Metro should forget these kind of pictures. Pictures that cost a lot less money to make click much better than this. It also was too long. Picture could have been just as good if they would have cut out 30 minutes. Lots of walkouts. Running time, 131 minutes. Played August 12-14.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

HOLD THAT KISS: Dennis O'Keefe, Maureen O'Sullivan, Mickey Rooney—Atta Boy, Mickey, you sure have some fans in this little town. They think you are just tops, and I think so myself. But talking about the picture, everyone was good. Jessie Ralph is swell in anything. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 23-24.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

LORD JEFF: Mickey Rooney, Freddie Bartholomew—A good show that pleased about 100 per cent. Business above average. Good enough for any change.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

LORD JEFF: Mickey Rooney, Freddie Bartholomew, Charles Coburn, Gale Sondergaard—Very good entertainment masquerading under a misleading title which drove away many who would have liked seeing the picture had they realized its content. Played July 17-18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy, Alan Curtis, Ralph Morgan—Due to the fine support given the star by Spencer Tracy, this proved to be the best Crawford picture in some time. It is swell entertainment and pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 95 minutes. Played August 14-15.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

MARRIED BEFORE BREAKFAST: Robert Young, Florence Rice—A bangup real fine program. Everybody ate it up. Give us more, Florence Rice. Forget Garbo, Metro.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MERRILY WE LIVE: Constance Bennett, Brian Aherne, Billie Burke, Patsy Kelly—Too clever for our crowd. Didn't draw at all but the manager and cashier thought it was great.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA (Reissue): Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Satisfactory reissue. Played July 19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart—We should have more pictures of this type. Although it does not click at the box office, it is one fine piece of entertainment and everyone should play it. Played August 22-23.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassetts, Va. Factory and country patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, John Beal—There is just a question if this picture should not have the label of adult. It had that in the Chicago run. The picture is well produced and the scenes restrained but the story revolves around a baby born out of wedlock and that as always is a controversial subject. However, the younger have the reputation of knowing all the answers and it is above the heads of the children, I hope. It did a little above average business.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

RICH MAN, POOR GIRL: Robert Young, Lew Ayres, Ruth Hussey, Guy Kibbee, Lana Turner—A good picture but one that I doubt very much if it has any real box office appeal. The cast is good but they are not real box office names, and the picture has never been heard of before. A light picture with some real good humor. Interesting throughout and one that should be recommended by the patrons. I expect to see more of these pictures with this same cast. Why not make it a series like the Jones family and the Judge Hardys. Running time, 72 minutes. Played August 28-29.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

RICH MAN, POOR GIRL: Robert Young, Ruth Hussey, Lew Ayres, Lana Turner—Absolutely terrific picture. It has everything except box office power and if you can figure some way to get 'em in, it will be one of the most successful pictures you'll ever play.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

SWISS MISS: Laurel and Hardy, Walter Wolf King, Della Lind—Swell. But not as good as some of their other pictures. Business fair. No kicks about the picture. Running time, 72 minutes. Played August 14-15.—Oaty Elmore, Best Theatre, Charleston, W. Va. General patronage.

SWISS MISS: Laurel & Hardy—Right up our alley for one of the poorer of these actors. It drew, however, so why complain. People want to laugh, so the producers had better give us more comedy and less drama, if they want film rental. Running time, 74 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWISS MISS: Laurel and Hardy—Laurel and Hardy always click here. Played Saturday with weak western and did good business. Played August 19-20.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassetts, Va. Factory and country patronage.

TEST PILOT: Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Myrna Loy—Very fine. Didn't do the business anticipated.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TEST PILOT: Spencer Tracy, Myrna Loy, Clark Gable—What more can I say about this picture than has been said. Business was way above average and the picture is a thrill from start to finish. Let's have more of its kind. Played August 11-12.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassetts, Va. Factory and country patronage.

TOY WIFE, THE: Luise Rainer, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young, Barbara O'Neil, H. B. Warner—I played this about three weeks after release and sorry I used it. Should have waited until some exhibitors reports hit these columns. Drew a record number of walkouts and was the most generally disliked among the male patrons of any picture I have run this year. O.K. for the ladies that enjoy daubing their noses.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

TREASURE ISLAND (Reissue): Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—Still a fine picture and did some nice business on it.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YELLOW JACK: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone, Henry Hull, Charles Coburn—Here is the picture that the Red Book magazine listed as their July "Picture of the Month." It is worthy of every theatre's best playing time and a little extra effort to put it over. We had extra hot weather the three days we played it so did not gross so much but everybody liked it because it is different. Played July 31-August 2.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

Monogram

ROMANCE OF THE LIMBERLOST: Jean Parker, Eric Linden—Truly a motion picture which Monogram should be very proud to have in its lineup. Notwithstanding the excellent performance of the leads, Marjorie Main walks away with the picture. Played August 17-18.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Summer patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE LIMBERLOST: Jean Parker, Eric Linden—Acting very amateurish but it was different to the extent that it pleased at least part of the very slim audience.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

WHERE THE WEST BEGINS: Jack Randall—I don't know how this fellow Randall does in other theatres but with me he is one of my best western stars. Of course, sometimes his singing almost ruins the entire picture but outside of that he is a popular singing cowboy. Monogram has been giving him A-1 productions. Leave off the singing and add more comedy or novel music.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Claudette Colbert, Gary Cooper—Very fine picture. Many, many comments as to the value of this picture. Thanks, Paramount, for another excellent film.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

CASSIDY OF BAR 20: Wm. Boyd—Have never yet played a bad western in this series. All are above average.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

COCONUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard—Another fine Paramount musical that pleased very well. A little different. A little suspense till the end. A little better than some before it. Play it, it will please. Played August 1-2.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassetts, Va. Factory and country patronage.

COLLEGE SWING: Martha Raye, Burns & Allen, Bob Hope—This picture is even worse than terrible. How Paramount can make such pictures as "Wells Fargo" and then produce a thing like "College Swing" is more than I can see. I have run some bad shows but this topped them all. People got up and walked out and that does not help your business any. Had it booked for a three day run but cut it out the first night. Burns & Allen are through, and Martha Raye might as well fold up too as far as my patrons and myself are concerned. If you have this one booked, cancel, by all means. Running time, 86 minutes. Played August 21-23.—M. W. Bretzke, Bretzke & Gainer, Lyric Theatre, Kenmare, N. D. General patronage.

DOCTOR RHYTHM: Bing Crosby, Beatrice Lillie, Mary Carlisle, Andy Devine—Good program picture that did quite well at the box office. Recording good. Beatrice Lillie did not help the picture any. Running time, 95 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GIVE ME A SAILOR: Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Betty Grable, Jack Whiting—While not as good as some Martha Raye pictures, this one seemed to please and business was fairly good.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GIVE ME A SAILOR: Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Betty Grable, Jack Whiting—Only fair. Not what it was cracked up to be. Some thought it was fair. It wasn't too bad in my estimation, nor was it by any means good. There were some real laugh scenes. From past experience, Mr. Exhibitor, remember it's Martha Raye put out by Paramount, and use your own judgment. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 23-24.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

HEART OF ARIZONA: Wm. Boyd, Natalie Moorhead—Just a western and a poor one at that, but doubled it with the five Disney Awards and packed them in. Try it. Running time, 63 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

HER JUNGLE LOVE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Lynne Overman, Dorothy Howe—A very beautiful picture with a fantastic story. Drew better than average business and believe it pleased although we heard no direct comment. Overman is very well liked in supporting roles. Lamour very beautiful and glamorous. Running time, 81 minutes. Played August 7-8.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HUNTED MEN: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle, Lynne Overman, Dorothy Peterson, Delmar Watson—While the theme of this picture was rather implausible, the audience seemed to appreciate it and although Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle, Lynne Overman and Dorothy Peterson turned in very fine performances, I felt that Delmar Watson stole the show. Running time, 66 minutes. Played August 23-25.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

HUNTED MEN: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle, Lynne Overman, Dorothy Peterson, Delmar Watson—A perfect sermon on the folly of crime. Any exhibitor will do a favor to children to let them see this one. It has sentiments that are worthy of a bigger production.

Lloyd Nolan is excellent. Played July 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PARTNERS OF THE PLAINS: William Boyd, George Hayes—Fair western that seemed to please. Running time, 67 minutes. Played August 19-21.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—We played this rather old one, but I have discovered that we can make more money with a good old picture than with a poor new one and this picture did very well at the box office and every one was pleased. I have discovered that a good picture needs no ballyhoo to sell it; all you need is let them know when you are going to play it. On the other hand all the ballyhoo in the world will not make them fall for poor pictures. Played August 13-14.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PRISON FARM: Lloyd Nolan, Shirley Ross—An excellent picture, well made, directed and acted. Good for anybody's house. A gripping drama with one weak part, that of John Howard. Otherwise excellent in all respects. Running time, 68 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, John Barrymore, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman—Played this one pre-release and everyone was raving about it. One of the real big pictures of the season. Has wonderful cast, superb and different plot with authentic scenes. Every part is exceptionally well done and the ending leaves them gasping in their seats. Put this on your must list for your box office's sake. Running time, 105 minutes. Played August 25-26.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

THUNDER TAIL: Gilbert Roland, Marsha Hunt—Very nice little western. Business off on account of lack of well known cowboy star. Roland very good and believe he would be good drawing card for the western fans if Paramount or someone will give him a chance.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Dorothy Lamour, Martha Raye, Ray Milland—Not much picture but drew very well. Aside from the "Bull Fight" and one song, the picture was a flop.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Martha Raye, Bob Burns, Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Tito Guizar—A picture that only the trailer is worth showing. If the feature were as good as the trailer, you could really go to town with it. Raye is not funny anymore. She only does one thing since entering pictures and her mugging has long since ceased to be funny. Moffit should have been able to write a better romantic sequence for the background. Burns is popular but won't be long if Paramount does repeat history, as they do not develop, they only tear down a star. Played August 25-26.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar's Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Rural patronage.

Republic

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry—This picture is a goldmine at the box office. Biggest Friday-Saturday in a long time. For entertainment, it was a good western. Running time, 60 minutes. Played August 12-13.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Carol Hughes, Smiley Burnette—One of the best of this series to date. We play Autry on Sunday and, out-gross most of the so called major specials and please more of the cash customers. Why, oh, why, don't all the independent exhibitors play Autry on their best changes, as he is the best since Bank Night and don't forget "old twelve and a half a week" Smiley as he contributes a lot to the success of this series. Played August 28-29.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar's Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Rural patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Carol Hughes, Smiley Burnette—Business was good on this picture, the first from Autry in six months. Though the usual model, it seemed to please them all.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PUBLIC COWBOY NO. 1: Gene Autry—Bucked a street dance and lion's frolic. Didn't even feel them, but they felt us. Gene packed them in.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PURPLE VIGILANTES: Three Mesquiteers, Joan Barclay—An excellent picture that was killed on the cutting room floor. Too bad as these stars should have a better break. Running time, 56 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE ON THE RUN: Donald Woods, Patricia Ellis, Edward Brophy, Leon Weaver—Pretty good program picture. Pleased fair business. Has a good hillbilly sequence showing Leon Weaver of the Weaver Brothers and Elviry act.—L. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

HAVING WONDERFUL TIME: Ginger Rogers, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—A good program picture that did not do any business at all. Poorest Sunday-Monday-Tuesday in some time. I should have played it in midweek. Running time, 71 minutes. Played August 21-23.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

HAVING WONDERFUL TIME: Ginger Rogers, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—We repeated this one after originally opening with it six weeks ago, and it still is box office at our theatre, which proves that the theatre-going public still likes good entertainment in spite of the panning this picture got from critics who don't know what is box office. Played August 19-20.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Summer patronage.

HAWAII CALLS: Bobby Breen, Ned Sparks—Not enough story here for a two reeler. And yet it manages to get by. Not the sort of thing to uphold Bobby's screen success, however. Nice musical. Played July 20-21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JOY OF LIVING: Irene Dunne, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Personally I thought it was OK, but the majority didn't seem to feel as I did.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: James Ellison, Ruby Keeler, Anne Shirley—Excellent picture. Each character was picked very well. Lots of comedy besides a good story and some pathos.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Anne Shirley, Ruby Keeler, James Ellison—A touch of yesterday with a laugh here and a tear there. Very good for the family trade. Played August 14-16.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Summer patronage.

PAINTED DESERT: George O'Brien—The best western I have had in a long time and the box office showed it too. This George O'Brien hits in good shape here and my patrons want good westerns every Saturday. If you got to have westerns don't be afraid of these; they are good and one will help draw for the next one. Running time, 59 minutes. Played August 19-20.—M. W. Bretzke, Bretzke & Gainer, Lyric Theatre, Kenmare, N. D. General patronage.

SKY GIANT: Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Joan Fontaine—We used this on a Sunday date and found it drew above average and pleased exceptionally well. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 21-22.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—On the first of three days I received for my share the great sum of $4.96 after hall and film and help were paid but from that I had to pay for advertising, my own trips, office, taxes, insurance, wear and tear and all the incidentals that count up in the course of time. The second day I got $5.74 and the third $5.32. Altogether it was a steal for the film company and the checkers and I was left holding the bag. That is the system these days. If a storm comes or the roads are blocked or too hot or too cold, or something else going on, you take the loss and keep still. If a great picture comes along that everyone wants to see, they send a checker, grab everything but a few cents and you take a loss again. Whose fault? It is our own; we exhibitors allow ourselves to be fleeced blind. We buy at the outrageous terms laid down and listen to the rosy tales of at last some profit in sight and then wonder at the fools we have made of ourselves. I hope some others who have been wise enough to leave 50% picture alone will send out warning after warning to the poor suckers who don't seem to know any better for we just encourage more and more of this steal until we will find ourselves swallowed by the wolves for our ignorance.—Eugene Kenyon, Commercial Theatre, Sundance, Wyo. Small town patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—In spite of the excessive heat, the temperature well over the hundred mark, and a hall which boasts no cooling devices and only wooden seats, this picture drew more than the population of this village. We sold over 500 admissions in a district with a drawing population of around 350. I consider it the duty of every exhibitor to allow their patrons a chance of seeing this masterpiece, as apart from the monetary angle it will create good will and stimulate their interest in pictures. Played July 21-23.—J. L. Macdonald, Hedley Theatre, Hedley, B. C., Canada. Small mining town patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY: Ginger Rogers, James Stewart—I don't know what more one can want. Very good.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY: Ginger Rogers, James Stewart, James Ellison, Beulah Bondi, Charles Coburn—A perfect comedy drama splendidly played by Ginger and James. Wish we could say the same for business but it was unaccountably off. Played July 31-August 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY: Ginger Rogers, James Stewart—This feature pleased 100 per cent. It has a little of everything to put it over; as this is a college town it went over excellent here. If RKO continues to make pictures like this, they are going places. Played this feature a little late, but advise all to play it, old or new. Business good. Played August 21-22.—Paul T. Mitchell, Mitchell Theatre, Barbourville, Ky. Small town patronage.

Special

Spectrum

MELODY OF THE PLAINS: Fred Scott—Our first Scott western and while it ranks nowhere near Autry, Ritter or Randall, it is still a very entertaining western. Business about average.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS GOODBYE: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall, Binnie Barnes, Ian Hunter, John Russell—This fell considerably below average in drawing power but it was a good picture. The little boy, John Russell, made a big hit.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

BATTLE OF BROADWAY: Victor McLaglen—This is a fair picture. Played August 23.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Factory and country patronage.

BIG TOWN GIRL: Claire Trevor, Donald Woods—Nice little program picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

FOUR MEN AND A PRAYER: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, George Sanders, David Niven, William Henry—How we pitied the poor director. He was as confused as we! A pretty sorry piece of entertainment. No draw. Played August 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

45 FATHERS: Jane Withers—Very good Withers. I hear that she will be given bigger pictures for the coming year. Of course, this is only leading up to percentage for Withers pictures. Company is afraid the exhibitor is making too much money and they want more for their part. I wish they would leave Withers in program pictures.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

GATEWAY: Don Ameche, Arleen Whelan, Lyle Talbot, Gregory Ratoff, Binnie Barnes—This picture just gets by because Don Ameche is in it. Had some complaints and walkouts. Is allocated too high.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

I'LL GIVE A MILLION: Warner Baxter, Marjorie Weaver, Jean Hersholt—Some say it's good, some said it's pretty good, but in my opinion, think that Warner Baxter is good in anything, and that story just suited him. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 21-22.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Alice Brady—A real picture for any town or any patronage. Kept my house packed and had them standing in the street for all shows. Many had to wait and come back the next day. Ran it three days to a record crowd and was sorry I couldn't hold it over for an extra day, but close booking on it prevented this. More pictures like this is what the industry needs. People are getting tired of this continual song and dance stuff with no moral or theme to it. Running time, 110 minutes. Played August 14-16.—M. W. Bretzke, Bretzke & Gainer, Lyric Theatre, Kenmare, N. D. General patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Alice Faye, Alice Brady—Picture one swell piece of entertainment, but my business was very bad. But no fault of the picture, for you can't find one any better. Played August 15-16.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Factory and country patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Alice Brady—We did a splendid business on this one and received many favorable comments on same. The only negative one being that some patrons thought the fire scene was too long. Outside of this it was a triple "a" caliber as far as we were concerned. Running time, 110 minutes. Played August 20-22.—A. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

JOSETTE: Simone Simon, Don Ameche, Robert Young, Joan Davis, Bert Lahr—Far and away the best thing Simon has ever made. Don Ameche and Robert Young give her grand support. It kept our average audience laughing most of the time and we had dozens of compliments. Running time, 73 minutes. Played August 24-25.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

JOSETTE: Simone Simon, Don Ameche, Robert Young, Joan Davis, Bert Lahr—Good but not worth more than program rental. It certainly didn't gross more than many lesser attractions could have. Played July 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KEEP SMILING: Jane Withers—Played this one hot off the release. One of Miss Withers' best pictures. The impersonations she gives of different stars will put the show over alone. A pleasing picture for all, old and young. Running time, 77 minutes. Played August 14-15.—Paul T. Mitchell, Mitchell Theatre, Barbourville, Ky. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY MOONSHINE: Ritz Brothers, Marjorie Weaver, Tony Martin, Slim Summerville—This one just did average business, but our audience seemed to like it, although the comedy became a bit ridiculous at times. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 23-25.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

KENTUCKY MOONSHINE: Ritz Brothers, Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver, Slim Summerville—Of all the nitwits on the screen, we like these the best. Principally because they are so versatile. They can sing, dance and mimic in addition to being crazy. Marjorie Weaver didn't hurt this picture, either. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 5-6.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY: Shirley Temple—Excellent. Stands up okay for extended runs, but is the weakest one she has made to date. But will entertain all the way. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY: Shirley Temple, Jimmy Durante, George Murphy, Edna Mae Oliver—On a par with most Temple's in so far as direction, story, music and all the elements that make good Temple pictures. Business was below par. The ones that saw it really enjoyed, but not enough came. Although she can still do better than average business, Shirley has slipped. Running time, 71 minutes. Played August 10-14.—Peter Panagos, Indiana and Sipe Theatres, Kokomo, Ind. General patronage.

PANAMINT'S BAD MAN: Smith Ballew, Evelyn Daw—Good entertaining western. Dandy second half for big bills. Stand alone where westerns are liked. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

RASCALS: Jane Withers—A very good show, but judging from the box office receipts Jane is too young to interest the adults and too grownup to interest the children. However, she puts all she's got into her shows and we like her, and long as Fox doesn't try to get too much for them. Running time, 77 minutes. Played August 17-18.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. General patronage.

RASCALS: Jane Withers—Another Withers as good or better than others. Went over well. The Harmonica Rascals were swell. They made plenty of fun and comedy. Played August 4-5.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Factory and country patronage.

ROLL ALONG COWBOY: Smith Ballew, Cecilia Parker—Very good. Zane Grey's always go over here. Ballew is not a looker but has a wonderful voice. Running time, 60 minutes. Played August 20.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY: Alice Faye, Fred Allen, Tony Martin, Jimmy Durante, Joan Davis, Marjorie Weaver—A very pleasing musical with a good cast. Drew very well and pleased. Played August 7-8.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

TRIP TO PARIS, A: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Russell Gleason—Same old stuff, but the family has some following here. Bargain Night with average business.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

TRIP TO PARIS, A: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Russell Gleason—The Jones family always draw pretty well and are liked.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO, THE: Gary Cooper, Sigrid Gurie, Basil Rathbone, Binnie Barnes—For the first time a big town picture went over big in a small town. And when that happens you can be satisfied. Running time, 104 minutes. Played August 7-9.—Robert Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE: Tommy Kelly, May Robson, Walter Brennan, Jackie Moran,

Ann Gillis—Next to "The Hurricane," United Artists' biggest grosser this season and strong proof that pictures can go over big without stars. This outstanding show should be in every critics' "Ten Best of the Year" list.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DIVORCE OF LADY X, THE: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, Ralph Richardson, Binnie Barnes—Better leave it in the can. British made with the Oxford accent that is poison to American audiences. Don't waste a date on it. You'll be ahead.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WALT DISNEY'S ACADEMY AWARD REVUE: Five Award Winners—Walt Disney's five famous Academy Award Winning cartoons are great. One lady said she liked them better than "Snow White."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

IMITATION OF LIFE (Reissue): Claudette Colbert, Warren William, Rochelle Hudson, Louise Beavers—Reissue that we did not play when originally released. No extra draw but glad we played it as our regular trade enjoyed it from start to finish.—C. E. Fismser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

LADY IN THE MORGUE, THE: Preston Foster, Patricia Ellis—Okay to fair business return. Played August 2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAD ABOUT MUSIC: Deanna Durbin, Herbert Marshall, Gail Patrick—More than excellent Deanna Durbin picture and no one could have done better as her adopted father than Herbert Marshall. Good business. Played July 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NURSE FROM BROOKLYN: Sally Eilers, Paul Kelly—Good program fare. Played July 29-30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SHOW BOAT (Reissue): Irene Dunne, Allan Jones, Charles Winninger—Business not up to expectations but picture was at a figure that didn't hurt too much. Still sends them out whistling "Only Make Believe."—C. E. Fismser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

STATE POLICE: John King, Constance Moore—Good program picture. Recording fair. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

BORDERTOWN: Paul Muni, Bette Davis—Was the first time I had played this and the picture, print, etc., was fine. But business was way off.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS IN PARIS: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert—An excellent musical. The Schnickelfritz band are tops in any program. Vallee is not much for love interest but his singing makes up for any lost interest. Rosemary Lane has developed into a first rate star. All in all no one could ask for much more, although it is draggy in spots and has not the pep that "Varsity Show" had. Again the band makes up for any lack of pep. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RACKET BUSTERS: Humphrey Bogart, George Brent, Gloria Dickson—The title sounds okay, but I still don't know what purpose Warners had in mind when they made this one, although it's good box office. Played August 21-22.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Summer patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING NO. 6: A very good series. As I have said in past reports of this series, they should be box office every place. Give them a try.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

COMMUNITY SING NO. 7: This one wasn't as good as some of the others that they have put out, but any picture that will make the audience join in au—tomatically makes the patron part of the picture. When the patron becomes a part of the picture, naturally, they are going to enjoy it and want more. This is just a suggestion for a feature picture. Why don't one of you producers make a picture that has the audience join in the show. Have some community singing and think up a couple of new ideas, too. Give it thought, Mr. Producer, it may be the part way to big money and huge profits. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

DOGGONE MIXUP: Harry Langdon—Good enough comedy.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

FOOLISH BUNNY, THE: Color Rhapsodies—Nice cartooning.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PICNIC: Color Rhapsodies—Good color cartoon. Best laugh, Karloff's Frankenstein as a jitterbug.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

SAD LITTLE GUINEA PIGS: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Absolutely the poorest cartoon we've ever run. Even the kids didn't want to see it twice. Positively unfunny. Running time, 8 minutes.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. General patronage.

SCRAPPY'S MUSIC LESSON: Scrappy Cartoons—An excellent black and white cartoon and as good as any in the business with the exception of Paramount's Popeye. Running time, 5 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SITTER DOWNERS, THE: Three Stooges—This particular "Three Stooge" comedy seemed to be received much better than usual at this theatre. While like all the Stogge comedies, it seemed a bit over ridiculous, yet, I felt, it was a little bit better than the average. Running time, 20 minutes.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

Educational

AFFAIRS OF PIERRE, THE: Two-reel comedies—One of the worst two reels we've ever run and we've run some sorry ones. Skip it. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. General patronage.

LOVE GOES WEST: Song and Comedy Hits—This is really good. Use it any time. Running time, 9 minutes.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. General patronage.

LOVE GOES WEST: Song and Comedy Hits—A cowboy musical that is fair. Nothing to brag about, but it will pass through without any kicks from the average theatre patron. Running time, nine minutes.

MISS LONELY HEARTS: Song and Comedy Hits—No good for me.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SILLY NIGHT: Jefferson Machamer—One too many words in the title.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

TIMID GHOST, THE: Two-Reel Comedies—For some reason what seemed to be an ordinary comedy kept the house in an uproar at every show.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEAR FACTS: Our Gang—Fairly good. A great short for the kiddies. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

BILLY ROSE'S CASA MANANA REVUE: Musical Comedies—Swell but color would so much improve these.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CAME THE BRAWN: Our Gang—Our Gang is not as good as they used to be. Something wrong. Maybe it's because Alfalfa doesn't sing anymore. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

CAME THE BRAWN: Our Gang—Fair.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CANDID CAMERAMANIACS: Pete Smith Specialties—No matter what the subject, Pete Smith seems to "do it up brown" and this one was no exception as it touched humorously on a current vogue. Running time, nine minutes.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

CAPTAIN'S PUP: Captain and the Kids—A fair cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CLEANING HOUSE: Captain and the Kids—Very well liked. A lot better than most cartoons. Running time, 8 minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

COME ACROSS: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Another excellent crime story. Our audiences like these very much and they help the movie game.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

CRIMINAL IS BORN, A: Crime Does Not Pay Series—One of the "Crime Does Not Pay" series and about the best one yet. These are good subjects and should be played in every theatre. Running time, 20 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

DAY AT THE BEACH, A: Captain and the Kids—These cartoons not what they should be. This one average for the series. We had to take them off Sunday.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DAY AT THE BEACH, A: Captain and the Kids—This one a little better than the rest of the series, but is still short of being a really good cartoon. Running time, 10 minutes.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

EVENING ALONE, AN: Robert Benchley—This Benchley is so flat when it comes to humor that it is pitiful. Not so hot. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FACE BEHIND THE MASK, THE: Historical Mysteries—A very interesting historical short subject. It proves quite interesting from start to finish. The only thing is it is purely a picture for certain people to see. The lower classes with no education would not care for this type of picture.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

FEED 'EM AND WEEP: Our Gang—Very poor. These seem to be getting poorer all the time. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

FRIEND INDEED: Pete Smith Specialties—A story built around the "Seeing Eye" dogs that was very much enjoyed and appreciated.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

HIDE AND SHRIEK: Our Gang—A good Gang but this series has too much Alfalfa and not enough of the gang. The last half dozen have been 80 per cent Alfalfa. He is good but it is the kids that the people like.—C. I. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOW TO FIGURE YOUR INCOME TAX: Robert Benchley—This is the worst short that I have seen for quite sometime. For a minute after the short was over I was half tempted to turn on the house lights and go out on the stage and apologize to my audience. The picture does prove one point and that is that you can't put anything over on the income tax collector. But when a patron has to sit in their seats and see some ham actor (pardon me, Mr. Benchley) come out on the screen and take nibbles of food and pick his teeth with finger nails it is going too far. This picture was actually disgusting and I can't see why Mr. Benchley would ever permit such a picture to be taken of him and let his name be carried down in the gutter. Far be it from me to pan a picture, but when such vile trash is shown on our screens there should be a stop put to it. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

KING WITHOUT A CROWN, THE: Historical Mysteries—Very good short that pleased about 50 per cent. Running time, 10 minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

KING WITHOUT A CROWN, THE: Historical Mysteries—This type of historical mystery is always well received because besides being educational it is of great interest and, of course, can't help but be mentioned as a forerunner of "Marie Antoinette." Running time, nine minutes.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

LAND OF THE INCAS: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—First rate subject. Color excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LIFE IN SOME TOWN, U. S. A.: M-G-M Miniatures—Unusual reel that carries more laughs than most two-reel comedies.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

MIRACLE MONEY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEW AUDIOSCOPIKS, THE: Special—Hope MGM doesn't make another one this year. Too many and the novelty would wear off. As it is folks who saw the first still ducked when the screen started to hurl things.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY, THE: O.K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: Good.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: O. K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, A: Robert Benchley—Good short that seemed to please. Running time, 10 minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, A: Robert Benchley—The average human likes to have his faults pointed out. Therefore, the attendant result of all Benchley shorts. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

OUR GANG FOLLIES OF 1938: Musical Comedies—Very good.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

PARIS ON PARADE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—This Travel Talk tops all of FitzPatrick's previous efforts. Without a doubt the finest travel we have run this season. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PENNY'S PARTY: Pete Smith Specialties—Very good. Lots new cooking stunts.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SURF HEROES: Pete Smith Specialties—This hit the spot on a hot night. It's plenty good. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE ON A ROPE: Peter Smith Specialties—Pete has done better and Pete has done worse. Average reel with a few laughs and a couple of thrills.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

WHAT A LION: Captain and the Kids—Very amusing.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK, NO. 2: MGM Miniatures—Not so hot. These Miniatures are a trifle too heavy for cosmopolitan entertainment. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHAT PRICE SAFETY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—These shorts are ideal for playing with a long feature. Enough production goes into them to make them comparable to lots of features.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Paramount

HALL'S HOLIDAY: Headliners—Average band number. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

HUNKY AND SPUNKY: Color Classics—One of the best Color Classics of this year's group. Running time, eight minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

LEARN POLIKENESS: Popeye the Sailor—Very good. This series is always good. Running time, seven minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

MOMENTS OF CHARM: Phil Spitalny and His All Girl Orchestra—This was the most beautiful color reel we ever played and the song "I Love You Truly" was grand. By all means play this. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: O. K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Good.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 9: Interesting.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 1: Fairly good—Try one and see how you like them. From the first one you can tell whether you are going to like the series or not.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

QUEENS OF THE AIR: Vincent Lopez—Entertaining.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

TANNHAUSER: Paragraphs—Very good. If your people enjoy and appreciate symphony music they are bound to like this one. The majority of people in my audience seemed to like and appreciate this short. Good for a better class house. To the shooting galleries, I would say "stay away."—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS: Good colored single reels. Running time, 10 minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

RKO Radio

FROZEN AFFAIR: Condor Musicals—Excellent skating reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HIS PEST FRIEND: Leon Errol Comedies—Errol makes 'em laugh but loudly in this one. Am glad to date all these subjects I can.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

JITTERS, THE: Leon Errol Comedies—The production value and the excellent comedy in these subjects should be a good reason why RKO ought to keep producing their own shorts.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

LONESOME GHOSTS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Excellent cartoon. A novel and well developed idea.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: By all means the best two-reel subject on the market. Each subject is picked with care in order to insure interest.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

MICKY'S TRAILER: Walt Disney—Very good color, animation and gags. What more can an exhibitor expect from a cartoon.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Summer patronage.

MORNING JUDGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—A real funny comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MUSIC WILL TELL: Ted Fio Rito and His Orchestra—An excellent short that was enjoyed by all and went over with a bang. Something refreshing after the mediocre product we have had from this producer. Running time, 16 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PLUTO'S QUINTUPLETS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Fine Cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RHYTHM WRANGLERS: Smart Set Comedies—Here's singing and playing by a cowboy band that we thought was a knockout. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

RHYTHM WRANGLERS: Smart Set—A good western music comedy.—L. I. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SELF CONTROL: Walt Disney Cartoons—Moderately amusing cartoon. Not as good as the others of this series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SELF CONTROL: Walt Disney Cartoons—This is only fair. It seems as if these Disney's are slipping. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WINDWAY WAY: RKO Pathe Sportscope—Refreshingly invigorating. A cool spot on any heavy program.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FILMING NATURE'S WONDERS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—A fairly good short subject. There are lots better and lots worse also.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: O. K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

foreign countries.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

MECHANICAL HANDY MAN: Oswald Cartoons—Funny.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SHOW FOR SALE: Mentone Musical Comedies—Not so hot. Only a fair two-reel musical.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SOMEWHERE IN PARIS: Mentone Musical Comedies—Good enough for the most part.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

AFRICA SPEAKS ENGLISH: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—Only fair. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CARL HOFF AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A very good band act.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

CINDERELLA MEETS FELLA: Merrie Melodies—These shorts are consistent in their excellence. Color, animation and continuity is all done in an outstanding manner.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

DAFFY DUCK AND EGGHEAD: Merrie Melodies—Fair. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HIT AND RUN: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—Quite the poorest to date in this usually good series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JAN RUBINI AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A bit of plot or theme seemed to help this particular "Melody Master" to become just a trifle more than a band short. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. J. Quartmont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

JUGGLING FOOL, THE: Vitaphone Varieties—This is good. The small girl who danced to pay for her ice cream cone made a big hit.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

KATNIP KOLLEGE: Merrie Melodies—As good a color cartoon as you could ask for. Disney will have to watch his laurels to keep first place. If Schlesinger used color as does Disney, I feel that the former would rank with Disney as his subject matter far surpasses the Disneys. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE RED WALKING HOOD: Merrie Melodies—Splendid. Running time, seven minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

The Bluebook School

Conducted by

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 125

F. H. RICHARDSON

Bluebook School Question No. 125 was: (A) Describe start of current generation in a generator. (B) What happens when in starting a generator the point of required voltage is reached? (C) How may electric power be calculated in terms of horsepower? (D) Just how is two-phase and three-phase current secured?

Because this is a rather long question I will not publish names this week, but merely say that all those who answered the previous question acceptably (except, I am sorry to say, L. W. Whitmore, G. L. Daniels and F. G. Maxwell) made good on this one.

(A) L. H. Kelley answers comprehensively and briefly, as follows:

"When an engine or other power source starts the armature of a generator rotating, the line switch being open and therefore practically no resistance opposed to current flow, the armature coils start cutting across the lines of force produced by residual magnetic force inherent in the field magnets, which starts a very weak current flowing, the entire amount of which must pass through the field coils. Now if a.c. flows through the field coils, the immediate effect is to strengthen the magnetic field produced by them, thus increasing the number of lines of magnetic force cut by the armature coils during each second of time, which of course operates to increase current flow. This process is rapid and would go forward, if unchecked, until the magnets reached the point of saturation, after which no further increase in the magnetic field could be produced."

Brother Kelley should have added a sentence to the effect that before the point of saturation is reached, or when the desired voltage is attained, the line switch is closed, thus giving the generator its full load, with field coil resistance sufficient to maintain voltage at the desired point.

E. Lomax certainly does not waste words. He says, "According to Faraday's principle, an electric current will be generated when a conductor is moved within a magnetic circuit in such manner that it cuts across lines of magnetic force. Armature coils of a generator act as conductors, cutting across lines of magnetic force, forming a very weak magnetic field set up by the residual field of the field magnets."

H. Edwards describes it thus: "Faraday tells us that when an electric conductor in the form of a closed circuit is moved in a magnetic field in such manner that the number of lines of force it passes through, or that pass through it, are altered, a current is induced therein. Generator field coils usually are permanent magnets, hence when at rest maintain a weak magnetic field in which the armature of the machine rests. When the armature starts rotating, its coils cut across this weak field in such manner that the lines of force which each coil cuts across is constantly varied, and thus Faraday's principle is complied with, a weak current induced and, since before starting operations the load is cut off by opening the line switch, all this current must flow through the generator field coils, which serves to 'strengthen' them and thus cause the coils to cut more lines of force at each revolution, causing more current to flow until, when the desired voltage is attained, the line switch is closed and, in modern gen-

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 131

(A) What is the "crater"? How is it formed?

(B) Describe shape of craters of various types of arc and the effect of each kind.

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answers to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

erators, the voltage and therefore the current thereafter automatically is maintained at that point."

(B) G. Burdis says, "In starting a generator, when the required voltage is reached—or put another way, when the armature coils are cutting enough lines of magnetic force to generate the required voltage—a hand-operated or a mechanical apparatus closes a switch connecting the generator with its load, cutting in sufficient field coil resistance to cause the required amperage to flow through the distribution circuits."

L. Cimikoski says, "At starting, when the point of required voltage is reached, the machine is connected with its load by closing the line switch. Sufficient resistance is then cut in series with the field magnet circuit to maintain the line voltage at the desired point. This resistance must be altered as the load alters. All this may be done manually, as it once was. Modern generators, however, perform the function automatically."

(C) Hundreds said the same thing, namely: Electrical power may be calculated in horsepower as follows:

Multiply volts by number of amperes flowing and divide the product by 746, thus—

$$\frac{E I}{746} = \text{H.P.}$$

(D) J. R. Prater says, "Two-phase current may be secured from two single-phase generators, each producing equal voltage and frequency, by mechanically coupling them together so that when the voltage of either reaches maximum, the voltage of the other is at zero. Three-phase current may be obtained in a similar manner with three single-phase generators producing equal voltage and frequency, so coupled that the alternations of current are equally spaced."

"But ordinarily this method is not used. Instead, two or three wholly separate electrical circuits are mounted in a single machine, but the principle involved is exactly the same. These circuits are so mounted that the alternations they produce are equally spaced."

Theatre Transfers in New York

Theatre transfers in the New York metropolitan area include the Plaza, New-ark, acquired by Harry Kridel from William Herman and scheduled to be reopened this month. Rogowsky Brothers, who formerly operated theatres in Portchester, have taken over the Pelham theatre, Pelham. It was reopened last week. The operating company is Spencer Theatres, Inc. Consolidated Amusements is scheduled to reopen the old 23rd Street, Manhattan, about October 1st. The house formerly was an RKO operation. The Gloria, Brooklyn, has been reopened by Pasquale Scotto.

Coast Guard Halts Spread Of Unauthorized Screenings

Alleged unauthorized exhibitions by those supplying prints to United States Coast Guard vessels have been halted by action of distributors, resulting in a blanket order by the Commandant of the Coast Guard to all units designed to check the practice, according to the Copyright Protection Bureau in New York.

The matter was referred to the bureau when commanding officers of certain Coast Guard ships called at the film exchanges to book pictures and rejected suggested pictures on the ground they had previously been shown by means of prints supplied by local exhibitors.

New Ticket Machine

Percy C. Osteen, owner of the Carolina theatre, Anderson, S.C., has invented a machine which he says automatically takes, records and destroys the ticket of the patron. As the patron drops his ticket into a small box, the mechanism releases revolving arms and allows him to enter the theatre. After the admittance the arms become locked and remain so until another ticket is deposited in the slot. When the ticket enters the box, it is taken between small rollers, automatically recorded and destroyed.

Schwarzwald at Eastern Service

Milton Schwarzwald has established production headquarters at Eastern Service Studio, Astoria, L. I., for the filming of Mentone two reel short subjects for Universal, and of Nu-Atlas one reel subjects for RKO Radio distribution. A cocktail party was tendered Mr. Schwarzwald at the studio last week.

The Fred Dolle circuit, with theatres in Kentucky and Indiana, has contracted with Altec Service Corporation for servicing sound in the Dolle theatres. Fred C. Dickey negotiated for Altec.

Densmore A. Ross, director of branch operations, has been promoted to general manager of Ross Federal Service, Inc., by the board of directors. In his new post Mr. Ross will act as assistant to the president.

Serials

Columbia

GREAT ADVENTURES OF WILD BILL HICKOK: Gordon Elliott, Kermit Maynard—It's "tops" in serials. Play and step on it. Got what serials take but most of them don't have. Really good. MYSTERIOUS PILOT, THE: Captain Frank Hawks—This looks like a winner. The first chapter looks like even the exhibitor is going to follow it. So far outstanding. Think it worth considering for those who have not bought. Looks like much better than average serial.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS PILOT, THE: Capt. Frank Hawks—Better each chapter.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SECRET OF TREASURE ISLAND: Don Terry, Gwen Gaze—The best serial we have ever played. It has everything a serial should have and then some. It is hard to believe that the same exchange is shipping us that epic "Jungle Menace." If you have played the Buck serial, don't let it scare you off "Treasure Island."—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Universal

FLASH GORDON'S TRIP TO MARS: Larry Crabbe, Jean Rogers—This is what I call a good serial. Held up very, very good for me.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

FLASH GORDON'S TRIP TO MARS: Larry Crabbe, Jean Rogers—Quite interesting. A lot of hokum but that's what the public wants. Played chapters one and two.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Enters Spanish Production Field

Twentieth Century-Fox has entered the Spanish language production field by signing with Ramos Cobian, head of Cobian Productions, for four Spanish films yearly on a term contract. Usual options are provided. The films will be released in Spanish-speaking countries. Mr. Cobian recently completed "My Two Loves," in Spanish, for Paramount.

Moss to Handle French Pictures

B. S. Moss, exhibitor pioneer, has organized Empress Pictures, Inc., for the production, exhibition and distribution of French motion pictures on an international scale.

Paul Graetz, of French films, will be associated with Mr. Moss. He returned to France on the Champlain last week-end, to consolidate the Moss plans. These will provide cooperation in the United States for French producers.

Mr. Moss said that in placing resources at the disposal of French producers he will eliminate two of their greatest handicaps by providing adequate financing for all production companies whose program is acceptable, and by comprehensive exploitation in the United States. Through these plans Empress pictures expects to bring to American movie goers the cream of pictures produced in France.

Mr. Moss said that a nationwide survey which he has made indicated that the day had passed when the appeal of French pictures was limited to the so-called "intelligentsia."

Empress Pictures is now negotiating for the acquisition of a theatre on Broadway for its product.

Present plans call for early release of eight subjects selected after viewing some 130 recent productions.

A second group, which may be eight, 12 or 16, will be designated following conferences by Mr. Graetz with French producers directly after his arrival in Paris.

Danielle Darrieux stars in two of the first eight. Jean Gabin, star of "Pepe le Moko," which served as a vehicle for Charles Boyer under the title of "Algiers," is another star. Others include Harry Bauer, Conrad Veidt, Erich von Stroheim, Anton Walbrook and Jean-Louis Barrault.

Miss Darrieux's pictures are "Betrayed by Love" and "Port Arthur." Conrad Veidt and Francoise Rosay co-star in "The Mad Inventor." Jean-Louis Barrault stars in "The Kingdom of Youth." Erich von Stroheim also stars in two. The first is "The Runaways," the second "Alibi For Murder." Jean Gabin is at present completing an untitled production. "Life Dances On" (Un Carnet de Bal) will be released nationally immediately.

Vitaphone Releasing R. Bare Subject

Richard L. Bare, producer for Security Pictures Corporation, has signed with Norman H. Moray of Vitaphone for the release by that company of Mr. Bare's production, "Miracles of Sport," color short subject authored by Robert Edgren, sports writer. A series of "Miracles of Sport" reels is planned by the producing company, whose headquarters are in California's artist-colony, Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Jerold Circuit Divides

The Jerold Amusement Company at Cleveland has divided interests, with Meyer Kaplan, president, taking ownership of the Crown and Superior theatres, Hyman Kaplan the Southern and Nate Schultz, Monogram franchise holder, half-partner with Meyer Kaplan in the Arion and the Waldorf.

Universal Plans Advance Schedule

Universal is rapidly completing an advance production schedule for the next seven months which will be designed to make it possible for the company to meet every release date, Matthew J. Fox, vice-president, said this week before his departure for the studio following a brief home office visit.

Mr. Fox conferred with Nate J. Blumberg, Universal president, and J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, while in New York, on arrangements which will make possible the maintenance of the long range production schedule. He estimated that it would require another six months to complete all of the necessary preparations before the fixed production schedule and release schedule would be established.

The specific objectives of the production planning are to put the studio on an operating basis which will permit the company to meet every release date without deviation and to have advertising and merchandising campaigns on every picture completed at the proper time in advance of release dates. Mr. Fox pointed out that merchandising campaigns must, of necessity, remain on a "hit or miss" basis as long as release schedules are not maintained.

Universal has signed Anatole Litvak to direct Danielle Darrieux in "Rio." The starting date of the French star's second American production depends upon her arrival in America, which is tentatively set for sometime between September 15th and October 1st. Joe Pasternak will produce the picture.

Nate Blumberg, president of Universal, Tuesday announced the consummation of a deal between J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, and Everett Crosby, brother and manager of Bing Crosby, for one picture to be made by the singer. Mr. Cowdin flew from New York to Hollywood especially to sign the contract.

Production is scheduled to start October 15, and a story, director and producer will be selected next week.

Brown Signs Radio Contract

Joe E. Brown, film comedian, has been signed by General Foods for a new radio series through the Benton and Bowles agency. The program will start early in October on the Columbia Broadcasting System network. The broadcast will be in behalf of Post Toasties and will originate in Hollywood.

Monogram will reissue eight Bob Steele Westerns. They are "Breed of the Border," "Fighting Champ," "Galloping Romeo," "Trailing North," "Gallant Fool," "Rangers' Code," "Young Blood" and "Hidden Valley."

Charles R. Rogers has closed a deal with Gus Edwards to make a picture based on his life and incorporating a long list of song hits introduced by Mr. Edwards.

As part of a nationwide campaign United Artists is presenting a series of trade showings of "Drums," at which public officials and club representatives have been present in addition to circuit heads and showmen.

BIOFF QUIT POST AS AIDE TO BROWNE

Personal Representative of IATSE Head Was in Charge of Locals in Hollywood

William Bioff, personal representative of George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, has severed all official connection with the International, according to an announcement from the west coast offices of the Alliance.

Although he has acted as Mr. Browne's representative for several years, Mr. Bioff came into prominence last year when he took over the active direction of the Hollywood locals of the IATSE. Testimony brought out at hearings conducted last winter by a California legislative committee investigating labor relations in the state indicated that administration of the locals had been surrendered temporarily by the members to the leaders of the International and that Mr. Bioff was in charge.

He entered into last year's Federated Motion Picture Crafts strike, effecting a settlement of the dispute after which several of the striking organizations were admitted into the IATSE ranks and he figured prominently in the negotiations with producers which resulted in the signing of the ten year agreement with the Screen Actors' Guild.

The communication from Mr. Browne announcing Mr. Bioff's resignation was issued over the weekend in Hollywood by Harland Holmden and Harold V. Smith, International officers who also have been active in the administration of the studio locals' affairs. No reason for the resignation was given.

Directors' Guild Hearing Continues

The hearing before the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board on the petition of the Screen Directors' Guild to be designated the collective bargaining agency for directors, assistants and unit managers was expected to continue until the end of this week. After hearing the testimony of several directors including W. S. Van Dyke, Phil Rosen, Paul Wing, J. P. MacGowan, Frank Tuttle, Hal Walker and Walter S. Mayo, the trial examiner, William R. Ringer, ordered an adjournment to enable the board attorney, William I. Walsh; the Guild attorney, Barry Brannen, and counsel for the producers to make a stipulation agreement concerning the testimony which other directors at present too busy to testify would have given.

Mr. Van Dyke receives approximately $3,250 weekly bonus on successful pictures in addition to his salary of $750 a week he testified. He said that in March of this year he had signed a contract calling for $750 weekly for the first year and rising to $1,750 weekly for the fifth year. He outlined the duties of assistant directors and unit managers, explaining that they were sometimes in complete charge of some phases of a picture such as background, atmosphere and action shots.

Mr. MacGowan, director and at present executive secretary of the Screen Directors' Guild, followed Mr. Van Dyke on the stand. He told of the complexity of the assistants' and unit managers' jobs.

When the hearings were resumed Tuesday testimony and the contract of John Cromwell, who itemized the duties of assistant and unit managers, was introduced. Harry W. Scott and Joseph M. McDonough, assistant directors, also testified at the Tuesday hearing.

Lodewick Vroom this week resigned as president of the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union. He said he wished to retire because the position was "too strenuous" and because he thought he "had earned a rest." He became president of the union last February, succeeding the late Theodore Mitchell. The union will hold an election in November or December.

A will drawn on June 11, 1937, by Pearl White was filed in surrogates court in New York but was not offered for probate because of another will which is said to be en route to this country from Paris, where Miss White died on August 14th.

The paper on file directs that her estate be divided into 10 equal parts and bequeathes three such parts to the Actors Fund of America "or any other worthy and desirable charity that takes care of actors as in the judgement of my executor may deem desirable." Charles Schwartz of the law firm of Schwartz and Frohlich, is executor.

RKO Closes Deals With Schine Circuit

RKO this week closed a deal with the Schine Circuit for the entire 1938-39 RKO program, features and short subjects. The deal is for 65 theatres mostly located in the Albany, Buffalo, Cincinnati and Cleveland territories, Jules Levy, general sales manager, said.

With the Schine circuit houses included, RKO's major circuit deals now include more than 1,200 houses, Mr. Levy said.

Opening Kansas City House

RKO has formed the Missouri Orpheum Corporation to operate the Orpheum, in Kansas City, as a first run house, beginning this month. RKO relinquished its lease on the Mainstreet after operating unprofitably for several years, and following unsuccessful attempts to get the ground rent reduced.

Enforcing Age Limit

Ivan Sabourin, Crown prosecutor at Quebec, said this week that summons were to be served on four theatre owners accused of violation of the statutes forbidding attendance by unaccompanied children under 16.

IN COURTS

Paramount Defendant In Plagiarism Suit

Paramount Pictures, Inc., and Famous Music Corporation were named defendants this week in a suit filed in the United States district court, New York, by Harms, Inc., which charged the defendants plagiarized the plaintiff's song "Tell Me More," in the song, "Says My Heart," which was featured in "Cocoanut Grove."

The complaint, which asks for an accounting of profits and an injunction against the exhibition of the picture and the sale of song sheets, states that Harms, Inc., obtained the rights to "Tell Me More" from B. G. De Sylva, Ira Gershwin and George Gershwin.

Magazine Hearing Set

Lloyd Church, New York supreme court justice, this week referred to Owen E. Reilly the application of William L. Gross, as assignee of Theatre Magazine Company, for approval of a proposed settlement for $1,000 of a Federal Court suit against Twentieth Century-Fox for alleged infringement of the August, 1929, cover design of "Theatre Magazine" in the defendant's picture, "George White's 1935 Scandals." Mr. Reilly will conduct a hearing on the application.

Epic Wins Plea

Francis G. Caffey, federal judge in New York, this week granted the application of Epic Producing Corporation, and Thomas Dixon to take the interrogatories of David M. Sohmer, both individually and as vice-president of the Major Film Exchange, of Marion T. Stone and J. W. White, as treasurer of Skouras Theatres Corporation. Interrogatories were ordered in an attempt by Epic and Mr. Dixon to substantiate their charge made in a suit filed against Stone Film Library, Inc., Marion T. Stone, Treo Film Exchange, Esquire Amusement Corporation, Mr. Sohmer and Skouras Theatres that the defendants were unlawfully distributing "Birth of a Nation."

File Warner Suit

Suit against Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and the Warner brothers personally, was filed this week in New York supreme court by Sylvia Cowane, as assignee of Kwalit Pictures, Inc., in which the plaintiff asked for a judgment for $10,600 with interest from 1923. At the same time a writ of attachment was sought against the property of Jack Warner, located in New York State. The suit is based on two checks, totaling $10,600 claimed given by Jack Warner to Kwalit Pictures in November, 1923, for services and merchandise. According to the complaint, the checks were never honored for payment.

Regal Films, Ltd., will discontinue the importation and distribution of French films under the terms of an agreement entered into with France Film of Montreal. Regal has ceded to France Film all its rights and options in French product for Canada.

Ed Cohen has joined the selling staff at the Omaha exchange and Alvin Stein has joined the GB sales force at Milwaukee.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THE HANDCUFFS ARE OFF—

Highlights of address made before a meeting of the United Motion Picture Theatre Managers of Brooklyn and Central Queens, newly organized in the interests of "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign.

"Since assuming the chairmanship of Managers' Round Table, the most frequent and distressing complaint brought to me by the men in the field, is inability to perform their duties completely through lack of cooperation and encouragement by superiors. In short, willing and able theatremen declared themselves handcuffed to the extent that they could not go about the business of putting over their shows. If business suffered, if showmanship was lacking, they said, then the fault must be upon those who controlled expenditures and not upon the manager raring to go and having neither place nor opportunity to do so.

"Taxed with this indictment, exhibitors in turn in many instances placed the blame upon the manager, accusing that worthy of alibi-ing, of this and that—all of which proved meaningless, since no solution was reached. The fact remained that the industry's well of showmanship was running dry and parched box-offices were bringing on an economic drought in the theatre.

"Now, happily, we have come upon the Big Drive in which exhibitors and managers of all classifications and oppositions have chosen to stand shoulder to shoulder in a common cause. From the spirit displayed here, an enthusiasm duplicated in hundreds of similar gatherings in every corner of the nation, dissension has been dismissed, blame and mud-throwing cast aside. Only one thing remains—a spontaneous desire to put over the Big Show. Exhibitors previously indifferent to adequate advertising and exploitation have seen the light and contributed their portions with eagerness. Managers sickened by constant rebuff, now rally again aflame with the old-time religion as superiors tear down the advertising bars and unlock the exploitation shackles. It is indeed something to live for.

"Every encouragement is now given the theatremen. He is the key man of the Drive in the field. No matter how carefully, how completely the Committees have planned, no matter how much money is given by all branches—the final answer depends upon you managers here tonight and thousands like you in every city and hamlet. Every aid may be ready. Ads, banners, ideas, publicity may pour forth lavishly. But the job is done only when every manager has done his part by utilizing every aid to the fullest advantage.

"Gentlemen, the Big Drive is more than a campaign for the industry. As I choose to interpret it, it is also a challenge to every able showman who is one, who calls himself one. You cannot, you dare not fail.

"From now on, all alibis, real and fancied, are out. No more can it be said you have no support from your bosses. Every man here tonight represents an employer who has given money to the Drive. He hasn't given because he feels charitable. These hard-won dollars have been contributed in order to bring back more admissions. In order to accomplish this, aggressive, showmanly campaigns in every participating theatre must be waged by the manager and this time the bossman is squarely behind him.

"And what of the future? Well, let's do a bit of figuring. The Drive over and success won, as it must, doesn't it sound entirely reasonable that your superiors to whom you have proven the dividend-returning values of adequate showmanship, must be permanently won over to the advantages of consistent campaigning? And does this not indicate a better situation for you?

"Let us remember, gentlemen, that for the first time, all of the industry combines in offering you, the manager, an opportunity not only to secure your position, but also to improve it. It is an opportunity rarely to be had for the asking. I am sure, no one here tonight will pass it by."

A-Mike Vogel

Another Round Tabler to do some boondoggling around his town was Arnold Berger, Greenwich Theatre, East Greenwich, R. I. Berger contacted local liquor store and promoted use of discarded Seagram display which he converted into a lobby display to plug his coming attractions. By use of a little paint the theatremen constructed this setpiece for his revival week.

Round Table in Pictures

Typical Charninsky front was erected by Louie for his opening of "Gold Mine in the Sky" at the Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Texas. Twenty-foot cutout of Gene Autrey was planted atop marquee. Scene stills were mounted on board at base of display.

Attractive advance lobby display was created by Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, N. Y., for his "Marie Antoinette" opening. Period costumes in setting of poster and mounted scene stills completed the setpiece.

Candid cameraman and Max Cooper of the Cove Theatre, Glen Cove, L. I., visited golf clubs, beaches and other places of amusement, where they photographed anyone who was having a good time. Pictures were later displayed on easel in lobby and to those identifying themselves guest tickets were awarded during the engagement of "Having Wonderful Time." Credit card was given cooperating photographer.

Outstanding among displays at the recent Famous Players Canadian Theatre managers' convention in Toronto was "Show of Showmanship" detailed in last week's issue. Aiding Jim Nairn, ad director, were Dan Krendel, manager Tivoli Theatre, Ben Cronk, display department head and Jim Cameron.

Jack Lykes, Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, Ohio, promoted loan of monkeys from pet shop as ad advance buildup for his "Boolo" opening. Big game hunter stationed at side of display was one of his ushers and that's Jack who is so interestedly watching the antics.

Colored jazz band was planted atop the marquee of the Princess Theatre, Montreal, Canada, by Thomas Cleary for his advance publicity on "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Side panels below marquee included lifesize cut-outs of Faye, Power and Ameche.

Authentic Parisian atmosphere was given Joe Sirkin's "Gold Diggers in Paris" lobby display at the Maspeth Theatre, Maspeth, L. I., through use of French posters. Tables, chairs and cocktail glasses promoted from local beer garden completed the display.

Contests Highlight Cocks' "Crowd Roars" Campaign

Three contests were exploited simultaneously for the Emboyd Theatre, Fort Wayne, Indiana by Harvey G. Cocks, general manager of Quimby Theatres and Betty Powley, advertising manager for "The Crowd Roars." For the first time in three years, the Journal-Gazette gave a cooperative five day classified ad contest. Names of Taylor's last eight pictures were scattered throughout the pages. 10,000 fight heralds were distributed and the public was invited to name the winner, round and time in the battle between Robert Taylor and Patsy Perroni. It was called a "fight sweepstakes" and detachable guessing blanks were left at box office.

Tieup was also effected with leading furniture store for window display in which the public was offered guest tickets for the exact time in which a cake of ice containing Taylor's photo would melt. Also promoted was a full page of cooperative ads with the heading "The Crowd Roars at these sensational values," merchants participating were furnished duotone star photos.

Baer Referees Fight

For his "Crowd Roars" date at the Orpheum Theatre, Ogden, Utah, Manager Ross Glassman, got Max Baer to referee local boxing match and had him photographed with a package received via air mail from MGM Studios. Package contained two sets of gloves, one autographed by Bob Taylor and the pair he wore in the picture's fight scenes. Glassman had every kid in Ogden busy collecting coupons given away by local sporting goods stores and the gloves were awarded in a lucky drawing contest.

Tieups Launch Date Of "Boy Meets Girl"

Three major tieups have been effected in New York to aid in selling "Boy Meets Girl," at the Strand Theatre. The first has been arranged with Postal Telegraph, who displayed jumbo telegrams throughout the Metropolitan area, giving picture and theatre credit and plugging Postal's singing telegrams.

The second promotion was arranged with the restaurant chain in the city during which a photographer took pictures of couples in the restaurants tying in with the "Boy Meets Girl" theme. The photos were displayed on cards in the windows of the restaurants, and those recognizing their pictures given free tickets to the Strand.

The Evening Journal covered important spots throughout the city taking photographs of couples, and presenting each girl with a World's Fair Spoon as a start for her hope chest. The photographs were printed in the paper tying in with their giveaway of World's Fair Spoons, and prominent mention was given to the film.

Displays "Texans" Script

Charlie Pincus, Center Theatre, Salt Lake City for "The Texans," in addition to the advance trailer, reports that he secured the original script from the studio which was placed on display in leading bookstore window. Prior to opening, 50 10-gallon hats were hung around theatre and worn about town during the covered wagon days celebration with special imprinted hat bands. Special cards reading "Center's covered wagon days hit" were posted on poles and excellent radio coverage was secured.

Loew's Sell "Jeff" With Boat Contest

Following in the wake of the recently successful airplane model contest on "Test Pilot," Loew's Theatres in the Metropolitan area have just completed an even more enthusiastic Model Boat Contest on MGM's "Lord Jeff."

Contestants were not limited to boats of any certain type. Entries could be sailboats, ocean liners, Roman galleys, or paddlewheel river steamers. There was no age limit. Models were displayed in the lobbies of Loew's Theatres in advance and current with the showing of the picture, often embellished by life-preservers, ships'-lanterns, helms and other nautical equipment. It remained for each theatre manager and staff to create an appropriate display.

Finals were held in each theatre on the Saturday after the opening of "Lord Jeff," followed by Borough finals. The Greater New York finals will be held on board the "Queen Mary" of the Cunard-White Star Line, where the models will be judged by officers of that line at a special luncheon to be tendered district winners.

Over 1,000 models of various crafts were entered in the contest. Small silver trophies were awarded the local winners, with huge gold trophies for the winners of the finals.

The contest was engineered by Eddie Dowden of Oscar A. Doob's Advertising staff.

Gag Copy Helps Publicize "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife"

During the absence of vacationing Chuck Shannon, Belmar, Pittsburgh, Pa., his assistant, Rombert Merton, took over and for "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" planted an easel in lobby with gag copy on each of Bluebeard's seven previous wives, winding up with buildup for Claudette Colbert, the eighth. 1,000 costless colored heralds were distributed, merchant's ad on reverse side covering printing charge.

On "Test Pilot," cardboard parachute constructed by Merton with lettered title and cutout pilot attached by strings were suspended from marquee ahead and during date, and atop box office seven-foot plane was planted. For lobby display, Bob featured a board showing instrument panel of an airplane with explanatory copy, which is reported to have attracted considerable attention.

Treasure Hunt Aids "Gold Diggers" Date

Front page publicity was accorded John Krier's "Gold Diggers" treasure hunt at the Roxy Theatre, Logan, Utah. $15 was buried in small boxes carrying amounts from twenty-five cents to $1.00. The "Gold Rush" was staged on a lot within a block of the busiest street in the city and brought out plenty of "diggers" as well as onlookers.

Stories run in papers explained that the money was buried and that a police guard would patrol the scene of action until the starting gun. Stunt created plenty of reported good will and publicity for the engagement.

Warners Classify "Daughters" Ads

Warner Brothers press book for "Four Daughters" incorporates highly unusual campaign in selling, newspaper ads being divided into three distinctly separate type of campaigns comprehensively planned to deal with various types of theatre situations.

The first group of ads offers a dignified "all type" campaign for audiences in cities of a million population and over. Specially designed for "class" houses, there is a sparing use of illustration with dignified copy stressed, campaign similar to one followed in New York at the Music Hall. The two testimonial ads from Jack L. Warner are included in this group.

The second group is designed for medium size cities. In these, Fannie Hurst, author of the story, is introduced as a strong selling point, and there are discreet plugs for the three youthful stars of the film, Priscilla Lane, John Garfield and Jeffrey Lynn. There is a gradual use of "story" copy.

Third group is designed for small towns and for houses where straight movie copy is most useful. The ads are founded on practical layouts, and copy adapted for spots where more novel treatment may not sell. Warners recommend that these ads be used in support of the two other groups of ads. Included in this section are review ads quoting the New York reviewers' comments, but it is suggested the exhibitor may use his own quotes in place of these.

"White Banner" Sale Planted by Conner

Through cooperation of local merchants, Marlowe Conner, Rhodes Theatre, Chicago, staged a "White Banner" sale. Large white banners on which title was imprinted were displayed in the stores as were smaller ones with copy reading "this item is a white banner bargain." Heralds plugging picture and sale were distributed to patrons inside and outside of the theatre.

Also engineered was search for local boy and girl who had done some courageous act during the summer. Lions Club awarded winner a white banner from stage of theatre. For street distribution, small envelopes were handed out, copy on outside reading "this envelope contains the secret to happiness. Have you the courage to open it?" Inside was folder with picture copy.

Markle Turns Columnist To Boost His Pictures

Enterprising Jack Markle, Coolidge Corner Theatre, Brookline, Mass., is conducting a series of weekly columns under his by-line for five papers in and surrounding his town. The columns are all historical facts about the cities and are compiled gratis by him to the papers. Jack reports that it is an excellent medium of getting the theatre man and his pictures before the public in addition to being a good-will gesture.

To put over his August attractions, Jack planted a two-column ad in local paper listing 15 pictures, guest tickets awarded to those supplying correct list of stars.

POSTER CLASS APPEAL

Setpieces designed for appeal to different classes of patronage in advance of "Lucky Star" at the New York Roxy, created by Homer H. Harman. At left, for man appeal, sold the sport and action background of story. Top left, was aimed definitely to attract young people; above, for the attention of the other women. Posters were displayed in the various lounge rooms and others aiming for general appeal set where the foyer traffic was heaviest. George Hirsch of Poster Craftsman is credited for execution.

"Letter of Introduction" Gets National Tie-in

Universal has arranged with the Majestic Radio and Television Company for a special contest to exploit "Letter of Introduction" in collaboration with exhibitors and local newspapers. One thousand radios, with a study of Charlie McCarthy in relief will be given away to persons in contests in which they write the "best letter of introduction."

Details of the contest are included in a special press book being sent theatremen. Radios will be given gratis to exhibitors.

"Let's Hear From You"

Craft Publishes Paper For "Confession" Date

Bill Craft, Capitol Theatre, Mildura, Victoria, Australia, for his opening of "Confession" got out a tabloid sheet plugging the picture, playdates, etc. Newsboys were stationed on busy street corners calling "extra" and distributing the papers.

Also planted by Bill was a "tune test" over local radio station. Ten tunes were played at certain announced times and listeners were invited to send in their list of titles. To those submitting correct list guest tickets were awarded.

Bell Effects Unique Tieup with Restaurant

Permanent and exclusive weekly arrangement has been effected by publicist Ray Bell, Loew's Capitol, Washington, D. C., with local restaurant. The merchant displays a 40 by 60 in its lobby which carries a still from a forthcoming picture as well as theatre and production credits, and informs all that it is sponsoring an ad writing contest in which winners each week will be rewarded with a free dinner for two.

Newspaper Cooperates

The restaurant prints gratis several thousand cards explaining the contest and these are distributed to each patron. The winning ad is reproduced in the cooperating newspaper and also reproduced on the cards distributed by the restaurant. In addition, copy is carried two or three times weekly in night club column of paper which also plugs current attraction.

Thus, in exchange for ten pairs of tickets, Bell secures display in restaurant, free plugs in paper, co-op ad, several thousand cards placed directly in the hands of potential theatre-goers week in advance of opening and cards listing co-op during current run.

Fox Midwest Kid Clubs Found Important Promotion

"Br'er Fox" Members Aid Managers In Selection of Pictures for Club Matinees

by KEN FORCE
in Kansas City

So swiftly have things moved in the motion picture business that about all it has had time for was the present. But declining grosses and other signs point to the end of the industry's "Topsy" days. It can no longer afford just to grow. The novelty of their product worn off, members of the industry are going to have to do a little planning for the future.

One practical way of creating admissions and good will for tomorrow is to establish the movie-going habit in each new generation as it buds; to so handle today's dimes that they will come back tomorrow's quarters.

Fox Midwest Theatres have had in operation for several years, long enough to know its value, a children's club which has been and continues to be successful. Currently it is active in Beatrice, Neb.; Wichita, Kas.; Sedalia, Mo.; Marysville, Kas.; in two towns in Illinois, and in two theatres in Greater Kansas City. It has been used in Monett, Trenton and Chillicothe, Mo., and in Manhattan, Kas.

One Fox manager, Lewis B. Sponsler, has made work with the "Br'er Fox" clubs at his own and other Fox theatres a special hobby, and his bulletin on club organization has been used in theatres where he himself has not personally helped with the organizing.

The influence of the club and its success is indicated in the record. Active clubs have a total membership of over 25,000 boys and girls from six to 14 years old. In its sixth year at the Fox Uptown, Wichita, Kas., the club has 6,500 members. Over 1,600 attended the twenty-second Saturday of the club season this spring. Average Saturday matinee attendance is 700 for the 28 and 32 weeks of the Uptown's club season. Generally, average attendance is governed by the season of the year and the picture, and very little by the weather. Mr. Sponsler has found. Children play football a good deal in the fall and early winter and with the first snow or two they are out trying sleds, skates and snowballing. Normally the best months are during the school term, but at the Granada, Kansas City, Kas., where the club was opened recently to 4,000 membership applicants in a four-block-long line, a test is being made for the first time to determine whether or not the idea will work through the summer vacation period. Members came to the Granada from five and ten miles away.

More Clubs Forming

At the Waldo, Kansas City, Mo., members are registered from as far away as Olathe, Kas., 18 miles. The feeling of security with which parents drop their children at the theatre on Br'er Fox matinees, knowing that they are in safe hands and

NATIONWIDE SURVEY ON INDUSTRY DRIVE

The news section of this issue largely given over to a nationwide survey in the interests of the industry Drive, contains latest information on what Hollywood has to offer next season, details of the Quiz contest, titles of all pictures concerned, what committees in different cities are doing, etc. Also included is a discussion of the Drive pressbooks and exploitation reports from Round Tablers in the field.

are having a good time, must be considered an additional benefit of such organizations. This fall Mr. Sponsler will help get the club started in seven more Kansas City theatres.

In January, 1930, Mr. Sponsler started a harmonica contest at the Waldo. By June he had an excellent harmonica band, 24 youngsters, nine to 12 years old. E. C. Rhoden, head of Fox Midwest, encouraged the idea and gave the band a trip over the circuit with all expenses paid. The goodwill built for the Waldo by this activity was of incalculable value, and gave Mr. Sponsler the idea of starting a kids' club.

Obtains Wide Cooperation

When, in 1932, he went as manager to the Uptown, Wichita, he worked out a systematic plan for the club, ironed out the kinks and got it to the point where it accumulated effect rather than lost as it went along. He secured the cooperation of newspapers, a radio station (he established the Br'er Fox program on the air), musical instrument dealers, schools and others. Every Saturday was thoroughly exploited. Business firms (Ked's, A & P, etc.) alternated Saturdays in sponsorship. Children planned for the day. They got a candy bar one week, ice cream the next, peanuts, balloons, and so on. Merchants furnished these prizes. Mr. Sponsler adopted the name "Br'er Fox," which originally had been suggested as an insignia for the circuit. He developed an orchestra of 25 pieces which worked each Saturday on the stage of the Uptown. One of the Uptown club's most sensational days was that promoted by Phillips "66." The company spent about $300 on yo-yos, and children received coupons at the box office which later were redeemed for playthings at Phillips' stations. Art Goebel, flyer, wrote "Phillips" 66" in the sky the day of the show, and, from the stage, told the kids of winning the San Francisco-Honolulu non-stop prize. 1,600 attended. Phillips was so impressed it organized its own Knothole Gang, still functioning in Wichita.

"The initial, introductory show is free," explained Mr. Sponsler. "Children are presented a registered card, on the back of which is 'Br'er Fox' and the club pledge, which contains name, address, age, birthday and telephone. Name, address and telephone then are transferred to special file cards, and the membership cards are returned to the children. Every address is a home, remember. Then we draw up a typewritten list of names and telephones.

"At the end of the fourth meeting the boys elect a president and form an executive committee of ten; the girls do likewise. Directly after this, it is our practice to run three trunk telephone lines into a special office in the theatre to call all the homes Thursday and Friday after school.

"Children rarely receive telephone calls," Mr. Sponsler points out, "and they are thrilled and flattered when they are told, 'Someone wants you on the 'phone, Johnny.' 'Hello, John? This is Br'er Fox at the Waldo. Buck Jones is going to be shootin' 'em up here Saturday. We'll have peanuts. Be sure and come.' He's tickled to death. 'Sure,' he'll come. We do this every week."

Officers of the club have regular duties to perform. They run the club; hold meetings in the manager's office. They help select the pictures for the matinees: features, shorts and especially serials. When Mr. Sponsler chooses the Waldo serial, he takes along the officers to preview two or three episodes and determine its quality. The children are very serious about their responsibility in the matter.

Most theatre managers think a kid club is just a bunch of noisy ten cent admissions. Yet to Mr. Sponsler children represent the most fertile field of promotion left to showmen. "They are the future of the motion picture business," he declared. "Every great industry—utilities, railroads, etc., has at some time realized the consequences of firing at only one generation, and has established a public relations department. They know that if they don't reach the coming generation, they won't have a future.

"Many times, and especially is this true now, managers wonder why their business is poor. Yet they continue to swat the nine-year-old—but shake hands with him when he becomes 14 and an adult admission.

"The club helps exhibition as a whole, not just the theatre that has one.

"Train Them When Young"

"Train them when they're young and you have them when they're grown," the theatremanager declares. "They're movie conscious, know stars, follow stories. You're educating them at school age when habits are formed. From six to 12 is the most impressionable age in our lives. By means of such a club the theatre manager becomes an agency for establishing a catholic standard of movie taste in the generation of tomorrow. For the child audience, pictures heretofore have had more negative than positive critics. There have been and are numerous persons to tell children what not to see. To teach and tell them what to see, constructively, is a job that is up to us, the theatre managers, and the kids' club is a method of doing it. There are a lot of fine pictures for children besides 'Snow White' and 'Tom Sawyer,' though the manager who doesn't work with the children of his community would never know it from the usual reaction of parents and teachers."

An experience with the Parent-Teachers Association at Wichita when he first went to the Uptown and started the Br'er Fox Club graphically illustrated to Mr. Sponsler that many pictures were being turned down by parents for children because parents and parental groups had no critical standards by which to judge the quality of a movie for child consumption, and were simply saying "no" unless they were positive it was harmless.

A group from the P.-T. A. called on Mr. Sponsler. They confided to him that they had studied and studied to learn what children should see and still were at a loss. After Walt Disney, Our Gang comedies, and, once in a while, a suitable book, what else could they recommend?

"Why do you think you have to be so careful?" asked Mr. Sponsler.

"The movies are so powerful, children so sensitive. They come home frightened; they have had dreams."

Son's Tastes Guide Father

Mr. Sponsler told them his own son had seen everything from Mae West to "King Kong," but that he had never experienced any such reactions. Any time he was confused or troubled he talked the matter over with Dad. Left alone, the child had figured out for himself what he liked, and had developed a firm, discriminating taste for good pictures. He had, through his own experience in seeing movies, arrived at much the same conclusions as adults: he liked good films, disliked poor or shoddy ones. His ideas and moral directions had not been confused: he still did not smoke, as some youngsters; he still was in the upper tenth of his class every year, and he still wanted to go to West Point.

Planned and executed properly, the kid club idea will work anywhere; big town, little town, or city, the manager feels. The biggest problem, he finds, is to get it started properly, with plenty of enthusiasm, the proper pictures, and the novelties (or edibles) which sponsors provide. It has to be a lot of fun for the kids, and the manager must be honest and fair with them, just as with adults.

Mr. Sponsler is probably the best known man in the Waldo district. "Hello, Mr. Sponsler!" comes from tots hardly able to reach the children's fountain, on up to and including the parents. The Br'er Fox club is responsible. This is the easiest means by which the manager can make his a household name in the neighborhood.

DISPLAY ADS ON NEXT PAGE

(2) An unusual copy angle that served not only as a laudatory expression of congratulation to Darryl Zanuck, in spotlighting "Alexander," but also as a smart job of prestige building, made important by the signature of John Balaban, Balaban & Katz headman. Layout arranged by Bill Hollander's department accomplished its purpose of riveting immediate attention. Size: 85 lines on 3-col.

(4) Since date on "Sky Giant" at the Rialto, Peoria, Ill., came while the papers were still filled with Corrigan and Hughes, suggestion by district manager Tom Ronan for tie-in copy was worked out by publicist E. G. Fitzgibbon, hooking the two flyers and picture star together with the line "Knights of the Air." Size: 95 lines on 3-col.

(5) Distinctive ad style created by Mort Blumenstock for the entire advance campaign on the new policy at the New York Strand featured a sweeping "S" in varying bendays to emphasize each of the units, to carry the eye naturally from one to the other. Sufficient white space was aimed for in the layout of lettering and star heads. Size: 120 lines on 4-col.

(6) The romantic leads of "Tropic Holiday" being very popular in his sector, Harry Botwick, State, Portland, Me., adapted the press books ads to sell the romance with a touch of comedy, letting the illustration carry most of the selling. Top catch line was aimed at the young folks. In other ads, Botwick concentrated on romance plus the spell of the tropics. Size: 100 lines on 2-col.

(7) Aiming to carry the theme of the picture in his hold-over ad "Robin Hood" at the Stanley, Jersey City, adman Bob Paslow used the attractive device of an arrow imbedded in the reverse circle. Pen sketches though effective were unobtrusive and the holdover was given more importance by accompanying copy. Size: 60 lines on 2-col.

(8) Art Cohn's sock angle for "Little Tough Guy" holdover at the Queen, Wilmington, Del., was the Dead End Kids background plus the hottest blast copy he could fashion to follow through his advance and current copy. Size: 125 lines on one-col.

Mayor of Memphis Greets Caravan On 'Arkansas Traveler'

Reporting on the progress of the "Arkansas Traveler" covered wagon sent out jointly by the State of Arkansas and Paramount in the interests of state publicity and the coming Paramount picture of the same title, Manager Fred Ford, Malco Palace, Memphis, Tenn., forwards tear sheets showing large space and photos in the local press celebrating the entry into Tennessee.

Starting from Little Rock, Arkansas en route to New York, the caravan was greeted by an escort of motorcycle police and taken through the main thoroughfare to the City Hall. There, Mayor Overton of Memphis was presented with a proclamation from Mayor Overman of Little Rock. This was followed by a press luncheon at the ballroom of local hotel where Buddy Rogers and his orchestra were holding forth. The band leader was photographed signing the "Travelers" log which was reproduced in local dailies.

The covered wagon is the first advance stunt to plug the world premiere of the picture in Little Rock, the caravan to be followed by a streamline version under the same auspices for additional publicity before the opening. In all the caravan covered some 3500 miles through the principal cities of the south, east and middle west where welcome campaigns were arranged.

Plants "Introduction" Contest

On behalf of "Letter of Introduction," Ford tied in with the Press-Scimitar for an introduction contest wherein readers were invited to address 100-word letters of introduction to Charlie McCarthy, informing the wooden star who they were and welcoming him into Memphis. Best letter were rewarded with Majestic radios, part of the national tie-in arranged by Universal, identified by a figure of Charlie himself as decoration. Guest tickets were also awarded.

The contest was tied in on a supposed lament from Charlie who claimed (in the publicity) that outside the members of the cast his circle of acquaintances in Memphis was limited.

"Let's Hear From You"

Ties Founders Month To "Crowd Roars"

Don Stitt, Harris Dubois Theatre, Dubois, Penna., tied in "The Crowd Roars" with Founders Month held there in honor of John P. Harris, founder of the Harris Amusements Corporation. 21 merchants cooperated and each gave an entire window to the picture and theatre celebration. Every night during the month, the theatre honored a founder of one of the local cooperating concerns, each store in return devoted one of its main windows to a special display.

2000 heralds were distributed by five and ten chain, tying in the picture and merchants founders' month. Stunt which attracted considerable attention was placing of health scale in front of theatre with girl attendant. Persons coming closest to height and weight of Bob Taylor received guest tickets.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies. When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed. Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Omaha, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

We passed through the period, as everyone else does, when we thought there wasn't very much more for us to learn, that we had acquired about all the knowledge there was to be acquired, but the Dutchman spoke the truth when he said "Der longerst a man lives der more he finds yeeminy kraut oud," and that's our case. We find we can learn something every day. We recall when we played pictures with two subjects on one reel and without even sub-titles. Then we got full length features that required a full reel; these we billed very strongly. Then later on we got a two-reel feature de luxe and then we concluded that the picture industry had arrived at a state of perfection, but later on we got "talking pictures" and then we were sure the industry had arrived at the end of the trail. Sound came in and it was as great a revelation as the Edison electric lamp.

We visited Sam Blair of Belleville, Kansas, when he was installing sound in his theatre at a very great expense and we told Sam he was crazier than a Kansas bedbug, but was he? They called Jules Verne crazy when he predicted we would travel under the sea, but was he?

The time was when we thought we'd have to go to the cities to see "talking pictures" but our traveling for twelve years has changed all that. Today we can see as good pictures and hear as good sound in the small hamlets as in the cities. Today theatres are equipped with all the modern improvements and comfort that the cities can give us.

We find theatres all over the country as comfortable as can be made, good sound, good pictures, good ventilation, warm in the winter and cool in the summer. Upholstered seats, carpets on the aisles, good projection, and, in fact, as comfortable as can be found in the super-deluxe theatres anywhere except perhaps not quite as elaborate, but just as comfortable nevertheless. We can see as good pictures in Pawdunk as they do on Broadway, and so we find that the Dutchman was right.

Our experience has taught us that the motion picture industry has kept step with the march of progress as well, if not better, than any other business, and this, we find to be especially true with the small town theatres, but then, you know that already, so what's the use tell about it.

We came down here to attend a theatremen's convention. It was 99 in the shade and we drove 175 miles in the sun and hot wind to get here, and after we got here we concluded that what little sense we had, if any at all, was so slight that it wasn't worth mentioning.

Mr. Ralph Blanton, the general manager of the A. H. Blank enterprises, including the Tri-States and Central States circuit of theatres, with headquarters at Des Moines, Iowa, made the principal address and outlined a program to stimulate attendance at the theatres, which program seemed to meet with general approval. Ted Mendenhall, who is branch manager for Paramount, acted as secretary and the meeting seemed to be harmonious throughout and Mr. Blanton's speech seemed to meet with considerable enthusiasm.

The attendance was light, but very few from outside the city were in attendance. This was due, no doubt, to the extreme hot weather and the further fact that it was called on primary election day.

We missed a lot of our oldtime friends, such as Kennedy from Broken Bow, Flakenburg from Lexington, Burras from Crete, Bemond from Ord, Mons Thompson from St. Paul, Wes Booth from Nebraska City, Bob Booth from Auburn, Oscar Johnson from Falls City, Cramer from Stanton and Bert Beams of Red Cloud, all of Nebraska, and many, many more boys we were anxious to meet. Then we missed Dale Goldy from Cherokee, Bill Bogart from Rock Rapids, Kerberg from Sheldon, Johannesen from Paulina, and dozens more from Iowa, all of whom had sense enough to stay in out of the hot weather. We did meet a lot of the film boys, Eddie Rostermund, Fred Thorstensen, Izzy Weiner, Carl Nedley, Ike Rubens, Joe Rosenberg (or something like that) and a number more besides the exchange managers, and, while the attendance was light the meeting seemed to be a success.

The other day the mercury stood at 99 in the shade, and night before last it jumped down to 55 in our bedroom and we jumped up and put a cover on our bed, and Oh Gertie, what a relief. If John Piller of the Piller Grand at Valley City, North Dakota, had anything to do with sending that cold wave, we want to thank him. Thanks, John, and give our regards to Ma Piller and the girls.

Hot, hotter, hottest. For fifteen days the mercury has been monkeying around the 100 mark with no rain, and the corn is beginning to show the effects of it. If the boys on the board have sold corn long they better watch their step and take up with Wallace and see what he can do about it.

Two years ago it was 114 in the shade when we got to Fargo, North Dakota. We turned and went into north Minnesota thinking it would be cooler around the lakes, that is, we thought it would but we were mistaken. We finally got back to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, to Sherm Fitch's RKO office, but how we did is still a mystery. Sherm put us to bed in the basement, where it was cool, and we are giving Sherm credit for saving our life. Right now the mercury is headed for 100 and whenever it gets hot we are not worth a Patagonian thin dime with a hole in it. The fact is our market price isn't much above that at any time. We envy the boys who can sit along the seashore and watch the waves roll in. It's so hot right now that about all we can think of is the North Pole, so we are going to quit and give you a rest and if you will drop in we will add a glass of iced lemonade.

TOTALITARIAN

WE have been hearing a lot about "government in business". The motion picture is currently being promised a lot of government in this industry.

The cables of Wednesday brought the news from Rome that the government of Italy was officially taking over the handling of all foreign film.

This puts Italy neatly in complete accord with the pattern of the motion picture programs of Germany and Japan, the three of them members of the triangular propaganda film pact long since recorded and discussed, somewhat exclusively, in the pages of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

The development of this week is also in complete conformity with the whole picture of the totalitarian theory and plan. The eventuation has not come without warning, as witness the several presentations on these pages of translations of expressions from the hands of Vittorio Mussolini and the columns of the Duce's own paper, Il Popolo d'Italia. Those expressions, intended for home consumption, were, it may be observed, considerably at variance with the tones of semi-official diplomatic representations of the state of affairs.

It is not, you will observe, that Italy would ban American product entirely, but rather that it will take the bargaining out of the hands of business enterprise to deliver the deals to the decisions of a bureau which would curtail the distribution of film imports and further the distribution of home-made "cultural" product fabricated by Italian producers under Italian Government observation, if not supervision.

The rising barriers in foreign markets are of concern to the whole of the American industry. The influences, while inhibitive, are, however, not entirely destructive. There is excellent prospect that as the domestic market rises in increasing ratio of importance in the world gross the jobs of production, distribution, and of exhibition are likely to be better done at home. The fact that 481 out of 574 features announced for Hollywood production are tales of American life and locale is evidence enough that the production community is aware.

The effects of the first world war gave American production vast advantage, made it extensive. The maneuvers for the next war tend to make it intensive.

SAVING THE NATION

THOSE flamboyant sunsets of the last fortnight have now been traced to the dust floating over a spot in Hollywood where Mr. Russell Birdwell made a speech telling the motion picture industry what to do.

Mr. Birdwell's major concern up to now has been getting publicity for Mr. David Selznick and his works on the screen. That has been exceptionally well done.

Mr. Birdwell is full of energy, ideas and fluency. The other day he made a speech before the Advertising Club of Los Angeles to advocate "a publicity czar" for Hollywood,

"a man like Thomas E. Dewey, if necessary, to handle any and all blasts against the cinema and its people."

That leaves one confused. Mr. Dewey is a lawyer, a criminal lawyer. Mr. Birdwell's defensive project is inferential indictment.

Incidentally, since Mr. Birdwell spoke, Mr. Dewey appears to have stepped on his foot.

But that was just a curtain raiser, anyway.

LAST week Mr. Birdwell took up the motion picture in a big way with an assignment to Hollywood to "use motion pictures for an even greater defense of American democracy." This was before the Authors Club, Inc.

"... The time is not far distant when the entire democratic world will turn to Hollywood for help. ... Hollywood should ... become the mouthpiece of Democracy. ... Hollywood must realize it ... or it is not beyond the realm of possibility that the United States government itself will step in to assist in that function. ... This is not to say that the motion picture industry must give itself over entirely to the manufacture of propaganda. ..."

If Mr. Birdwell doesn't mind too much, the suggestion might be made that what the motion picture needs most and what the United States needs most, right now, and continuously, is a reliable supply of good entertainment. Hollywood ought not to be over-worked and that is all a grateful nation can ask.

Meanwhile Mr. Birdwell suggests: "It might be a good idea for leaders of the industry to call a conference at once with agencies of the United States government ... for the defense of Democracy through motion pictures ... to plan on telling the world. ..."

It was previously understood that the industry had recently established contact with the United States through a document marked "In equity No. 87-273". As for "telling the world", the Department of Justice just did that.

That will be all for a while.

INTERNATIONAL

WHY 'Snow White' Lost" is the title of a tart bit of editorial in the New York Evening Post making comment on the decision of the International Film Exposition to give the Mussolini Cup instead to "an obscure German documentary film on the 1936 Olympic games at Berlin" as "an Italian effort to please Germany".

In this instance it was possibly more to please Herr Adolf Hitler, who is said to admire much the lady who edited the Olympic film, Fraulein Leni Riefenstahl. Back in '36 The Herald had an article indicating that the picture contained a lot of American newsreel material which had been expropriated.

The Venice "International Film Exposition", by the way, is said to owe its origin, and operation, to a hotel proprietor who invented it to make business.

Box Office Increase

During the first week of the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign, receipts at the box office of the nation's motion picture theatres increased ten per cent over the corresponding period of 1937. In some localities, according to the campaign committee, business was from 20 to 45 per cent higher than last year. Meanwhile, special promotional committees have been organized in some 50 communities to handle publicity and exploitation of the combined local theatres. The national campaign committee this week undertook a survey to determine what type of advertising will be used in the future. The first 11 ads employed in the campaign were institutional in nature.

Consent Decree

Department of Justice officials in Washington were reported ready to welcome any suggestions for an amicable settlement of the Government's anti-trust suit against the motion picture industry, although no overtures along such lines have been made. It was intimated that representatives of the companies involved were expected to come to Washington some time this month for initial conferences on the case. Also there was an indication that the companies were planning to confer in Washington on a proposal put forward some weeks ago by Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, that a "stand-still" agreement be established under which the companies would refrain from acquiring further theatre properties during the litigation.

The possibilities for a consent decree to end the suit and the various processes and consequences involved are explained on page 25.

Record Story Buying

The greatest number of literary properties acquired by motion picture producers in any one month of the last year and a half was purchased last month, 20 producers buying 93 stories. George A. Hirliman, independent producer, was the heaviest buyer, acquiring the film rights to 28 novels, one magazine and three original stories. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Republic acquired the next largest number of properties, ten each. Heading the list of MGM's purchases was "Show Boat." The company bought the film rights to both the novel and the stage show. Republic bought all original stories.

Doubles and Music Fees

Several questions of importance to exhibitors throughout the country will be among the many problems brought to the United States supreme court for determination during its fall term, which opens October 3rd.

Involved in appeals already filed with the court are the questions of the states' authority to control the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, at issue in several jurisdictions, and the propriety of a ban by distributors on double features.

UA Administrative Policy

Ratification of United Artists' new administrative policy, centering the principal executive authority in Murray Silverstone, vice-president and chairman of the executive committee, was voted at a board of directors meeting in New York last Thursday. The new policy brought the elimination of the post of general sales manager, a position held for the last two years by A. W. Smith, Jr., and resulted in Mr. Silverstone replacing Harry B. Buckley, vice-president, as a member of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. No action was taken on the projected election of Mr. Silverstone to the presidency of the corporation nor on the ratification of a new five-year contract for George J. Schaefer, general manager of domestic distribution.

CIO Menace Charged

The Committee for Industrial Organization and Communist supporters are at the bottom of the "unsupported charges and libelous insinuations" being directed against the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees in Hollywood, Harold V. Smith, International vice-president, said in a statement to the press on Wednesday in which he said IATSE leaders have been investigating the source of recent attacks.

"On the heels of the latest publicity attack from the same anonymous minority source that for the past year has been attempting to blacken the IATSE leadership," the statement said, "a small group of active agents is circulating through the ranks of studio workers, feeling out prospects for a CIO invasion."

"It further develops that minority factions attacking the IATSE from within have spread their tentacles into every other craft and union organization in the entertainment fields. Working with known Communists this group plans similar maneuvers in other studio organizations. Their principal objective is to disrupt present organizations and destroy existing contractual relations between crafts and employers to make way for a CIO drive. To us the situation is clear . . . invariably the attacks have come from the same CIO Communist sources. Now we are bringing about our own investigation. . . ."

Service Charges

Immersed in the problems of obtaining product and of maintaining what he considers a reasonable price for that product the British exhibitor, with considerable foresight, is preparing to press for a reduction in that portion of his overhead which goes for rental and maintenance of his sound projection apparatus. Acting for him the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has opened negotiations with the sound apparatus manufacturers looking toward a readjustment of rates when present contracts expire late this year and early in 1939.

Aubrey Flanagan reports from London on page 32.

Exhibitors Meet

Autumn weather and a new show season has brought a renewal of exhibitor organization activity. Theatre owners of Kansas, Missouri, West Virginia and New York met in convention this week and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America progressed with plans for the annual convention to be held in Oklahoma City October 30th to November 1st.

Control in Italy

The uncertain status of present releasing arrangements for American films in Italy was capped on Tuesday by a Government announcement in Rome that all film deals would be handled by a new semi-official unit. The new monopoly was seen as requiring the liquidation of any American distribution branches in the country. Previously it was learned that the Italian Government had declined to issue quota permits for the fourth quarter of the year and that important changes were contemplated in the quota regulations negotiated in 1936. Representatives of American companies were reported seeking a compromise with the Italian Government.

News from and about Italy is on page 18.

Paramount Expansion

Paramount is contemplating expansion of its theatre operations in England, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount, said Monday on his return to New York after four weeks abroad.

Mr. Griffis reported that he had made a comprehensive study of the company's theatre operations and probable requirements in England and would report his findings to company officials. He said, however, that no specific plans had been formulated yet.

Paramount's European distribution grosses are 18 to 20 per cent ahead of the same time last year, Mr. Griffis said.

Ben Goetz, in charge of British production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, also arrived in New York this week. He brought with him a print of "The Citadel," which was completed at the company's British studio just prior to his departure.

Date for RKO

Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey this week, as expected, fixed September 29th as the adjourned date for the hearing on the confirmation of the plan of reorganization of RKO. The hearing was postponed because of the absence of Federal Judge William Bondy, who will preside at the hearing.

The hearing on determination and approval of fees scheduled for Monday was postponed to October 6th, also because of the absence of Judge Bondy who is on vacation.

Buying "Strike"

Allied States' 130 member theatres in Chicago have agreed to refrain from any and all buying of 1938-39 product pending the outcome of their contemplated anti-trust suit, supposed to be filed this week, against Balaban and Katz and major distributors for alleged unfair clearance accorded B. and K.

If the suit is a prolonged one, Chicago observers Wednesday predicted a serious buying-and-selling situation in the territory.

Koenig to 20th-Fox

William Koenig resigned on Tuesday as executive studio manager at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and immediately signed with Twentieth Century-Fox as general production manager. Mr. Koenig had been with MGM for 20 months. V. L. McFadden, who held the Twentieth Century-Fox position temporarily, will become Mr. Koenig's assistant. Mr. Koenig had been inactive at MGM for some time, Jerry Mayer taking over more and more of his duties. Before joining MGM he held a similar position at Universal.

Newsreel Ban Lifted

A temporary restraining order against the showing of News of the Day's films of the isolation block of the Holmesburg Prison, where four prisoners died, was vacated this week by Gerald F. Flood, common pleas court judge in Philadelphia. The film had been confiscated by order of John A. Boyle, assistant district attorney, who contended that the showing of the film would be prejudicial to any defendants prosecuted because of the deaths. Attorneys for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, distributor of News of the Day, argued that Mr. Boyle's action infringed on "freedom of the press." The picture showed the exterior of the prison, the cell's upper-radiation system and a doctor making tests of the "heat" in the cell block.

Universal Remodeling

Universal this week announced a $1,000,000 construction and remodeling campaign involving the erection of a six-story administration building and two large modern stages to get under way shortly. M. J. Fox, vice-president, will arrive in New York from Hollywood Monday to confer on details with Nate J. Blumberg and J. Cheever Cowdin, the latter having approved plans and expenditures while in Hollywood on a recent visit.

In a three-cornered deal set by long distance telephone Saturday between Mr. Blumberg; Jules Stein and Frank Mastroly of the Music Corporation of America, representing Edgar Bergen, and Lester Cowan and Charles Beyer, representing W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy will star with Fields in Universal's "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man." The company expects to place the picture in production early in October.

GB Campaign

Gaumont British this week announced it would launch a special campaign on six of its forthcoming productions, the principal feature of the drive to be a contest with cash prizes. The contest will be tried in four cities and if it is then found that there is no conflict with the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" drive GB will appropriate $200,000 to launch the campaign on a national scale. Emphasis, it was explained, will be local, patrons of one theatre competing only with other patrons of that theatre. The films involved in the campaign are "Strange Boarders," "Crime Over London," "Man With 100 Faces," "The Lady Vanishes," "The Frog" and "Climbing High."

Columbia Course

The course on the history, technique and aesthetics of the motion picture conducted by the Museum of Modern Art Film Library for the Department of Fine Arts, Columbia University, last year, will be repeated this year under the direction of John Abbott and Iris Barry, director and curator of the film library.

The first of the 28 three-hour classes will be held the evening of October 4th and will continue through the winter and spring sessions of Columbia University.

Among the topics for the course are: history of the film to 1915; history of the film to 1928; basis of film technique-camera work and lighting; the scenario-sources of film material and preparation of script; corporate history of the film; social significance of the film. Visits to studios and laboratories will acquaint the students with the production, cutting, dubbing and processing of films.

Enumerating, Mr. Thomas said the WPA theatre is "un-American because it produces Communistic plays; because it favors giving jobs to radicals; and because it fosters New Deal propaganda." He charged further that many employees are Communists, a large percentage of amateurs are employed, supervisors have no theatrical experience, and professional actors are denied jobs because of refusal to join the Workers Alliance, an organization of the unemployed.

Deems Taylor, left, of musical fame, has signed a contract with Walt Disney to collaborate with Leopold Stokowski on the score for a new cartoon which will have "The Sorcerers' Apprentice" as a basic theme.

RECEIPTS UP 10 PER CENT AS NEW SEASON STARTS

Theatres of Representative Key Cities Show Gains 20 to 45% Higher in Some Sections, Campaign Committee Reports

Receipts at motion picture theatre box offices at the end of the first week of the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year Campaign" averaged nearly ten per cent higher than a year ago throughout the country, and in some places the increase ranged from 20 to 45 per cent. And industry efforts to sell the screen to the public still had 16 weeks to penetrate into the farthest corners.

Lacking full official returns from the campaign committee on public reactions at the box office in the drive's opening days, a study of receipts for the first week was made independently, statisticians selecting the territories of Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Seattle as typical localities and representative of a good cross-section of the country.

The independent investigators analyzed receipts for the first four weeks from August 18th, up to and including September 8th, their findings appearing in the accompanying chart. Arbitrarily pegging theatre income in the 1937 period at 100 per cent, they reported that business on September 1, 1937, averaged 98 per cent, and jumped to 103 per cent over the Labor Day holiday—beginning of the new show season—by September 8th, while receipts this year averaged 97 per cent for the country on September 1st, and jumped to 108 per cent by September 8th, presumably with the aid of the industry's efforts for and in behalf of the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign.

From the campaign headquarters of the committee itself came sporadic reports from the territories, indicating that in some sections business had increased from 20 to 45 per cent.

Circuits Show Gains

Early reports, according to campaign officials, showed more than average improvement in attendance for this time of year in New York, Boston, Dallas, Atlanta and many New England and far western cities. An analysis of the business reports, it was explained at campaign headquarters in New York, indicates that the improvement is more marked in territories in which the drive is best organized and most actively supported.

Widespread attendance increases were reported by Loew's and Skouras offices, the campaign officials said. It was pointed out that all circuits have been asked to send in reports on weekly business, with comparisons with the period immediately preceding the start of the campaign and with the corresponding period last year. However, comprehensive reports from other than the aforementioned two circuits have not been received as yet, it was explained.

A survey conducted by the campaign officials in New York City showed, they announced, that box office receipts ranged from 20 to 45 per cent more than in the corresponding period of 1937.

The campaign committee announced that 35,000,000 "Quiz" booklets had been printed and

HAYS EXPLAINS DRIVE TO RADIO AUDIENCE

As a guest on the Lux Soap "Radio Theatre" hour Monday night, Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, took the radio audience behind the scenes to explain the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" drive.

The campaign was undertaken, he said, to "earn more friends" for the film business. He "broke down" the motion picture dollar, explaining how 65 cents of every consumer dollar remains in the community in which it is spent, 10 cents going to the distributor and only 25 cents going to Hollywood.

distributed. An additional 10,000,000 copies are now being printed at the rate of over 3,000,000 daily. In Canada an edition of the booklet is being printed in French.

Meanwhile, members of the advertising committee for the campaign, Howard Dietz, chairman, Charles McCarthy and Robert Gillham, this week began a check of all available sources to determine what type of advertising should be used to follow up the institutional ads inserted in daily newspapers throughout the country during the first two weeks of the campaign. Opinions as to the future advertising are being sought from advertising men, distributors, exhibitors, publishers and the public, it was said at the drive headquarters.

During the first week a barrage of five advertisements was released while in the second week six ads were utilized. No decision as to whether the future ads will be institutional in nature or whether a different course will be followed has been made as yet, it was announced.

It was definitely stated, however, that there will be more advertisements.

Support for the drive from National Screen Service, Eastman Kodak Company and Dupont was announced by the drive committee this week. National Screen Service sent a check for $2,000 to drive headquarters as "a token of its close identification with the purposes of the motion picture industry drive."

The Eastman and Dupont contributions were in the form of film, Eastman giving 1,000,000 feet and Dupont, 600,000 feet. The contributions will make it possible to issue 1,000 prints of the campaign's short subject, "The World Is Yours."

Now in Cutting Room

The short is now in the cutting room and is expected to be ready in about a week when Gordon Jennings and Peter Ballbush complete their montage shots and inserts of stars to include in the films. Basis Wrangell, directing, completed the narration part of the subject this week. Players include Anne Shirley, Dorothy Peterson, Samuel S. Hinds, Charles Grapewin and Johnny Walsh.

A thorough explanation of the workings of the $250,000 "Movie Quiz" contest, which is being conducted in conjunction with the drive, is given in Trailer No. 6 of the drive. The

Special Promotional Committees Organized in 50 Communities Concentrate Drive Activities; Members Named

Special promotional committees have been set up in approximately 50 communities to organize the publicity and exploitation for the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign and to serve as a clearing house for the joint promotional plans of theatres combined in the drive.

Where such committees have been organized, the local campaigns have taken on a unified character and have been highly successful in making the drive a matter of public celebration, it was announced at the campaign headquarters in New York.

It was pointed out, however, that community drives are not limited to those cities in which promotional committees have been established but are now well under way in more than 200 communities. In the situations where promotional committees have not been formed, local drives are being conducted under the direction of committees organized more or less spontaneously and comprising, in most cases, theatre managers and advertising men from independent and circuit theatres.

The promotional committees, it was said at campaign headquarters, have been largely instrumental in contacting the local press, planting news and feature stories, obtaining editorial comment, and in many instances, free institutional ads. They also have functioned in organizing local parades, street features, store tie-ups and other cooperative local activities.

Chart Reflects Gains in Theatres' Grosses

PRONOUNCED uptrend of business at the theatres, accompanying the launching this month of the industry's campaign, is reflected in the chart recording box office receipts from representative cities for the four weeks ended September 8th, last year and this. The Labor Day week-end took in September 3d, 4th and 5th. The rise is shown to have been markedly sharper and higher than in 1937. The average taken for the comparison was for the four weeks in the 1937 period. The cities are Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Seattle.

 In several sections exhibitors have undertaken to supplement the $250,000 "Movie Quiz" contest with local contests and additional local prizes.

Regarded as typical of the local contests is the one outlined in a letter sent to committee headquarters by David Ginsburg, director of publicity for the Sidney Lust theatres in Washington, D. C., and Maryland areas.

Mr. Ginsburg wrote:
 "The idea is to give patrons two movie quiz books, and have them enter one in the national contest and the other in the local one. A group of local judges will decide the latter contest."

Businessmen Contribute $2,000 to Bronx Drive

Following a meeting in the Bronx at which Hal Hode of Columbia Pictures spoke, a group of 200 Bronx business men and merchants pledged a total of $2,000 to aid the drive in their territory. The theme of Mr. Hode's address was that "trade follows the movies."

The money raised will be used to decorate Prospect Avenue and vicinity for the drive celebration. In addition, merchants in the audience announced their intention of buying quantities of contest booklets for distribution in their stores.

Hollywood To Stage Parade in Campaign

Plans were drafted this week for an all-Hollywood parade to be held either during the last week of this month or the first week in October.

Participation also is being arranged in the various activities of the National American Legion Convention in Los Angeles this month.

The film industry will be represented in the three large parades of the convention week, and a special night has been set aside as "Motion Picture Night" at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

Department Store Gives Window to Contest in Easton

Laubach's, department store in Easton, Pa., is devoting an entire window to the "Movie Quiz" contest, using fashion stills sent out by campaign headquarters.

Cooperation of the Boston Sunday Advertiser and J. A. Malloy, managing editor, in the Movie Quiz is emblazoned on each delivery truck of the publication. The Boston American and the Daily Record, also owned by the New England Publishing Company, are carrying daily stories on the drive. Mr. Malloy says "the motion picture industry may well be the bellwether that will lead all business into the light."

The store also has had a booth erected in the center of its main floor, where girls are stationed distributing contest booklets and furnishing information regarding the "Movie Quiz."

The headquarters for the drive, formerly located at 1540 Broadway, was moved this week to a suite of rooms in the RKO Building, Radio City. The floor in the Loew's State Building, formerly used by the committee, was contributed without rental by Loew's, as temporary headquarters, pending suitable arrangements for regularly housing the campaign activities. The space has been rented to a long-term tenant, making the transfer necessary.

SUPREME COURT TO DECIDE STATUS OF DOUBLE BILLS AND MUSIC TAX

Florida's State Authorities File ASCAP Action; Large Distributors Challenge Pennsylvania Ruling Against Ban on Duals

The United States supreme court is about to determine the legal status of the right of distributors contractually to prohibit double bills by concerted action, and also the question of the states' authority to control the operations of and fees charged by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, a point at issue in several federal jurisdictions.

Both questions, of considerable importance to exhibitors throughout the country, will be the two main points involving this business to be brought to the Supreme Court at Washington for determination during its fall term, which opens October 3rd.

The ASCAP suit was filed with the court by Florida's state authorities, contesting an injunction by the federal district court for the northern district of Florida against enforcement of a state law regulating the licensing of copyrighted songs.

One of Several Cases

The case is but one of several which are expected to reach the Washington tribunal as a result of ASCAP's campaign to test the constitutionality of statutes enacted by several states to curb the organization. Constitutionality of the Florida law, however, is not directly involved in this case, which is based on technical points involving the propriety of the court's action.

The double-feature question was brought to the court by the large distributors, who challenge a ruling of the federal court for Pennsylvania that their ban against dual bills is in violation of the anti-trust laws, on the grounds they acted in concert.

A brief in answer already has been filed by Harry and Louis Perelman, Philadelphia independent exhibitors involved in the case, who urge the court to confirm a Pennsylvania court decree on the ground that the distributors' refusal to sell pictures to theatres operating on a twin features policy is an illegal restraint on interstate commerce.

The Florida Action

The Florida suit was filed by ASCAP to obtain an injunction against Cary D. Landis, later state attorney general. A temporary injunction was secured, but after Mr. Landis died last May, other state officials sought dismissal of the restraining order on the ground that it was directed against the late attorney general as an individual. ASCAP countered with a plea to amend its complaint to include George C. Gibbs, who succeeded Mr. Landis. Both petitions were denied.

In bringing the case to Washington, the Florida officials contended that a special three-judge federal court at Pensacola had

AMATEUR DISPUTE OVER NEWSREEL

Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, has ruled that Helen Crlenkovich, San Francisco diving star, might lose her amateur status because she allowed a newsreel company to photograph her in action. Mr. Ferris said in effect, however, that she would retain her amateur status if the newsreel company pays the A.A.U. $500.

He contended that if the company does not pay, it would be up to the swimming star to protect her amateur status by court action enjoining release of the film.

Hoyt Wood, chairman of the San Francisco chapter of the association said: "As far as Miss Crlenkovich is concerned, she was absolutely in the clear. Our association gave her permission to go south to make the film. We know she did not receive any remuneration for her part in the picture."

acted arbitrarily and failed to make any findings of fact or announce any conclusions of law in imposing the injunction. It was also claimed that the court action served to aid an alleged price-fixing combination and that recognition should have been granted the statute as a valid exercise of the police powers of the state.

Jurisdiction Factor

Of considerable importance is the point raised by the Florida officials as to whether the federal courts have jurisdiction in controversies over a state law in the absence of any charge of interference with interstate commerce. It was pointed out that the injunction did not involve the validity of any copyright or raise the issue of infringement, and it was contended that the state, in enacting the statute, sought merely to control the relations between the music organization and users of music within the State of Florida.

While the Philadelphia double-features suit raises practically the same questions as the Hoblitzelle Dallas case, there is no direct relationship between the two, the Philadelphia case being a civil proceeding and the Hoblitzelle action an effort by the Government to eliminate certain practices called monopolistic. Involved in the Pennsylvania proceeding are Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, M-G-M, RKO, Vitagraph and United Artists.

In appealing the court ruling, the distributors contended that the purpose of the double-bill ban was to avoid the building up of a situation which would react unfavorably upon both producers and exhibitors and was adopted legally under the authority conferred on them by the copyright acts.

On the other hand, the Philadelphia independent exhibitors charged the ban was imposed as part of a scheme to maintain rentals at a high level, and contended that the double-bill policy had been adopted as protection against the preferential and protective treatment given chain theatres, which deprived many films of their drawing power before they reached the independents' subsequent-run houses.

At the same time, it was pointed out, some of the companies which prohibit double bills in subsequent-run houses have adopted the same policy in their own affiliated theatres elsewhere.

"It is obvious that the restriction against double featuring on one program with its attendant penalties is coercive because independent exhibitors must contract with the defendants to stay in business profitably and cannot contract with any of them if double features are resorted to," the supreme court was told by the independents.

"The restriction denies to the exhibitor a free and untrammelled market because of the inevitable concert of action between the defendants, since if an exhibitor intends to use a feature film of one defendant, this defendant will refuse to deliver if a feature film of another defendant is intended to be used concurrently, and the second defendant could not deliver the second feature film by reason of the same restriction, if to be used conjointly with the first feature film."

The result, it was declared, is to dam the free flow of interstate commerce, and the exhibitors have no relief, since they cannot depend upon independent pictures exclusively and thus have no recourse except to accede to the major distributors' demands.

Fred Stone Honored In Radio Broadcast

Those who spoke included Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, George M. Cohan, Rex Beach, Irving Berlin, Jerome Kern, Frank Craven and John Golden. The program was broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company. Mr. Kennedy spoke from London and Mr. Kern from Hollywood. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who could not be present, wired her regrets. Mr. Stone voiced his gratitude.

Penn Newsreel Theatre Opens

The Penn Newsreel Theatre, 456 seat house on 34th Street opposite Pennsylvania Station, New York, was opened this week. The project, including the site, cost $143,000. Principals of Penn Newsreel Theatres, Inc., are Stanley Heller, William Klein and Joseph Steiner, managing director. In addition to the five newsreels and March of Time, the opening bill included "The Memories Linger On," short subject made up of newsreel and old film shots going back 20 years. It is the first of a series being produced by Bert Ennis, who is also handling promotion for the theatre.

BROADCASTERS SAY THEY GIVE TOO MUCH TO FILMS, RECEIVE TOO LITTLE

Representative Says Companies Will Have to Pay for Time If They Expect Help in Publicizing Product

Nurturing the belief that there has been too much talk about how much radio needs Hollywood, and too little on how Hollywood needs radio, the organized radio industry, through its National Association of Broadcasters, this week set out to determine the part played in motion pictures by radio, concluding that films are getting too much free attention on the air.

The broadcasters point out that the industry is spending all of its "Greatest Year" advertising budget—$600,000—in newspapers, and is giving nothing to radio. The broadcasters unloosed their feelings in this connection on Wednesday, August 31st, when one Ed Kirby, reputed to be an executive of public relations for the Association in Washington, issued a so-called "ultimatum" that film companies will have to pay for radio time in the future if they expect continued help from broadcasters in the publicizing of new films.

The radio group feels its contributions to the motion picture business deserve "some economic return, the same way in which the newspapers justly charge for and earn a fair return for the services they render in the visual field," Mr. Kirby informed Howard Dietz, director of advertising for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and chairman of the "Greatest Year's" campaign advertising committee.

So far as is known the film industry has ignored the entire matter.

Cites Aid to Songs, Actors, Films

Radio in the past, Mr. Kirby reminded the film industry, has been extremely generous in "plugging" songs, actors and pictures on a "charity" basis, and broadcasters are "at a loss to follow the logic" behind the committee's decision to use only newspapers in advertising the campaign.

And so a survey to determine precisely the part played in motion pictures by radio was undertaken this week by the National Association, with a view to adoption of policies to guarantee that the "privileges" radio has been giving films "will not be abused or ignored."

That the Association is not alone in its feelings toward motion pictures as a result of the "Greatest Year" campaign "slight" became known over the weekend when the Pennsylvania Broadcasters Association, meeting in Philadelphia, passed a resolution denouncing the film industry for failing to include radio as a media of advertising for the campaign. "Appropriate steps" are to be taken to restrict the amount of film publicity on stations of members.

The Association's questionnaire, prepared by Paul Peters, director of research, is being sent to the more than 400 stations which are members of the Association, asking for information as to the amount of time, sustaining or commercial, which has been given over average broadcasting periods to exploit motion pictures, motion picture personalities, motion picture songs, Hollywood fashions, film gossip or other phases of the picture industry.

The complaint of the broadcasters over the failure of the film industry to recognize radio

Exhibitors Renew Complaints Against Radio Competition, Guest Appearance

The feeling of theatre owners against wholesale appearances of film stars, as "guests" or otherwise, on radio programs, is by no means dormant, for this week exhibitors throughout western Missouri and Kansas renewed the attack against what they term to be "unfair competition" of screen stars broadcasting radio entertainment at peak hours of theatre business.

That the independent owners still do not like radio shows, and disapprove particularly those sponsored by motion picture producers, or in which film producers participate, or allow their stars to participate, was disclosed by action of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association at its convention in Kansas City, last Wednesday and Thursday. A resolution in condemnation was prepared by a committee composed of Jay Means, Kansas City; Homer F. Strowig, Abilene, Kan., and A. J. Simmons, Lamar, Mo., and was passed on the convention floor.

Exhibitors have been fighting film stars' appearances on the air since radio virtually moved to Hollywood, four years ago, in an invasion of studio talent rosters. Exhibitors have, however, been quiet of late on the subject, although they have not once expressed a reversal of their stand, but, rather, sporadically aired their views, as in the case of the Kansas-Missouri action of last week.

as an advertising media in planning exploitation for its "Greatest Year" campaign, officials of the association said Tuesday, was merely one angle of a situation which it was indicated has been building up over a long period.

It was stressed at the Association's Washington headquarters that there is no resentment over newspaper advertising; that it is recognized that newspapers are an important media for the exploitation of any product, but the broadcasters believe they can offer an equally important medium, and should be so recognized by the film industry.

When the survey has been completed and the results analyzed, it is the hope of the Association officials that they may sit down with leaders in the picture industry and discuss the situation in a "friendly manner" and work out some solution.

Factors Involved

It was pointed out that factors involved in this situation included "long-winded" introductions of film personalities, including a list of the pictures in which they have appeared, the one just finished and the one about to be undertaken; the multiplicity of Hollywood gossip and fashion columns; the lengthy "blurbs" accompanying the presentation of a song from a picture, and similar advertising methods whereby producers have been able to secure direct advertising, not only on commercial programs where it was less objectionable, but on sustaining programs put out by the networks.

So far as exhibitors are concerned, Association officials pointed out that in many localities they have tieups with broadcasting stations which appear to be highly satisfactory to both parties.

There is no denial that broadcasting needs Hollywood, said the Association. It needs it, it was explained, because in Hollywood there is a "pool" of talent suitable to the needs of radio. But it is contended that Hollywood needs broadcasting, and it is felt that the film companies have never admitted that need. Station owners feel that there has been a tremendous use of radio by the film industry and too much emphasis on Hollywood.

20 PRODUCERS FILL IN GAPS IN '38-39 PROGRAMS BY BUYING 93 STORIES

Largest Number of Monthly Purchases of Film Material in Last Year and a Half; 28 Novelettes to Hirliman

Continuing to round out their programs for the 1938-39 season, 20 motion picture producers have acquired 93 story properties, the greatest number purchased in any one month during the last year and a half.

George A. Hirliman, independent producer, ranked as the most active buyer of the month in August. He acquired the film rights to 28 "Preacher Devlin" novelettes by L. G. Foreman, and, in addition, bought one magazine and three original stories.

However, despite the wholesale purchase of novels by Mr. Hirliman, originals outnumbered them, 44 of the 93 purchases being in this classification. A total of 37 novels, six plays, five magazine stories and one newspaper serial were purchased.

Considered one of the most important of the acquisitions was the purchase by David O. Selznick of the motion picture rights to Daphne du Maurier's book-of-the-month, "Rebecca." Mr. Selznick paid $50,000 for the book and he plans to star Carole Lombard in the picture.

Corrigan Deal

Although no figures were released, RKO Radio was reported to have paid Douglas Corrigan, aviator, between $75,000 and $100,000 for the right to produce a picture based on the pilot's "wrong-way" flight to Ireland. Studio script writers are preparing the screenplay which has been titled tentatively, "My Flight to Ireland."

In the month the New York office of GB was advised from London that the company had purchased film rights to the Richard Essex series of mystery stories, identified as the "Les-singer" novels. It is planned to produce the stories as a series of feature films.

Heading the list of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's purchases for the month was "Show Boat." The company acquired the film rights to both the novel by Edna Ferber and to the stage show by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II. MGM's purchases totalled 10, four original stories, four novels and two plays.

Lubitsch Company Active

Ernst Lubitsch Productions, Inc., recently formed by the director and Myron Selznick, was among the August buyers. The company acquired the film rights to the Hungarian play, "Shop Around the Corner," by Nikolaus Laszlo. Simon Raphaelson is preparing the screenplay for the production which will be the first produced by the new company. Dolly Haas will have a leading role in the film.

Purchases by independent producers far outnumbered those made by the large companies. MGM's purchases were matched, in number, by those made by Republic, which acquired 10 original stories. Warner Brothers bought four originals; RKO two originals and two novels; Paramount, one play; Universal, four originals and one magazine story; Twentieth Century-Fox, three originals, and Columbia, one original. In the independent field, the buyers were Mr. Hirliman, 28 novels, three originals and one magazine story; Victory, eight originals; Coronet, one original; Principal, two originals; Monogram, one original and one magazine; Bud

DISTRIBUTION UNDER ITALIAN MONOPOLY

Government Agency to Take Over Arrangements; Liquidation of U. S. Branches Seen

BULLETIN

The Italian Government Wednesday declared an official monopoly for handling foreign films in Italy, Rome reporting that the move was seen there as requiring the liquidation of American distributors' branches there. The decree goes into effect immediately and provides that all foreign film distribution arrangements be handled by a new Governmental agency.

American distributors are continuing negotiations to obtain a modification of the decree through the American Embassy in Rome. In addition foreign representatives of American companies are hurrying to Paris for a meeting to determine future policy and to formulate representations to Italy. Paramount, MGM and 20th-Fox operate from two to ten branches each in Italy. Other companies distribute through Italian companies under franchise. All would be liquidated.

American film companies have not been permitted to export a single picture to Italy since September 1st, it was learned officially Tuesday. Nor can they export product to that country unless and until Il Duce's Government issues new quota regulations.

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in New York has been aware for weeks that Italy has had in mind the amending of the existing quota, negotiated with the United States in 1936, and has expected that "new arrangements" would redistribute permits to give Italian producers a better distribution position at the expense of American firms.

Italy failed on September 1st to assign quotas for the final quarter.

Press dispatches from Rome last week said that Italy would denounce the Italian-United States agreement of 1936 and would reduce the quota on American films from 250 to 150 a year. However, United Press on Sunday reported from Rome a denial of a slash of 100 permits as issued by Luigi Freddi, director of the films section of the Ministry of Popular Culture, although he admitted that there would be "new arrangements," indicating that a reduction to some extent is contemplated. The original report also stated that American distributors as a whole would be allowed to take out of the country only 10,000,000 lire annually instead of 20,000,000 lire as formerly.

Italy Orders Executive of British Firm to Leave

Meanwhile it appears that Italy intends applying its "purge" of non-Aryans, or those so associated, as ordered three weeks ago, to motion pictures. United Press reported this week from Rome that Mario Zampi, director of Two Cities Film Company, of London, who recently arrived in Italy to produce a film, had been "invited" by authorities to leave the country within 24 hours. Mr. Zampi went to Rome to produce "Source of Imitation" with a British cast including Romney Brent and Elsa Lanchester, wife of Charles Laughton. Fascist authorities were reported to have advised him not to produce the film in Italy, because "the president of the company is Jewish."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer this week became the second U. S. subject of Italian ire because of a motion picture produced, resentment against its "Marie Antoinette."

Paramount is said to have been warned that its position in Italy will be made most difficult unless its plans to revive "Farewell to Arms" are abandoned immediately.

Robert Farinacci, former secretary of the Fascist party, urged in an unsigned editorial in Cremona's "Regime Fascista" that censors prevent the appearance of "Marie Antoinette" in Italian cities. The French, he said, were furious with the film because of historical inaccuracies and because it "succeeded in showing all the ferocious bloodiness, malice and barbarian qualities of the people of the French Revolution, from which after 104 years the Peoples' Front has been born."

An article in the weekly magazine "Film," ascribed to Luigi Freddi, described "Farewell to Arms," drawn from Ernest Hemingway's novel, as "an insult to the Italian soldier."

Nazis Ban Sales Film Made in U. S. by DuPont

Public showing of the film, "Sell More Through Sight!"—a film about the American psychology of buying, was banned this week in Germany, according to a wireless to the New York Times.

The film was produced by the DuPont Company of Wilmington, which, with Pathe Film, control about equally the DuPont Film Manufacturing Co., one of the two largest manufacturers of motion picture raw stock in America, along with Eastman Kodak.

Nazis Point Up "Axis" With Fascists on Films

Tobis Film (Tobis Filmkunst G.m.b.H.), one of the largest of the Nazi controlled producing-distributing companies in Germany, sent to the American motion picture trade press this week reports on several of its new filming activities, including in its releases an explanation of the extent of the Nazis' "friendship" with Italy in the matter of motion pictures, as in other things.

Marchetti Has Plans to Film Two in Italy

Two deals providing financing by Italian companies of pictures made in that country by American principals were negotiated by Roger Marchetti, Los Angeles and Hollywood attorney, during a two-month stay in Rome. Mr. Marchetti arrived in New York on the Rex last Friday.

Under the first of the two deals negotiated, Scalera Brothers, Italian producer-distributors, agree to advance to Mr. Marchetti's principals 10,000,000 lira ($500,000) for the production of one picture.

Under the plan, his principals, whom he said he was not at liberty to identify at this time, would provide a producer, director, star, writer, cameraman and soundman—all to be Americans—for the pictures involved in the deals.

Mr. Marchetti said on his departure for Italy in July that Edward Small and B. P. Schulberg were willing to make pictures in Italy under his plan. He is attorney for Bing Crosby, among other Hollywood personalities.

Rowland Field, an agent for Mr. Marchetti, in New York, asserted Wednesday that Mr. Marchetti feels "confident that the recently reported non-Aryan antipathy of Italy will not prevent the production of American pictures in that country."

CAPITAL AGAIN HEARS OF POSSIBLE 'AMICABLE' SETTLEMENT OF TRUST SUIT

Justice Department Intimates That a Series of "Conferences" Will Be Held in Washington This Month

BULLETIN

J. Robert Rubin, general counsel of Loew's; Austin Keough, general counsel of Paramount, and Richard Dwight, counsel engaged by Twentieth Century-Fox, probably will represent the five distributor circuits in conferences with the Department of Justice at Washington, which, according to trustworthy sources, will be arranged by the majors within 10 days to discuss the "invitation" of the Department of Justice that the circuits refrain from further theatre expansion pending outcome of the Government's suit.

Settlement of the Government's anti-trust case against the film industry by a consent decree was predicted in Washington this week as Department of Justice officials indicated they would "welcome" any suggestions for amicable settlement of the suit which might be offered by the eight major companies involved. Previous reports of a possible consent decree entered into by the companies were belittled in New York on the grounds that a consent decree based on the present all-embracing allegations in the pending complaint would be impossible.

While it was said at the Department that no overtures along that line had yet been made, it was intimated that representatives of the companies were expected to come to Washington some time this month for the first of what may be a series of "conferences." The initial discussions, however, it was emphasized, would be purely general, and some surprise was manifested this week around the Department that such a meeting had not already been asked by the film companies.

Department officials explained that civil suits can readily be terminated by consent decrees and suggested that the companies, as well as the Government, would find a negotiated settlement cheaper in both time and money than long-drawn-out litigation.

While Department officials insist that they would accept consent decrees only if the Government was given substantially all the reforms it sought in a case, in other Washington quarters it was said the Department is by no means certain that a decision in the New York case would be entirely in its favor and is ready to make a trade, although no suggestions were made as to what demands would be abandoned by the Government in such a process.

Meanwhile, Department officials were said to still feel that the companies should enter into a stand-still agreement pending disposition of the suit, under which they would acquire no more theatres. Suggestion to that effect was advanced to the companies three weeks ago by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, but so far as is known there has been no official acceptance. Executives and attorneys of the major defendants in New York have been strictly silent in the matter, although it is gen-

Russell Hardy, U. S. Trust Officer in Film Cases, Enters Law in Allied Offices

Russell Hardy, until recently special assistant to United States Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, assigned to the trial division of the Department of Justice, is now engaged in the private practice of law at Washington, with headquarters in the same suite occupied by Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied States, in the Securities Building at 729 Fifteenth St. NW, phone Metropolitan 5010.

Mr. Hardy resigned his position with the Department last month, after 24 years of service in which he was prominent in the handling of motion picture anti-trust and trade practice matters. The Myers-Allied office in which he now headquarters witnessed the beginning of most of Allied's legal and legislative attacks against the organized industry, including the laying of ground work for the Congressional anti-block booking bills and the complaints resulting in the present federal trust suit against the majors—for all of which Allied has openly taken credit.

As representative of the Attorney General's department, Mr. Hardy was active in the hearings of the National Recovery Review Board, headed by the late Clarence Darrow, into the workings of the NRA film code early in 1934, seeking unsuccessfully to examine Sol A. Rosenblatt, administrator of the code, as to his activities in the formation and enforcement of the document.

For a number of years, he was engaged in the preparation and handling of cases brought by the Government against the motion picture industry, his most important assignment being to take charge of the trial of the motion picture companies and executives defendants in the St. Louis suit.

erally expected they will confer with the Department before the end of the month.

The principal reason for the delay in responding to Mr. Arnold's invitation to discuss the status quo proposal is reputed to be the absence of Colonel William J. Donovan, chief counsel for RKO, who is expected back from a European vacation September 19.

Although Mr. Arnold has advised the five theatre-owning defendants who have been invited to the conference that he wishes to discuss an agreement on maintaining the status quo in current theatre operations in order to obviate the necessity of the Government's moving for an injunction, it is taken for granted in New York legal quarters that the subject of a consent decree will be explored also at the meeting. The Government has repeatedly evidenced its willingness to discuss the subject with the companies, but there is no evidence on which to base a belief that much progress could be made toward a consent decree without a basic modification of the objectives of the Government action, particularly with regard to separation of exhibition from production-distribution.

If definite plans for meetings are worked out, it is possible the Government's action may be delayed in order to give the film companies an opportunity to make a voluntary stand-off offer.

Regardless, Mr. Arnold's division this week set out to gather complaints of independent exhibitors against distributors. For this purpose Allied States is sending questionnaires to all members, who are being asked to submit their complaints on facts to which they are willing to swear, so that the Department of Justice can draw them up in affidavit form and return them for signatures under oath.

It is believed that Mr. Arnold intends to use this material in preparation of an application for the injunction to prevent circuit expansion in case his conference with major company attorneys fails to result in the standstill agreement pending trial of the anti-trust suit.

The bulletin states that Abram F. Myers, national Allied general counsel, has asked the local unit to obtain "rough statements of facts that members are willing to swear to, and

"The major defendants seem to be of the opinion that this case will not be tried for a year or so, and that in the meantime nothing will happen. It is anticipated that this preliminary action will bring to a head any plans the majors may have for adjusting industry differences." The preliminary action referred to is the temporary injunction application planned by the Government.

The questionnaire states that "the Government desires the facts of bona fide complaints of the following practices":

1. The sale, lease or other disposition of theatres by independents to a major company or its affiliate, where "coercive methods" are employed by a major.

2. Conditions and limitations imposed by the major companies upon independent exhibitors to benefit competitive affiliated theatres, including preferences, selective contracts, overbuying, unreasonable clearance, increased protection, and the like employed to benefit affiliated theatres.

3. Trade practices imposed on independent exhibitors by the distributors, including block booking, forcing of shorts, arbitrary playdates, score charges and such.

Also asked for is information on "the imposition of provisions prohibiting the use of double bills by independents," which "are not insisted upon in the contracts of the majors between themselves," the fixing of minimum admission prices and "film rentals which are unconscionable and excessive."

Washington observers see chances good that the suit will never go through trial. Department heads are understood to be receptive to offers for a consent decree, provided they secure the major points at which they aim, and are willing, it is said, to forego some of the less important points to save the money and time

ANNUAL MPTOA PLANS SET; STATE GROUPS MEET

Exhibitors of Kansas, Missouri, West Virginia and New York Hold Sessions; Interest Shown

September and the start of the new show season is bringing a renewal of activity in the ranks of organized exhibition, owners of Kansas, Missouri, West Virginia and New York meeting in convention this week, while executives of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners are setting plans for their annual meeting next month. Nebraska MPTO opens its convention Tuesday at the Hotel Loyal, Omaha, and Allied of New Jersey meets October 19th in Atlantic City.

The MPTOA, as previously determined, will meet in Oklahoma City from October 30th to November 1st, in conjunction with the annual meeting of the state's MPTO and also one in which exhibitors throughout the southwest will participate.

Morris Loewenstein, president of Oklahoma's group, and Ed Kuykendall, head of the national organization, started this week to work out a program, in Oklahoma City.

Officers To Be Elected

On the agenda is an MPTOA directors' meeting at which national officers will be elected for 1938-39. Mr. Kuykendall refused to disclose whether he will again be a candidate for the presidency. Also set is a "Movie Ball" to which Hollywood and Broadway talent will be invited. The ball will be open to the public, and will be held at the Civic Auditorium. A banquet will be held on another evening.

The state groups will time their meetings to follow earlier day meetings of the MPTOA, and speakers in all cases will be asked to repeat their messages at each organization's sessions.

The keynote will be the trade practice program and attendance problems.

Meeting at Oklahoma City's Biltmore Hotel this week to arrange the conventions were: Orville Enloe, Homer Jones, L. C. Griffith, Harry Lowenstein, Marvin Enloe, Morris Loewenstein, Max Brock, J. C. Hunter, Bill Gruber, Byron Dinty Moore, Ed Kuykendall.

Appointments to committee chairmanships were made as follows: Reception, L. C. Griffith; registration, Charles Zears; transportation, "Pop" Rader; display booths, Morris Loewenstein; entertainment, Dinty Moore; golf, H. J. Griffith and Horace Falls; ladies (all chairmen), Mrs. H. R. Falls, Mrs. C. O. Fulgum, Mrs. H. J. Griffith, Miss Ona Johnson and Mrs. Byron Moore; program, C. Morris Loewenstein; auditing, Wade Schroeder.

Mr. Loewenstein was named general convention chairman.

Tri-State Meets at Same Time

Assurances that the MPTO of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee will convene in Oklahoma City at the same time have already been given by R. X. William, Jr., president, and similar action by other associations in states bordering on Oklahoma is anticipated. Missouri is also expected.

The circuit convention of the Griffith Amusement's managers, as well as meets of the Griffith associated companies, also will be held in Oklahoma City during the national convention of the MPTOA.

Efforts are being made to secure the same

Kansas-Missouri Elects, Talks Trade Practices

Independent exhibitors in western Missouri and Kansas still do not like radio shows, and disapprove particularly those sponsored by motion picture producers or containing motion picture stars, it was disclosed by action of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association in its annual convention last Thursday in Kansas City. The resolution was prepared by Jay Means, Kansas City; Homer F. Strowig, Abilene, Kan., and A. J. Simmons, Lamar, Mo.

The association favors a conciliation board on fair trade practices composed of an equal number of distributors and independent exhibitors, and "everyone appearing before this conciliation board shall agree to abide by the decisions of the board."

The convention demanded that all producers supplying 16-mm. film shall no longer do so for use in free shows "or in situations detrimental to any regularly operated theatre." The KMTA disapproves service of "entertainment film to, any account for free civic or merchant shows," and it authorized its officers to contact General Motors, Standard Oil, and other corporations giving free shows in an effort to get those companies to cooperate with the local theatreman before showing.

Ed Kuykendall said that his organization still is against governmental interference, but that apparently the present government suit is necessary to waken distributors to the need of action in the direction of establishing fair trade rules for the industry. Unless it has those by next year, he added, the Neely bill will pass.

New officers of the association elected are

Frank Cassil, Rialto, St. Joseph, Mo., president, succeeding John Stapel, Rockport, Mo., who has held the office three years; H. F. Strowig, Plaza, Abilene, Kas., vice president; George Hartmann, Armour, North Kansas City, Mo., secretary-treasurer, succeeding R. R. Biechele, who has held the office several years. Directors are John Stapel, ex officio; Tom Edwards, Ozark, Eldon, Mo., and Ed Rolsky, Kansas City, for Missouri. For Kansas: Mrs. C. H. Barron, Pratt, Kas.; C. A. Schultz, Kansas City, and O. F. Sullivan, Wichita, Kas. Officers also are members of the board.

The association named R. R. Biechele chairman of the legislative committee for Kansas and John Stapel for Missouri.

West Virginia Reelects Hyman to Presidency

Sol J. Hyman was re-elected to the presidency of the West Virginia Theatres Managers Association at the closing session of the annual convention held at the Green Brier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., last Thursday. Wendell H. Holt was renamed secretary-treasurer, while the following were designated vice-presidents:

Dr. C. P. Church, R. D. Marks, Mrs. P. T. Thomas, N. B. Carskadon, R. W. Phelen, L. E. Rogers.

Mayor James G. Stuart of Cincinnati was the principal speaker at the convention banquet, with Smith Ballew acting as master of ceremonies.

The organization is composed entirely of independent exhibitors and is unaffiliated with any national organization. Action taken at the convention indicated that the organization would remain independent and unaffiliated.

The convention was routine and consisted of open forum discussions of tax situations throughout the state, of the tax imposed by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, of new bills regulating the industry which may be presented at the next legislature and of "an unqualified endorsement of the action of the United States Department of Justice in its present investigation of the film industry."

Allied of New York Hits Film Producers on Radio

Condemnation of producer participation in radio programs and a resolution to assist the prosecution by the government against the eight major producers highlighted the meeting of Allied Theatres of New York last week in Syracuse.

One hundred and twenty-two independent exhibitors gathered at the Hotel Syracuse for the sessions which were conducted by President Max A. Cohen. Representatives of major companies also were in attendance.

Mr. Cohen outlined the objectives of Allied and emphasized the necessity for a united front in correcting the grievances of the independents.

It was pointed out that all independents who subscribed to Allied's objectives were invited to membership but that Allied had passed the stage of soliciting members.

Forty-four new members were added to the roster of Allied. The unit's membership now stands at about 250.

Another state meeting may be held before the end of the month.

Harry G. Kosch, general counsel for New York Allied, explained briefly the government suit and requested short statements of grievances be sent to Allied so that they can be put in affidavit form and turned over to the Department of Justice. He also promised Allied's attention to legislation coming up in Albany.

Edward Golden, Monogram vice-president, pointed out that a united front could accomplish much in the radio controversy. Harry Buxbaum, Twentieth-Fox manager, warned exhibitors about including all controversial matters in their contracts before signing.

Other speakers included Ted O'Shea, MGM; Charles Stern, United Artists; John Scully, Universal, and Bert Sanford, Altec.

UA BEGINS NEW MANAGEMENT POLICY, HEADED BY SILVERSTONE; SMITH QUILTS

Sales Manager's Post Eliminated; Silverstone Succeeds Buckley on M.P.P.D.A. Board; Schaefer Retains Authority

Members of the United Artists board of directors, after twice failing to convene because of a lack of a quorum, mustered sufficient votes at a five-hour session in New York last Thursday to ratify the corporation's new administrative policy.

The board's decision resulted in:

Concentration of the principal executive authority in Murray Silverstone, vice-president and chairman of the executive committee.

Elimination of the sales manager's post, a position held by A. W. Smith, Jr., for the last two years. Mr. Smith resigned.

Curtailment of authority formerly vested in Harry D. Buckley, vice-president, who, until the resignation of Dr. A. H. Giannini as president last June, was the top ranking executive.

Replacement of Mr. Buckley by Mr. Silverstone as the company's representative on the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Although they were understood to be on the agenda for the directors' meeting, no action was taken on the election of Mr. Silverstone as president or on the ratification of a new five-year contract for George J. Schaefer, general manager of domestic distribution.

However, it was indicated that the matters would be taken up by the board at meetings to be held in the near future. The action was deferred, it was understood, to permit the attendance of Alexander Korda, who arrived in the United States from England on Tuesday aboard the Normandie, and of Douglas Fairbanks, who is expected from England next week. Later, however, it was indicated that the election of a president was deferred until the annual meeting in November.

Korda Denies Production Move

Following the arrival of Mr. Korda, reports were circulated to the effect that he would renew his efforts to obtain authorization to engage in production in England for other companies besides United Artists. Mr. Korda, however, after failing to thwart interviewers by emerging from the steerage quarters of the Normandie, declined to comment on the reports.

After only one day in New York, Mr. Korda left by plane for the coast where officials at the United Artists studio said his visit was in behalf of promotion of his "Drums" and Sabu, boy star of the film. (Picture on page 56.)

Mr. Korda failed to gain authorization for outside production activities last winter but it was pointed out that a modified form of the same plan may be entertained at this time. Production designed primarily to keep Mr. Korda's studio busy and calling for only cursory supervision by the United Artists partner-owner might not be objectionable to the company's other partner-owners, it was explained.

Following the board's meeting on Thursday, Mr. Schaefer was non-committal regarding his new contract, although he indicated that final action could be expected shortly. It is generally understood that the company has met all of the conditions requested by Mr. Schaefer and, after the meeting, Mr. Silverstone made it clear that Mr. Schaefer's authority in distribution was not affected by the adoption of the administrative policy.

The position of Mr. Buckley under the realignment was clarified by company officials on Saturday when they pointed out that although some of his executive functions were transferred to Mr. Silverstone, Mr. Buckley would continue to serve as alternate for the head of the company whenever the latter is away from the home office. The company head formerly was resident on the West Coast whereas now, executive headquarters are in New York. It also was explained that two administrative functions have been added to those formerly within Mr. Buckley's province and in these and other executive capacities he will be answerable only to Mr. Schaefer.

Mary Pickford Returns

The return from Canada to New York of Mary Pickford last week was taken as indication that the board would have a quorum, permitting the holding of the twice-delayed session, but Miss Pickford left by plane for Hollywood before the meeting. The quorum was obtained when Dennis F. O'Brien, representative for Miss Pickford, returned to New York from a vacation trip. Miss Pickford, who was understood to be making the coast trip to confer with Samuel Goldwyn and Charles Chaplin on matters to be settled at the next board meeting, also was represented at last week's session by Willard S. McKay, New York attorney.

Others in attendance were James Mulvey, Mr. Goldwyn's representative; Charles Schwartz, Mr. Chaplin's representative; Edward C. Rafferty, representative of Mr. Fairbanks; Emanuel Silverstone, representing Mr. Korda; Mr. Murray Silverstone and Harry Muller, comptroller.

The profit-sharing plan for United Artists producers, Mr. Silverstone explained, will go into effect at the end of the year and will cover the product delivered up to that time. The participation in 50 per cent of the company's net profit will be on the basis of the merit of each production delivered by the company's producers, he said.

He also said that the board considered the problem of foreign markets and the restrictions and limitations confronting all distributors in these fields. He described the problem as one to which considerable thought is being given.

Denies Schulberg Release Plan

Mr. Schaefer denied Hollywood reports that negotiations are underway for the release through United Artists of pictures produced by B. P. Schulberg. He also denied a report that Mr. Fairbanks has abandoned his plan for producing one picture, which he announced a few months ago.

Mr. Smith's duties with United Artists will be absorbed in part by Mr. Schaefer and in part by district sales managers of the company. Mr. Smith plans to sail on the Queen Mary September 21st for a European tour. He expects to return in October.

Mr. Smith, a former newspaper reporter, entered the film business in September, 1914, and was associated with Pathe, Hodkinson Company, First National, and Warner-First National. In 1935 he became vice-president of Vitagraph Corporation and resigned from the corporation in July, 1936. He was appointed general sales manager for United Artists in October, 1936.

Settlement of Trust Suit Seen

involved in a trial. This attitude is given additional point by suggestions that the Government's petition asked for more than the department believes can reasonably be secured from the courts.

Formal action on the industry's own plan of self-regulation is expected to be delayed for a short while pending at least one conference between distributors and the Department, as was stated in MOTION PICTURE HERALD September 3rd. That the distributors are planning to return to their original idea of self-regulation after the meeting still seems likely.

From the nature of the series of suits which has been instituted by the Government it is evident that the Department will seek to have the monopoly statutes rewritten practically in their entirety, but its success in that direction will depend entirely upon the attitude of Congress.

Coast Owners Act

Mediation of grievances between Fox West Coast and independent exhibitors moved two steps nearer this week as Albert Galston, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California named three members to the three-three arbitration board and settlement of the zoning and clearance schedule difficulties between Al Hansen, operating two theatres, and FWC was reached.

Mr. Hansen previously had threatened anti-trust action against FWC. The decision to arrive at a peaceful settlement without litigation was part of Charles Skouras' recent invitation, as FWC head, to independents to confer with him about any grievances.

U.A. Refuses Access to Books

Los Angeles United Artists exchange officials Friday refused permission to Albert J. Law and his aides to make a general inspection of their books in the probe of alleged monopoly in distribution and exhibition in Southern California. Mr. Law, special Assistant United States Attorney General, declared.

Mr. Law, with Harold Collins, also special Assistant United States Attorney General, has been in California for months investigating charges of independent exhibitors that Fox West Coast enjoys a monopoly of product.

Appeal on Dakota Law Due

Attorneys for Paramount and Minnesota Amusement will file their petition for leave to appeal to the United States Supreme Court from the statutory court decision upholding the constitutionality of the Allied-sponsored North Dakota theatre divorce law on or before September 19.

The court's approval of the petition is virtually automatic, although it may require some time to obtain the signatures of the three Federal judges who constituted the statutory court.

It is believed, however, that the appeal papers will be filed with the United States Supreme Court in Washington by mid-October.

Sponsorship of an Allied-sponsored theatre "divorcement" bill in New York State will, as elsewhere in the country, depend on the outcome of Paramount's forthcoming appeal in the Supreme Court seeking to invalidate the North Dakota statute, according to Harry G. Kosch, counsel for New York Allied.

Theatre Council Debates Revival

The Second National Convention of the Legitimate Theatre, striving to devise ways and means of reviving the legitimate theatre—a subject discussed ever since motion pictures became the American public's favorite amusement—got off to a stormy start at the Hotel Astor, New York, Tuesday, when William A. Brady, producer, illustrated the theme of his address by criticizing the Dramatists Guild and the stagehands' and musicians' unions.

Blames Lack of Unity

The trouble with the stage, Mr. Brady told his audience, is that "we don't stand together for the common good." He charged that the Dramatists Guild makes "all sorts of rules" for producers, but fails to turn out good plays. He told of having to hire 27 union employees in St. Louis when, he said, he did not need them for his production of "Street Scene."

Following the meeting, a special session of the executive board of the American Theatre Council, under whose sponsorship the convention was held, was called. A resolution was adopted voicing regret "that remarks of one of the speakers criticizing instances which happened in his personal union dealings of many years ago, and with reference to the Dramatists Guild, should have been made, as this is contrary to the spirit of cooperation which has motivated the second national convention and the American Theatre Council."

In speaking of the Dramatists Guild, Mr. Brady criticized the organization for asking J. B. Priestly, a Guild member, to refuse to sign a contract with Gilbert Miller for his play because Mr. Miller had refused to sign a Guild contract.

George C. Middleton, a former president of the Guild, declared the guild had no power to prevent a manager who had not signed the basic agreement from producing any plays.

"Selling Out" Blamed

Robert E. Sherwood, president of the Guild, at the opening luncheon charged that too many producers and dramatists of the legitimate theatre have been "selling out" to Hollywood.

Mr. Sherwood expressed optimism for the stage, but said the people themselves are responsible for the revived interest.

License Commissioner Paul Moss of New York said he would seek legislation to place all ticket speculation under his jurisdiction.

Brock Pemberton was toastmaster at the luncheon, George M. Cohan made the address of welcome, and other speakers included Laurette Taylor, James J. Brennan for stagehands, and Fred Marshall for the scenic artists. Helen Hayes addressed the afternoon session, presided over by Arthur Hopkins.

A detailed program for reviving road business by establishing "theatre seasons" for each town was advanced by Lawrence Langner, a director of the Theatre Guild and of the Theatre Council.

Congressman Emanuel Celler urged a Federal subsidy for the theatre.

The new code of fair practice regulating theatre ticket sales in New York will go into effect Monday. A total of 27 signatures of ticket brokers to the agreement had been obtained by Wednesday, according to James F. Reilly, executive secretary of the League of New York Theatres. The code limits premiums to 75 cents for orchestra and 50 cents for balcony seats.

Joseph Kaliski, manager of the GB exchange in Washington, has been transferred to Pittsburgh as head of the company's office in that city.

POLICE HALT GAME IN HARLEM HOUSE

Five men and one woman on the staff of the Jewell theatre, Harlem, were arrested on charges of conducting a lottery Monday night when police and the president of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, the Rev. Dr. George Drew Egbert, interrupted a "numbers night" program. Harlem and its "numbers" games have been the subject of New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's prosecution of James Hines, Tammany Hall district leader, who was cited by Attorney Dewey as "protector" of the Harlem gambling rackets in a case which ended in New York last Saturday when Judge Ferdinand Pecora declared a mistrial.

Police made the arrests after the hands of a clock on the stage were spun and the holders of the "lucky numbers" were awarded prizes.

The six employees, headed by Nat Gerber, manager, were arraigned in night court where they pleaded not guilty and obtained an adjournment. The five men were held in $25 bail each, while Miss Peggy O'Sullivan, cashier, was paroled by Thomas Aurelio, magistrate.

Standard Pictures To Start Production of First Film

Standard Pictures, a new name in the production field, will begin shooting their initial offering September 28th. The picture will be "The Headleys at Home," first of a series of six home-type comedies based upon the New York stage success "Among Those Present." The production will be made at the Grand National studio. The cast includes Ralph Morgan, Evelyn Venable, Robert Whitney, Betty Roadman, Vince Barnett and Benny Rubin.

B. W. Richards is president of Standard, Harvey C. Leavitt, associate producer; Emile de Ruelle, production manager; Chris Beute, director; Nickolas Bela, scenarist; Carrington North, story editor, and Richard Mitchell, publicity representative. In addition to the six Headley series pictures, the new company will make a similar number of mystery screen plays.

Renew Republic Contract

Sam and Jake Flax, of Washington, D. C., have renewed their Republic distribution agreement signing a five year contract, retroactive from July 1st. James R. Granger, president of Republic, and Jack Bellman, were in Detroit last week conferring with Ray Moon of Cooperative Theatres of Michigan on Republic's 1938-39 program.

Sphinx Completes Feature

Sphinx Film Corporation is planning production of a second feature, "A Brievele Der Mamen," having completed "Mamele," in which Molly Picon is starred. The latter picture was made in Warsaw, Poland, and will open in New York early in October.

'Grand Illusion' N. Y. Premiere

The Filmarte Theatre in New York City marked its reopening Monday evening with the American premiere of the French "Grand Illusion." The picture was made in Paris by "Les Realisation d'Art Cinematographique" and is being distributed in the United States by World Pictures.

The work was directed by Jean Renoir, French director, and features as principal players such recognized Continental actors as Jean Gabin, Pierre Fresnay and Dita Parlo. An important role is played by Erich von Stroheim from Hollywood and his excellent acting caused Frank S. Nugent in his New York Times review to remark on the "folly in permitting so fine an actor to remain idle and unwanted."

In his review from Paris, which appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of July 3, 1937, Pierre Autre said: "The film, although a war picture, is treated in a different way. No actual fighting is to be seen, and the film deals rather with people taken from all walks of life, and of different nationalities, thrown together by the wheels of fate. . . . Love interest is woven into the story, and although not indispensable to the picture it in no way mars it. . . . Dialogue is very clever and technical work and photography excellent. 'Grand Illusion' is surely a film with a very strong international appeal." He added that the film received loud and long applause from a gathering of French society, cinema, theatrical and literary personages.

Hamilton House, a branch of the Henry Street Settlement, sponsored the New York premiere, the proceeds of which went to aid the organization's activities. Among those who attended from theatre, film and publishing circles were Roy S. Howard, president and editor of the Scripps-Howard papers; Dorothy Thompson, author and newspaper columnist; Fannie Hurst, novelist; Clifford Odets, playwright; Eva La Gallienne, actress, and Aline MacMahon, screen player.

Deems Taylor and Disney Sign

Walt Disney has closed a deal with Deems Taylor, noted music director, critic and composer, to collaborate with Leopold Stokowski, and himself on a cartoon feature to start within a month and take 18 months to two years to produce. While "Sorcerer's Apprentice," for which Mr. Stokowski originally was signed by Mr. Disney may be retained as part of the subject matter, they may start from scratch. Mr. Disney broke ground for his $1,500,000 studio in Burbank on Monday.

A promotion booklet entitled "After 'Snow White' . . . What?" has been prepared by S. Barret McCormick and his RKO Radio advertising and publicity staff. It is wire-bound with red cardboard covers and the inside printing is done on heavy paper and illustrated in color. Eighteen Disney subjects, including six specials, are listed, with ideas for promotion.

Commonwealth Pictures Corporation has acquired 16 millimeter world distribution rights to all Majestic product, including "Scarlet Letter," "Night Alarm" and "Mutiny Ahead."

GERMAN FILMS GAIN STEADILY ON HOLLYWOOD IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA

American Films Drop from 154 in 1935 to 99 Last Year, While German Product Rises from 75 in 1935 to 80 in 1937

The fate of the commercial life of Hollywood's motion pictures in another European country—Czechoslovakia—hinges on the success or failure of the Nazis to extend their totalitarianism by force.

Virtually compelled to abandon their business in Germany and Austria because of Adolph Hitler's insistence that foreign films give way before native product instilled with Reich "cultural" teachings, Hollywood today is facing a severe test to hold its domination on Czechoslovakian screens, where German films already are fast gaining competitive position.

American sound features account for 40 per cent of Czechoslovakia's annual film imports, whereas Germany's film now represent 32 per cent. Indications of the trend may be seen in the fact that while America's films have fallen off from 154 in 1935 to 130 in 1936 and 99 in 1937, Germany's pictures have risen from 75 in 1935 to 80 in the past season.

Significantly or otherwise, the United States Government, through the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of which N. D. Golden is chief, is sending to the American industry an analysis of the position of American films in Czechoslovakia, as gathered from the office of the American Commercial Attache at Prague.

"Notwithstanding a decline in Czechoslovakia imports of feature pictures originating in the United States by 24 per cent since 1930, the United States maintains first position as a supplier of motion pictures to Czechoslovakia," said the government's statement.

The Czechoslovakian Film Advisory Committee, which prescreens pictures prior to issuance of import permits by the Ministry of Commerce failed to approve for entry in 1937 a total of 49 features, of which 20 were German, 18 American, four Hungarian, two each Russian, British and French, and one Austrian. The ratios of features rejected to features submitted for prescreening were: For all features 16.6 percent, Hungarian 28.6, Russian 22.2, German 20.0, American 15.4, British 15.4, French 8.7, and Austrian 7.1. As regards the ratio of American pictures rejected, only eight of the 18 pictures refused entry were products of the five American film companies maintaining distributing branches in Czechoslovakia, and these five organizations accounted for 89 of the 99 American features brought into Czechoslovakia during the year 1937.

Imports of dubbed films into Czechoslovakia are limited to such films that are to be distributed exclusively in those sections of the country where sound features in the original language have no market because of German competition, i.e., in certain districts specifically designated by local authorities where the majority of the population is German. In 1937, a total of 28 dubbed versions were imported into Czechoslovakia, including 23 American films, three Hungarian films, one British film and one French film. In January 1938, the fee on "dubbed" versions was reduced from 20,000 crowns to 12,000 crowns, this regulation supplementing but not invalidating existing regulations under which American distributors are

Imports of Shorts

Czechoslovak imports of shorts, not including newsreels, dropped from 269 in 1936, to 240 in 1937. American suppliers of comedy shorts were affected most as imports of shorts originating in the United States dropped from 170 in 1936, to 105 in 1937. Furthermore, there has been a partial replacement of comedy shorts by longer newsreels, by advertising films and by tourist propaganda films. Statistics on imports of shorts and on Czechoslovak production in that field are given herewith for 1936 and 1937:

The production of Czechoslovak feature films reached a new high of 51 in 1937, as compared with 32 in 1936 (plus one synchronized version). The total cost of 1937 feature film production was placed at between 41,000,000 and 43,000,000 crowns. Subsidies, granted chiefly out of the proceeds of the registration fees collected on imported features at a rate of 20,000 crowns per feature, aggregated 5,220,000 crowns, according to figures released by the Czechoslovak Ministry of Commerce.

Out of the total of 51 feature films produced, 45 were in the Czech language and six in the German language. Twenty-six companies, most of them film distributors, participated in the Czechoslovak film production during 1937, the "Elektafilm" ranking first with six feature productions.

As in former years, the A-B film studio at Barrandov near Prague, shot most of the features, accounting for 37; the "Foja" studio made eight, the "Host" five; and the "Favorit" one.

The 245 feature films constituting 1937 imports were brought in by 31 distributing companies, while 277 feature films imported in 1936 were brought in by 34 distributing companies. Notwithstanding the decrease of three in the number of firms participating in the importation of motion pictures, distribution of films in Czechoslovakia continued to suffer from an excessive number of film exchanges. Operation of the Film Distributors Cartel, organized in October 1935, and currently subscribed to by 30 Czechoslovak film distributors (exclusive of the branches of American film distributors), tended to moderate excessive competition but the weak financial position of several small film exchanges failed to improve substantially.

Motion Picture Films Censored

A total of 1,073 motion pictures (including sound features, shorts, nature pictures, newsreels and miscellaneous) with a film length of 1,158,720 meters were passed by the Board of Censors of the Ministry of Interior during 1937, as against 1,110 pictures and 1,054,085 meters in 1936. The 1937 total included 346 pictures of American origin in a length of 442,065 meters, 309 Czechoslovak films in a length of 214,360 meters, and 275 German films in a length of 294,095 meters.

There were 14 films of 36,010 meters banned by the Board of Censors, including six American films of 14,890 meters, six German films of 15,815 meters and two French films of 5,305 meters. These rejected films are in addition to those banned by the Film Advisory Committee (Prescreening Commission). Of the 14 pictures rejected, three of 7,205 meters were released for public exhibition after the film had been cut and altered to meet with official approval.

Data on films censored in Czechoslovakia during 1936 and 1937 are given in the following table of pictures released by Czechoslovak censors by principal countries of origin:

There were 15 Prague theatres rated as "first-run" cinemas, and they exhibited 269 sound features in that year. In 1936, "first-run" cinemas showed 282 features. Inasmuch as Prague is the most important film market in Czechoslovakia it may be of interest to note that the "first-runs" included 106 American films, 636 German, 40 Czechoslovak, 19 British, 16 Austrian and 16 French. According to the language spoken in the films, 125 were in the English language, 85 in German, 37 in Czech, 17 in French, 3 in Russian and one each in Italian and Spanish. All of the "first-run" films were shown for 661 weeks, the "first-run" exhibition per film averaging almost 2.5 weeks.

Boosting University with Film

The University of Mississippi will utilize motion pictures in a campaign to publicize the college over the state. A sound film, "Ole Miss," will be taken on tour of theatres.

OPEN FOR AN EXTENDED RUN!

SOUND SERVICE CHARGE REDUCTION SOUGHT BY BRITISH THEATRE MEN

Exhibitors' Organization Opens Negotiations with Equipment Companies in Anticipation of Contract Expirations Next Year

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Though they have headaches enough over the films they show and the prices they pay for that privilege, though they have, too, plenteous problems wrapt around the conditions under which they show them, British exhibitors have now turned to face the cold material problems raised by the apparatus upon which they have been showing them for the past nine or ten years.

In the course of the next twelve or eighteen months the ten year contracts for talking film apparatus held by the vast majority of British exhibitors are scheduled to expire and they will be faced with the question of renewal of this agreement—or alternatively the onus of purchase.

With this well to the forefront of their minds, and with the direct and ultimate objective of reducing some at least of the overhead borne by British exhibitors, the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association will, this Autumn, launch an offensive against the talking film equipment concerns with the specific goal of reducing service charges.

First mooted as far back as June this year, when they were the subject of a circular appeal to CEA members, service charges have long been an irritant to the exhibitor's budget. A general feeling that they are, speaking broadly, exorbitant, still further provoked by a mild process of agitation on the part of CEA headquarters, exists in the minds of picture house owners, who have welcomed the CEA's advice not to be landed with further or renewed contracts until the matter has been explicitly and unequivocally made subject of a lead by the General Council.

Overtures by Companies

Meanwhile, with the knowledge that the majority of agreements expire late this year, the equipment concerns have been making frantic and impassioned overtures to both circuits and independents, and have further been engaged in conversations with Panton Street, center and location of the CEA machinery.

Service charges have been placed on the agenda for the September meeting of the General Council at Glasgow, noted seat of frugality and thrift, and with a straight from the shoulder examination and discussion of the subject, will almost certainly be made the inspiration of a national drive.

It is the contention of the CEA that charges are still far too high, and that after ten years of maturity and development, there is no reason for the present high level to be maintained.

RCA, for instance, set their charges at figures ranging from 27s 6d a week for the smallest sets, to £3 for the largest. These are the figures at present obtaining and have been reduced from much higher levels.

RCA, too, many of whose agreements are due to expire in the coming eighteen months, have anticipated the situation by offering their

TRY NEW DUAL BILL SOLUTION

John Wolfberg of the Strand theatre, Kansas City, is trying a new experimental solution of the dual bill problem. It's in the following advertisement:

"For Your Convenience! Those of you who dislike double bills or have seen one of the two features may come for the one feature you prefer and on leaving receive a free pass to return at any later date."

clients the option of purchase with, of course, no compulsion to have their sets serviced. On the other hand, they have offered exhibitors an all in maintenance service with provision of spares for a flat rate of £1 a week. Agreements, if exhibitors so desire, may be renewed, they state, for any period from one to five years.

Western Electric's service charges rise from 45s a week to 90s a week.

British Acoustic's—RCA's most potent competitor in the equipment field nowadays, though RCA are installing at the rate of twenty-four houses in eight weeks—rise from 40s a week to £4 a week, according to size of equipment and house.

Added to these service charges is the matter of conversion of the older types to the more modern system—Mirrophonic, Duosonic, High Fidelity, etc. This saddles the exhibitor with a bill of anything between £200 and £1,000, according to conditions of ball, type of apparatus, etc.

Non-Inflammable Issue Up

Widespread trade and extra trade interest is likely to be focussed on the initial meeting after the Summer recess of the Stonehaven Home Office Advisory Committee, with the confident hope that one of its first tasks will be to clear up for good and for all the present entangled and cryptic problem of the non-flammable film. It is on the cards that the question of "non-flam"—for the trade inextricably enwrapped with the free show, with outside competition and with censorship—will be one of the first matters for consideration when the Committee meets, and the conviction is widespread that a logical and facile solution can be offered by the incorporation in the Cinematograph Act (1909) of a definition of "non-flam" on the lines of the British Standards Institution definition discussed in these columns last week.

Trade support for the inclusion of the BSI's definition in the Act has been forthcoming from the Sub Standard Cinematograph Association, who have expressed their agreement with the need for such a formula and who would welcome this rather than the litigation so ominously threatened by the Amateur Cinematographers Institute. It would seem to be understood that litigation would bring in its train many complex and obscure issues which might be avoided by the incorporation of a formula in the Act.

Constables Agree

There would seem to be little perplexity in the minds of the Chief Constables of Great Britain, on whose shoulders for the most part rests the supervision and control of unlicensed film shows, that "non-flam" film as generally understood is without the scope of the 1909 Act and, therefore, that "non-flam" film shows are not subject to the control of local licensing bodies.

According to the G.P.O. Film Unit, Government sponsored body, conducting state department propaganda up and down the country, ninety per cent at least of the Chief Constables of Britain, in reply to a circular letter issued by the Unit, have agreed that acetate film is slow burning and not within the scope of cinematograph legislation.

The Unit, during the past twelve months, staged shows to a total audience of two and a half millions, on both standard and 16mm "non-flam" stock, and have not experienced any difficulty or objection—even in Surrey whose County Council precipitated the recent "non-flam" crisis. Action over this last incident is suspended pending further steps by the Surrey County Council to reach agreement with the amateurs. Lord Dunedin, chairman of this group, is to discuss the situation with the Council.

British Lion Has Profit

British Lion Film Corporation has announced profits for the year ending March 31, 1938, of £15,498 compared to a loss of £14,016 last year. Cash previously deposited in New York as per the last balance sheet showing £50,457 is now represented by a secured loan to Republic of £46,061.

Slower Pace

Production slumped in the first week of September. Only eight pictures were started, two were completed. Still the total number of features in work is average for this period of the year.

By starting two films each, MGM and Universal account for half of the new product. The MGM pair are "Dramatic School" and "Young Doctor Kildare." Luise Rainer will be the star of the first. The supporting cast includes Frank Albertson, Rand Brook, Virginia Grey, Reginald Owen, Dorothy Grainger and about a score of youthful feminine hopefuls.

Lew Ayers, Nat Pendleton and Lionel Barrymore are the feature players in the second picture.

Candid Camera Number

At Universal, Glenda Farrell and Robert Wilcox are the featured players in "Exposed," a number in the Candid Camera series. "Strange Faces," a comedy romance, will present Frank Jenks, Dorothea Kent and Andy Devine as the leading characters.

After some delay, Paramount finally got "King of Chinatown" going. It will feature Anna May Wong, Anthony Quinn and Robert Cummings.

Malcolm Brown Productions started "Prison Train." Fred Keating, Faith Bacon and James Blakely head the cast.

"Gangster's Boy" went before the cameras at Monogram. Headline names are Jackie Cooper, George Bancroft, Louise Latimer, Tommy Wonder and Bobby Stone.

Colbert Picture Completed

"Prairie Moon" was finished at Republic. principal players are Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Bert Lahr, Helen Westley, Constance Collier, Genevieve Tobin, Walter Catlett, Rex O'Malley and Rex Evans.

"Prairie Moon" was finished at Republic. It will present Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Shirley Deane, David Gorcey, Walter Tetley, Stanley Andrew, William Pawley, Warner Richmond and Tom London.

Down to the Sea

The next picture which Frank Lloyd, Paramount producer, will make is "Ruler of the Seas."

It is described as a highly dramatic story of the early days of trans-Atlantic commerce in sailing ships and the final triumph of steam over sail. It reaches its climax in the

A SPIRITED IDEA STARTS A SERIES

About a year ago young Milton H. Bren, who had just become executive producer for Hal Roach studios, had an idea. It was a ghostly idea and its owner wasn't quite sure that it was a good idea. Today the idea has a reasonable expectancy of a box-office gross well up in the millions and it changed a studio that had specialized in slap-stick comedy to a place where, nowadays, they talk about only super-productions.

The idea was simply to make a motion picture of Thorne Smith's fantastic novel, "Topper". The studios had had disastrous experiences trying to make photoplays dealing with spirits, and the only other Smith novel to be brought to the screen, "Night Life of the Gods", was not such a commercial success as to inspire anyone to take a chance with another. But Mr. Bren produced the novel, spent $750,000 on it and, to date, the gross is called approximately $2,000,000.

"Topper" did much to re-establish Constance Bennett. It gave Roland Young his first starring role of consequence. It transformed the Roach studio from a maker of short comedies into a plant which is dedicated to productions of large budgets.

Now Mr. Bren has stepped "Topper" up into the industry class. "Topper Takes a Trip" is in work. Miss Bennett, Young, Billie Burke and Alan Mowbray are featured. When it is finished, Bren plans two more "Topper" stories.

history making first crossing of the Atlantic by a steam propelled vessel.

"Ruler of the Seas" will mark Mr. Lloyd's first venture into a production with a maritime setting since his Academy Award winning "Mutiny on the Bounty." While no cast selections have as yet been made, the screen play will be written by Talbot Jennings who, in collaboration with Jules Furthman, prepared the script of "Mutiny."

Patriotic Films

Roaming around the Warner lot the other day, we met Harry Warner and he asked us why we never said anything about the patriotic shorts his company was making. We told him we had not seen any of them and asked him if he would like to say something about them. Whereupon we were invited to drop into projection room 5, look at a couple and then come up to his office and render an opinion. Then Mr. Warner said:

"In the first place, in our patriotic short subject series, which by the way is meeting with tremendous success, Warner Brothers is materializing its obligation not only to exhibitors but to the country as well. Reaction on the part of educational, patriotic and exhibitor groups and the general public too has been highly favorable. Comments after screenings have been 100 per cent laudatory and have encouraged us to greater effort in making these pictures as perfect historical documents as possible. In their production we have proved that it is possible to present historical facts in an interesting manner, aligning our stories with government records and at the same time keeping them in the field of screen entertainment.

"An illustration of this splendid reaction was given recently when we screened three of the shorts at a showing for more than 1,000 of the country's leading educators at the Hollywood theatre. Appreciation was so marked that the showing led to the request that we show the same films for 10,000 public school superintendents when they hold their annual convention in Cleveland this winter. Other showings will be arranged for interested groups from time to time.

"Our line up for the 1938-39 season calls for five more patriotic shorts, but we may increase the number. Subjects scheduled are: 'Teddy Roosevelt and His Rough Riders,' dealing with the famous engagement at San Juan Hill; 'Lincoln in the White House,' dealing with the dark days of the Civil War; 'Remember the Alamo,' covering David Crockett's last stand in the historic Mexican War incident; 'American Cavalcade,' a record of outstanding events in history, and 'The Declaration of Independence,' based on circumstances attending the signing of this great document.

"In order to insure historical accuracy, all our scripts are submitted to the government at Washington.

"That's the story of the patriotic shorts, but in producing them we feel that we are making more than a commercial product. We believe that we are rendering a service to the entire nation through the presentation of subjects that inspire greater patriotism."

Character Change

Long acknowledged as one of the top ranking western stars, Buck Jones has decided to discard his chaps, spurs and guns and all the paraphernalia of a high riding cowboy buckaroo to assume the character of a vigorous romantic hero who is, as he always has been, on the side of law and order.

The transition will be effected under his new Paramount contract. Jones first picture under his new personality will be "Vice Squad."

The McCoy, Famous As Edison Sleuth, Dies in 78th Year

Through the years of the patent wars of the motion picture the dread name among the "independents" was "McCoy."

"Independent" was then another word for "infringer" and The McCoy was "the Edison detective."

It was calm, cool, unobtrusive McCoy who appeared from nowhere and beguiled unsuspecting cameramen on location into showing "how it works." Later amazingly detailed descriptions of the cameras appeared in the injunction papers from Federal court.

And that was Joseph Francis McCoy of Rahway, New Jersey, born there April 9, 1860, and died in an Elizabeth hospital, August 31, 1938.

In the mellowing later years Mr. McCoy was a genial philosopher, given to much patience with the foibles of his fellows and generous in his memories of the "infringers" who rose to become masters of the movies. He was blue-eyed, white haired and ruddy as a picture of seasoned vigour until his last illness approached.

Mr. McCoy was only 20 when he went to work for Thomas Edison, in 1880, in the original Menlo Park Lamp Works, where the first commercial incandescent lamps were made. He worked the first four months without pay, although Edison gave him his railroad fare between Menlo Park and Rahway.

Ill health forced Mr. McCoy to resign from the Edison staff after three years, but he rejoined in 1886 and up to the time of his death continued on the payroll of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., although he had long since ceased activity.

He was one of the first pioneers in amusements, starting in 1892, when he became associated with Edison's New Jersey Phonograph Company, of Newark, demonstrating Edison phonographs and Edison records to jobbers and store owners, and even canvassing sales from door to door. His record evidently was good, for he was transferred to the New York and New England Phonograph Company for similar activity.

By this time Edison's motion picture machines were emerging from the laboratory, and in 1894, Mr. McCoy left the phonograph division and went over to the selling of Edison (peep-show) Kinetoscopes. A few years later, Mr. Edison sent Mr. McCoy to London to see what the opposition was up to.

Although on the inactive list for years, he regularly visited the headquarters of Edison Pioneers, monthly, at 40 West 40th Street, New York, until, on February 11th, he arrived in New York for Thomas Edison's birthday memorial luncheon, and announced he was making the trip for the last time.

Funeral services were held in St. Mary's Church, Rahway, and burial was at St. Mary's Cemetery, nearby. Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Sarah McCloskey, and a daughter, Sadie.

Court Reverses Jury Award

A superior court judge in Los Angeles this week set aside a jury award of $8,500 to Irene Bennett, actress, and granted a new trial to the defendants. Miss Bennett sued the Paramount studio and the studio doctor, H. J. Strathearn, asking $502,745. She claimed the doctor permitted her to do film work when she was suffering from a lung ailment, with the result she had to spend two years in a sanatorium.

OBITUARIES

Order Testimony Taken in 20th Century-Fox Action

Sidney R. Kent, W. C. Michel and Edwin R. Kilroe, as officers of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and Movietone Music Corporation, this week were directed to appear for an examination before trial by New York Supreme Court Justice Julius Miller, in connection with a $1,500,000 breach of contract suit brought by Sam Fox and Harry Fox, who are doing business as Sam Fox Publishing Company, against Twentieth Century-Fox, Movietone, Loew's, Inc., Robbins Music Corporation and Jack Robbins.

At the same time Justice Miller denied an application to examine Joseph M. Schenck, Darryl F. Zanuck, William Goetz and William B. Dover. The suit is based on, it is claimed, breach of contract made in June, 1931, between Sam Fox Publishing Company and Twentieth Century-Fox, which gave to the plaintiff the right to exploit Twentieth Century-Fox's musical compositions.

Berlin Testimony Ordered

New York Supreme Court Justice Samuel H. Hofstadter has ordered the officers of Irving Berlin, Inc., Saul H. Bornstein, and Harry Link to appear for examination before trial in the suit brought against them and Herb Magidson and Allie Wrubel by Fred Rose, Ed G. Nelson and Hyman H. Zaret. The examination is sought by the plaintiffs to substantiate the charge in their suit that the defendants, Irving Berlin, Mr. Bornstein and Mr. Link, breached a contract said to have been made in August, 1936, in which they had agreed to exploit the plaintiffs' song, "Gone with the Wind," in broadcasting, song sheets and the film of the same name, and that they had substituted a song of the same title written by Mr. Magidson and Mr. Wrubel.

RCA Sued over French Film

Best Films Company, Inc., and Rene Huysman, doing business as R. C. H. Film Company and Office Des Films Francais Pour D'Etranger, this week were named defendants in a suit in New York supreme court by Joseph Burstyn, asking for an injunction against the distribution and the exhibition by the defendants of the English version of the French film, "L'Inde Sacree" in the United States. Mr. Burstyn claimed that he made a contract with Office Des Films Francais in August, 1937, whereby he was granted the exclusive license to distribute and exhibit "L'Inde Sacree" in the United States for five years.

20th Century-Fox Files Denial

Twentieth Century-Fox filed its answer in United States district court in New York this week to the suit of Quirico Michelena Laguno for an accounting of the profits and an injunction against the exhibition of "The World Moves On," released in Spanish America as "La Paz En La Tierra," because, it is claimed, it plagiarizes the plaintiff's play, "Paz en La Guerra." The defendant denied plagiarism and claimed the picture was based on an original story by Reginald Berkeley.

Too Hot to Handle

(M-G-M)

Newsreel Melodrama

It's long and long since a picture so grooved to demand as this one came off the line. It's about as long since any picture came to ready and waiting showmen so thoroughly sold-in-advance to the customers. And longer than that, unless plannings are for fools and show business abruptly reverses itself, will be the lines in front of 358 box offices on the day these lines come to eye.

The film is of and for the cinema—objectively, subjectively and every other way—and a “natural” if Hollywood breeds such an animal.

It is the custom of MGM to ship 304 prints of a feature picture to exchanges in readiness for release date. MGM shipped 308 prints of the sure-fire “Boys Town.” The 358 prints of “Too Hot to Handle” supplied to exchanges for distribution to first runs on September 16 is in the nature of a new high. But that's only the mathematics of the matter.

People began hearing about “Too Hot to Handle” a long time ago. Syndicated newspaper columnists made a pet subject of it back in the days when it was just a story idea in the mind of Len Hammond, newsreel cameraman, because it was a natural even then. When Laurence Stallings, a perfect choice, and John Lee Mahin, of “Captains Courageous,” were announced as the gentlemen who would build the screen play, telegraph, cable and airplane carried the glad tidings. From about then to now, and on for quite a spell, doubtlessly, everything about “Too Hot to Handle” was headline news. (For dealing it out in compact, congenially assimilable takes, chalk up one for Howard Strickling's young men of the press department, who never missed a trick.)

The news that Clark Gable would play the part of a newsreel cameraman in “Too Hot to Handle” was hotter than any the newsreels had that week. He was, everybody agreed, the ideal man for the job (is there any screen job for which he isn't?) and everybody agreed that the young lady in his life had to be Myrna Loy. She was. For quite a spell, there, plain readers of the chatter columns almost stopped worrying about the Scarlett O'Hara thing.

But MGM didn't sit back and let the boys and girls of the free white spaces carry the ball unprotected. If you'll step over to the window and look out in any given direction you'll feel your eye drawn to one of those billboards with which they've plastered the continent. If you'll turn on the radio somebody'll be talking about the picture. Try to pick up a magazine that isn't full of it.

So how can a picture like that miss? Well, things like that have happened, and it's in the cards that some day, for some reason, a Gable picture will. But it won't be this one. This one would be a winner without Gable, and without Loy, because it's a terrific telling of the story of the newsreel, now and no doubt forever the most universally and fundamentally popular type of motion picture, and the story of the newsreel is bigger and better than any collection of stars ever assembled under any studio trademark.

This particular telling of the story of the newsreel—and there'll be plenty more tellings—is just a shade this side of historical. Running incidents are the bombing of Shanghai, the filming of a ship afire off New York, the machine gunning of that gangster who barricaded himself on upper Broadway, the crackup of a round-the-world aviatrix and, finally, the expedition into South America in quest of that long lost flier who came down in the jungle. So realistically have these and other newsreel-worthy events been reproduced in “Too Hot to Handle” that a customer coming in at mid-picture could make a natural mistake and never get it all quite straightened out.

Mr. Gable is all the columnists said he would be as the cameraman, but they should have told the public more about Walter Pidgeon, as his professional and romantic rival, who turns in a sweet job. Miss Loy is a honey as the aviatrix (the girl fliers ought to vote her an honorary membership in something) and Walter Connolly hasn't been so perfectly cast in years as he is in the role of newsreel executive. Leo Carrillo has an ideal assignment as Gable's assistant and there isn't a weak spot in the cast, white, black or Chinese.

There isn't much point in telling, here, a detailed story of what goes on. Two stellar newsreel men fight it out, by fair means and otherwise, for camera beats and heart beats (wonder if that's in the press book). The story starts like a cannonball and gathers speed as it moves forward. Everybody talks like mad and acts faster than that, yet Director Jack Conway has managed in some unfathomable fashion to keep the vehicle on the track with all switches open and never a derail. The love story in the background winds up the way you want it to, but the principals are too busy to stop for a clinch.

Producer Lawrence Weingarten has provided such a setting, geographical, technical and human, as few film stories have ever enjoyed. The time is now and the place is everywhere. The picture is clean as a newsreel and as well suited to the entertainment needs of every audience that sees one. That seems to include about all of them.

If I Were King

(Paramount)

Historical Spectacle

This is Frank Lloyd's silver anniversary picture, and the producer of “Cavalcade,” “Mutiny on the Bounty” and “Wells Fargo” can embark on that long deferred European holiday confident of being pursued by glowing cable news about the picture he leaves behind him.

This is Ronald Colman's first picture since “The Prisoner of Zenda,” and there's something basically wrong with a system that limits a Colman to one picture a year.

This is Basil Rathbone's first appearance since “Robin Hood” and if his portrayal of Louis XI doesn't win him the Academy Award for champion character performance of 1938 there's reason to be surprised.

This is, in short, a solid picture, sound as a dollar in every department and subject to no fluctuating rate of exchange. This is a showman's picture in every sense of the word, a fan's picture right down to the ground, an artist's picture and dirt digger's picture, by a tremendous margin the finest presentation ever given Justin Huntly McCarthy's imperishable play on screen or stage, with music or without. This is the kind of picture that proves to the sophisticate, to the plain voter and to all their relatives that this is in unquestionable fact the motion picture's greatest year.

It is said that Mr. Lloyd planned this production so meticulously that less than 500 feet of its uncut length had to come out to bring it down to a commercially practical 100 minutes. If this be true, he ought to let the rest of the producers in on how it's done. Scene flows into scene and sequence follows sequence as if woven into a heroic design by the hand of time. There is depth and breadth and unremitting tension from title card to fadeout, with poetry and torture, ballade and battle following one upon the other in expertly ordered disorder. The 100 minutes seem like 10. The Colman and Rathbone performances are among the screen's finest and so evenly matched as to hang a jury. In the neighborhood of perfection, too, is the artistry of Frances Dee as the fine lady of the hero's heart, and newcomer Ellen Drew's handling of the wanton's assignment is as good as a starring contract with any studio on the Coast. Henry Wilcoxon, Ralph Forbes, Sidney Toler, C. V. France, Montagu Love, Harry McCollum and the long missing William Farnum are others who stand out against a large and commanding cast.

Preston Sturges wrote the screen play, and a distinguished job it is. Lou Smith as associate producer, Theodor Sparkuhl behind the camera, and Richard Hageman, who provided a stirring musical score, dug deep into their professional resources to make the producer's anniversary picture an unforgettably rounded triumph.

The story is, of course, the unchanged account of how Francois Villon, gutter poet, saved Louis XI and France from the Burgundians. He has done it many times and many ways on stage and screen, but never so superlatively as now.

Campus Confessions

(Paramount)

Spectacle-Romance

Sports spectacle—basketball for a distinct novelty—campus capers and romances, university debacles and triumphs are the elements woven into this lively show. It features a number of youngsters—Betty Grable, Eleanor Whitney, William Henry, Richard Denning—a few oldsters—Fritz Feld, Thurston Hall, Lane Chandler, Roy Gordon—but its big name is Hank Luisetti, famous Stanford University football player, where basketball is hot, and the picture is timed for general distribution simultaneously with the sports season. He should be a potent influence in attracting patronage.

While a climactic basketball game is the show's thrill action highlight, the picture also has those elements of the common collegiate yarn based on a sound entertainment premise.

"Middleton University" is dominated by "Atterbury, Sr.," wealthy patron, who demands that studies and not athletics should be the students' objective. While "Fry" and the college tailor, "Lady Macbeth," provide topical comedy, freshman "Atterbury, Jr.," gets in wrong on the opening day. Discouraged students, long past the rebellion point, vent their spleen on the boy, and Middleton continues to be a competitive athletic door mat. With only Luisetti and "Lady Macbeth" as friends, "Atterbury's" life is difficult. To counteract his father's stubbornness and elevate the university in the athletic world, "Atterbury" conspires with the coach to have the basketball team train on his father's farm during vacation. The result is a crackerjack squad that overpowers all rivals, until "Atterbury, Sr.," arriving from Europe, puts a crimp into things by having Luisetti made ineligible on the eve of the championship game. But in the rival's rooting section while Middleton is being walloped, the old man experiences a change of heart and demands the star's reinstatement immediately. Thereupon Luisetti teams up with young "Atterbury" to smash out a sensational last second victory.

Smartly handled by associate producer William Thomas, the show concentrates on those active entertainment elements that cause collegiates, old and young, to whoop it up. There is plenty of excitement, a little campus love, lots of comedy and a whirlwind demonstration of basket ball, so that "Campus Confessions" is an exploitable attraction that stands a strong chance of becoming a desirable all-audience feature.

Hold That Coed

(20th Century-Fox)

Football-Political Satire

Darryl F. Zanuck's contribution to the recurrent football cycle, "Hold That Coed," has embodied satire of two of the most favorite topics of conversation in the autumns of even number years—football and politics. Football is an annual topic and the elections of national importance crop up every two years, so the 20th Century-Fox chieftain combined both in a Sept. 16, 1938 release which is a rare opportunity to bring into the theatres persons who like musicals, satire, football, politics and laughs in large lumps.

By virtue of its elements, "Hold That Coed" merits sustained showmanship campaigns from first-runs to neighborhood and "revival" houses. In it John Barrymore emotes like the Jack Barrymore of old, making the most of each scene. In it George Murphy has his first opportunity to attempt to out-Astaire Fred Astaire and at the same time pay attention to the thespian requirements of the cinema, tasks both ably done. In it Marjorie Weaver, Joan Davis, Jack Haley, George Barbier, Ruth Terry, Donald Meek, Johnny Downs and others, all competent.

An even tempo of humor is maintained by the direction of George Marshall. The screen-play was done by Karl Tunberg, Don Ettlinger and Jack Yellen, from the original by Tunberg and Ettlinger. David Hempstead was associate producer.

The story might be called a burlesque of the late Huey Long's career. "Governor Harrigan" finds political manipulations require that "State University" have an excellent football team, with showmanship. Running for senator, he provides the college with professional football players, a woman goal kicker, a huge band, and grand buildings, while his opponent, "Breckenridge," writhes in disgust. Finally "Breckenridge" instills the same sort of showmanship in "Clayton University," of which he is a trustee. The climax comes in a hilarious game on which the political opponents have wagered the senatorship.

Exhibitors considering "Hold That Coed" should look up their records and remember that "Pigskin Parade," from the same studio, was one of the Box Office Champions of 1936-37. The inference is that "Hold That Coed" can better the marks of "Pigskin Parade."

Previewed at the Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Hollywood. This picture is entered in Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign, and at its preview accomplished, in at least one case, the major purpose of the drive. A young attorney, who has not been inside a motion picture theatre for more than a year, accompanied this reporter to the preview. He left convinced that he had been missing something in not seeing films.—VANCE KING.

Shadows Over Shanghai

(Fine Arts-Grand National)

Melodrama

[Fine Arts Pictures made its bow to the film industry last week with a preview of its first two pictures. To be released by Grand National as the first two pictures offered by the reorganized company, "Shadows Over Shanghai" and "Frontier Scout" are exemplifications of action.]

Based on the Sino-Japanese War, "Shadows over Shanghai" offers a familiar topic to showmen for exploitation campaign purposes. Rife with action, the picture has its action laid entirely in Shanghai and vicinity during, presumably, the Chapei incident of 1932.

Heading the cast are James Dunn, Ralph Morgan, Linda Gray, and Robert Barrat. With action as its theme, and the current Sino-Japanese trouble as its background, the picture affords a wide range of exploitation possibilities.

The original story, by R. B. Sale, a lively offering adapted by Joseph Hoffman, shows the two countries at swords' points, takes its theme from current headlines by the inference that Russia is interested in the outcome and carries through to the point that neither nation is victorious, that Russia is not finally involved, and that the characters, innocuous as they are in the scheme of things, do not take part in sympathizing with either warring country.

"Johnny McGinty," a photographer, rescues "Irene Roma" from "Yokohama" and "Sargossa," only to enmesh himself in a series of difficulties created by agents of Japan and China. "Shadows over Shanghai" was directed by Charles Lamont, who also acted as associate producer.

Frontier Scout

Outdoor Action

A gripping story of the days of the old West, "Frontier Scout" has combined a cattle rustling, fights with Indians, battles with outlaws, and other significant items of history of early Americana period. It has George Houston in its top role as "Wild Bill Hickok." Supporting him are Al St. John, Beth Marion, Dave O'Brien and Guy Chase and others.

Replete with stock shots blended to give the production quality which makes it plain that the budget of the picture is greater than originally set, "Frontier Scout" is a tale of the old West superbly enacted, brightly told, and maintaining a swift flow of action.

Sam Newfield directed the original screenplay of Frances Guihan. Maurice Conn was associate producer. "Wild Bill Hickok" goes West on one of his scouting expeditions when, discovering that his friend "Steve" is in the cattle business with "Bennett," attempts to solve the mystery of the town's inability to get beef. Rustlers outside of the town have held up the herds and "Hickok," after great difficulty and hardship, wins through to an effective climax.

Valley of the Giants

(Warner Brothers)

Action

The keynote of the Warner product announcement for the new season was Action. And action it is. Here it is offered in a robust melodramatic picture set in the magnificent redwood forest country of the Golden State of California.

A lumber story, premised on an old but nonetheless engrossing theme of a young man's fight to prevent land grabbers from annexing his and his neighbors' heritage, gains added stature in its filming, for it is action photographed in beautiful color.

The story was adapted by Seton I. Miller and Michael Fessier from an old favorite of that master story teller, Peter B. Kyne. William Keighley directed.

Wayne Morris, as heir to the largest forest area in the redwood district and the man the others look to as leader, gives a forthright portrayal. Claire Trevor, as the hostess of a gambling establishment, also performs in convincing manner.

For comedy there is Frank McHugh, and for villainy Charles Bickford, both of experience in such roles and performing up to standard.

Turning in a performance that practically overshadows all else is Alan Hale. In makeup and acting a giant lumberman who likes nothing better than a good fight, Hale drew many a testimonial to the appreciation of the audience.

Reviewed at the Strand theatre, New York. A capacity audience liked it, and in several spots it seemed that individuals forgot they were but spectators and put almost as much effort into their viewing as the actors did into their performing.—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Under the Big Top

Circus Melodrama

True to its title, this compactly constructed story of life and love on the circus lot depends for its climax upon precisely the type of thrill one goes to the circus to get. Specifically, the peak of dramatic and emotional tension is reached in a suspenseful situation wherein Anne Nagel, Jack LaRue and Grant Richards are seen as aerial artists risking disaster on the high trapeze. The sequence has in extraordinary degree the breath-holding appeal real life aerialists strive for and sometimes achieve.

Exploitation of the film is pretty definitely ordered by its title and content.

In the name department there are, in addition to those mentioned above, Marjorie Main as a stony-hearted circus owner, Herbert Rawlinson as her faithful ringmaster, George Cleveland as a veteran clown, Harry Harvey as a press agent, Betty Compton as one of the troopers, and Snowflake as a devoted valet to the show's star elephant.

The story by Llewellyn Hughes, for which Marion Orth wrote the screen play, has Miss Nagel as "Penny," ward of "Sara," stern circus owner, with "Pablo" and "Ricardo" as her partners in an aerial act and both in love with her. When "Sara" discovers that "Penny" has agreed to marry "Pablo" she fires him and "Ricardo." "Penny" leaves the show with them and they are about to accept a European date when they learn that "Sara" is ill and needs them. They return for a night, hoping to revive "Sara's" flagging resistance, but "Ricardo" sips too much consolation from the bottle and, rather than risk dropping "Penny" from the trapeze, allows himself to fall to the ground. "Sara" recovers and relents.

Sons of the Legion

Educational Entertainment

While the entertainment and moral appeal of "Sons of the Legion" is directed at Legion members and juveniles, it also holds much that should interest general audiences. Treating of character, patriotism and good citizenship, ideals of the Legion, it should be strongly supported by that organization. No doubt any manager may look to the local Legion post for endorsement, support and cooperation in exploiting the show.

The story contains standby theatrical and commercial elements but is pitched to a human interest keynote. Because "Uncle Willie" is a 100% Legionaire, "Willie" and "David Lee" are eager to join the juvenile post which traveling organizer "Scott" is establishing. "Scott" and sister "Linda" cannot understand, nor can "Uncle Willie," or "Grandmother Lee," why the boys' father, "Charles," is opposed to the Legion. It is revealed ultimately that "Charles" was unjustly given a dishonorable discharge from the Army. He refuses to tell why, but "David" learns from "Butch" that his father, "Baker," also was a soldier. He, turning out a criminal, wanted by the police, eventually is discovered to be the one responsible for "Charles'" disgrace. In an exciting climax, the youngsters, senior members of the Legion and police capture "Baker," who gives evidence clearing "Charles," and confesses to crimes that will jail him for years. Now there is time for romance for "Scott" and "Linda."

Already given a pre-release in the middle-west, the film will be generally released simultaneously with the Legion Convention in Los Angeles. The publicity for that event combines with the support and cooperation that can be expected from local posts to promise a lot of interest for this picture.

Previewed at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles. The audience, while aware of the pro-Legion propaganda included in the story, seemed genuinely interested in the film. It was particularly impressed by the work of Lynne Overman and Donald O'Connor. The applause at the end seemed to indicate that the crowd had seen something better than it had expected.—GUS MCCARTHY.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Bob Landry, for New Republic, went around the country for the choicest gibberish used by radio's filler-inners and thinker-uppers who dot the yawning chasms of the nation's stations on the apparent principle that something must be doing every minute, that the show must go on—and on—and on. And it does, with the yawn coming up like thunder across the antennae's of America's listeners.

Radio's thinker-uppers, Mr. Landry learned, have a definite zoological leitmotif. This he found typically expressed, for instance, in the diction and personality contests for parrots conducted by a Washington, D. C., station, the while Station KYW, Philadelphia, broadcast the milking of a snake, and KWK matched a coyote with a radio announcer in a yowling contest. The coyote lost.

Boston had a broadcast by a troupe of talented fleas. The fleas, however, could not speak a word of English, having only just arrived in this country.

Radio broadcasters also have had hog-calling contests, which, as one would expect, led to such variations as husband-calling, dinner-calling and junior-calling, and Cincinnati's Station WKRC broadcast a race between heifers. The announcer held a portable microphone in one hand, a cow's tail in another, and running fast as possible, told the world about the breath-taking event. WSAI had its announcer astride a jackass to give a ringside report of a mule race, and, deviating for the moment from the zoological, Station WMT, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, observed the start of the summer season with a "sneezing troubadour" program.

And radio's film-news "commentators" "pull the bell" on motion pictures.

Edgar Bergen's "Charlie McCarthy" had a counterpart in real life, a little Irish lad who sold newspapers near the Chicago high school that Bergen attended. For a few weeks before the Irisher, after Bergen had stumbled on the fact that he had the unusual voice construction required for ventriloquism, he first used a dummy patterned after a little pickaninny. The uninterrupted partnership with "Charlie," however, has carried them ultimately to their present spectacular success, all the way from the days when "Charlie" and Bergen were able to pay their way through high school and on into Northwestern University with fees from club shows.

Edgar John Bergren is the name. He's of direct Swedish descent, and is only 35.

De-sophisticating Hollywood, Dave Selznick's Janet Gaynor says the place is over-run with farmers—in polo coats.

Irvin S. Cobb, playwright, novelist, short-story writer, humorist and Hollywood actor, is writing a book—entitled: "Mostly About Me."

Mr. George Schutz, editor of our Better Theatres, surveyed our correspondents concerning the progress—if any—being made by the so-called "drive-in" theatre. "Are there any 'drive-in' places down your way," he asked George Watson, in Birmingham.

"Yes, plenty," shot back Watson. "Filling stations."

If and when this country ever adopts Italy's law forbidding automobile horn tooting, some part of the credit will go to an old filmite, Jerome Beatty, who left motion pictures and his post of press relations director of the Hays organization to write. That was some dozen years ago, and he's been writing since. Doing quite nicely, too.

In his present capacity he's spreading the anti-horn message in Public Safety, tracing the movement to the day of December 14, 1934, when Mussolini was deep in matters of State in his State office, and through his long open windows poured the once inimitable uproar of Italian street—horns barking resentfully or blaring in full, rich triumph at every crisis. Mussolini lost his temper. He rang a bell.

"There shall be," he declared, setting the famous jaw, "no more automobile horns blown. And that was that."

Anyway, in the three years of the Roman "experiment," there has been a marked decline in automobile accidents, and the move is on to plant the idea over here.

The Reverend Hugh R. Percy, conducting a church at Herb Lake, Manitoba, has changed Sunday evening services from seven to eight o'clock so the congregation can listen to "Charlie McCarthy" on Chase and Sarnoff's coffee program (Mae West's old stamping ground).

"A surprising number of young people," said the Reverend Percy, "on being asked why they didn't attend church, told me: 'If we go to church we can't listen to Charlie McCarthy.'"

A lot of exhibitors got around that by bringing Charlie McCarthy into their features by direct dialing.

Publication on this page in July of what several thought to be a most unusual photograph of Benny Cohen, as he arrived in Calcutta, dressed in the turban and long flowing coat of the native, brings down upon us the wrath of the Cohen, so he writes. Mr. Cohen, who was transferred by Loew's from the College theatre in New Haven to the management of the new Metro Cinema in Calcutta, evidently does not want his old cronies in New Haven and in Loew's to think he has gone native in Hinduland as quickly as some go Hollywood in cinemaland.

With one parting shot, Benny says, "I am probably your most long distance reader," but in another, he promises to put a Yogi Hoodoo on us.

National Products Corporation has obtained a patent in Washington for a film made of leather. Leather film should be great for westerns.

Stewart Bellefield (B. S.) Moss, pioneer in motion pictures, formally announced last week his entrance into distribution, handling French films in the U. S. While generally known as an old exhibitor, this is by no means Mr. Moss's first distribution experience, his latest announcement coming just 20 years ago to the day, in September, 1918, when he entered distribution with "Just Break the News to Mother," a mellow "meller."

Grover Whalen, still carnationed, continues to make impressive progress in rounding out his 1939 New York World's Fair, and, as if to show how lax the motion picture industry is in neglecting to take action for participation he sends to the motion picture press lavish accounts of the strides he is making elsewhere.

In his latest report on his accomplishments, for example, he says the Fair has arranged a special department for childbirth, anticipatorily predicting that as many as a dozen babies will be born at the Fair. He has arranged, too, for the erection of a reproduction in glass of a human eye, so large that it will permit several visitors to enter it at the same time. He says he has sold concessions for the sale—he hopes—of 30,000,000 frankfurters. Coffee beans will be cultivated right on the spot, and two hundred "aristocratic milch" cows are to be bathed, dried and milked every 24 hours, Grover parading ten at a time from their barns to a revolving platform where he will then have them yield their milk.

Still another new accomplishment for and in behalf of Fair visitors are the bulls Mr. Whalen will display at another exhibit. These will be shown in a ring by means of a "bull exerciser," which is a contraption like a five-ribbed umbrella without a cover set up vertically and revolved by a slow-motion motor. A bull is attached to the end of each of the revolving arms by a line from the ring in his nose. As the device goes around, so does the bull.

The pea canners and the picture business got mixed up the other day at the exhibitors' meeting in Milwaukee. Someone made a mistake listing exhibit room numbers on the downstairs' bulletin board and for awhile the motion picture owners had among them a host of surprised pea canners, assembled for the Out-of-State Pea Canners' convention.

Another hotel suite mixup occurred in connection with a meeting of New Brunswick, Canada, exhibitors for the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year Campaign." Colin Danson arrived at the Admiral Beatty Hotel, in St. Johns, to attend the luncheon. Stepping into Salon D, he parked himself at the first vacant seat, started eating, bent over towards the fellow on his left, and said: "My name is Danson, Colin Danson, Strand theatre, Sussex. What theatre do you operate?" The chap replied: "My name is Beatty, I'm in the railway business."

Danson was a little puzzled, but passed it off and then turned to the fellow on his right. "Who are you?" he asked. "My name is Gordon, in the banking business."

Some rather quiet probing was undertaken by Mr. Danson and he discovered with some embarrassment that he was sitting between Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and Sir Charles Gordon, president of the Bank of Montreal, a little banking institution with about 600 branches. He also discovered that his exhibitor colleagues were eating over in Salon C across the hall, so to Salon C Mr. Danson crept softly away from the "billionaires" of Salon D.

Mr. Wong, Detective

(Monogram)

Mystery

Three men are murdered. Each of the last two is suspected of killing his predecessor. All are slain by poison gas. Meanwhile foreign nations are trying to steal the secret formula of the lethal gas. Spies are active; the police are baffled. A private detective is called in. He is forced to thread his way through a maze of conflicting clues. He discovers the method of murder and the means of unleashing the fatal gas—sound waves breaking a glass tube. Eventually, many come under suspicion. But the detective traces guilt to an apparently innocent, if deluded, man, who confesses that the three dead men had stolen his secret formula, and were making millions on it.

Boris Karloff, Grant Richards, presently in "Under the Big Top," and Evelyn Brent are the best known names. Other personalities, however, are Maxine Jennings, long with RKO-Radio, Lucien Preval, John St. Polis, William Gould, Hooper Atchley, John Hamilton, Frank Bruno and George Lloyd.

William Nigh, director of "Romance of the Limerick" and "Boy of the Streets," is directing.

Release date: October 5, 1938.

Just Around the Corner

(20th Century-Fox)

Whimsy

Three years ago Irving Cummings directed a little girl by the name of Shirley Temple in a picture called "Curley Top," which, with all due respect to her previous pictures, had a great deal to do with establishing her as the Number One box office personality. He made a couple of others with her, "Poor Little Rich Girl" and her latest, "Little Miss Broadway."

Now the team is together again for "Just Around the Corner," a story in which Shirley will sing and dance, nevertheless one which has considerable dramatic content developed along lines of the earlier three. In trend, it pursues the riches to rags theme in which there is comparatively little pathos of the tear-jerking variety. Shirley is cast as a little Miss Fixit in a yarn of the prosperity which deserted her father but which she brings around the corner to him. She does it unwittingly when she innocently mistakes a crusty old financier named "Sam" for the Uncle Sam who is the personification of the United States. Besides rehabilitating her discouraged dad and bringing romance to him, she is also the central figure in bringing happiness and prosperity to lots more persons.

The leading box office personality's principal support will be Charles Farrell, who at one time, along with Janet Gaynor, occupied a similar position in the estimation of theatre goers as Shirley does now. Mr. Farrell is determined to make as effective a comeback as did his erstwhile partner in "A Star is Born." A newcomer, Amanda Duff, will be seen in the romantic situations which involve Farrell. In all other instances the supporting players are more or less familiar, among them Joan Davis, Bill Robinson, Bert Lahr, Franklin Pangborn, Cora Witherspoon, Claude Gillingwater, Bennie Bartlett and Marylin Knowlden.

The basis of the production is an original story by Paul Gerard Smith for which J. P. McEvoy, Ethel Hill and Darrell Ware did the screen play. Music and lyrics were by Walter Bullock and Harold Spina. The dances were arranged by Nick Castle and Geneva Sawyer.

Release date: Nov. 11, 1938.

Annabel Takes a Tour

(RKO Radio)

Comedy

Preview audiences and picture reviewers, the only ones so far to have seen "The Affairs of Annabel," concurred in the opinion that that picture, the first of a projected series, was bang-up farce comedy entertainment. The idea of the series has to do with the hilarious adventures of an erratic publicity-hungry picture star and an equally erratic studio publicity director, possessed of a weird imagination, a stop-at-nothing fellow as long as his brain storm will land newspaper space for the star.

Lucille Ball created the role of the actress, Jack Oakie that of the press agent. With Bradley Page, who was the original harassed producer, and Ruth Donnelly, the secretary who couldn't squelch Oakie, the same quartet will be featured along with Ralph Forbes and Alice White in the sequel to the first picture.

Confronted by Oakie, presently exploiting a horse show, Miss Ball has the misfortune to be made play second fiddle to a horse in a publicity gag. Enraged but admiring Oakie, she demands that he be rehired to handle her publicity affairs while on a personal appearance tour. Miss Ball has many occasions to regret her bargain as Oakie leads her out of one mess into another. The most comical of these is an incident which romantically involves her with a touring British author (Forbes), who has a wife and three children.

The picture, which is being produced by Lou Lusty, maker of "The Affairs of Annabel," is based upon the experiences of the characters originated by Charles Hoffman. The screen play was done by Bert Garnet, who had a hand in preparation of the initial film. He will have the cooperation of Olive Cooper, whose most recent writing credits are "Cocoanut Grove," "Lady, Behave" and "Jimmy Hanvey—Detective." The director is Lew Landers, who was responsible for "Smashing the Rackets," "Sky Giant" and "Condemned Women."

Release date: Not set definitely but about mid-October.

Trade Winds

(UA-Wanger)

Comedy-Melodrama

In skeleton digest, "Trade Winds" might be defined as a detective murder mystery story. But in the way it has been planned, in the ways in which it is going through the processes of production, "Trade Winds" should emerge on the screens as much more valuable, considered either from the entertainment or commercial viewpoints, than a prosaic detective murder mystery.

Here's the plot. A girl accuses a man who drove her sister to suicide. He hands her a pistol and invites her to shoot him if she cares to. She pulls the trigger, the man falls. Believing herself a murderess, the girl flees. The police immediately pick up her trail but lose it. The detective chief hires a capable detective who is more than ordinarily interested in women—any woman who happens to come along, to find her and bring her back. Ensues a trans-Pacific chase to Hawaii, Japan, China, with the detective philandering wherever he finds opportunity until he catches up with his quarry. Then into Indo-China, where, with the coming of love, the detective begins to sense that the girl is innocent.

For principal names "Trade Winds" will offer Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern and Alan Baxter. Secondary personalities are Robert Emmet O'Connor, Walter Byron, Armand Cortez and Robert Elliott. The regiment of girls with whom March dallies includes Patricia Farr, Wilma Francis, Gloria Youngblood, Kay Linaker, Linda Winters and a dozen or more personable young ladies. There are many native types also, representing Hawaiians, Japanese, Chinese, Russians, and others.

It is a Tay Garnett production, which will include much of the photography he shot on his trip through these countries around the world a year or so ago. He also wrote the story and is the director.

Release date: To be determined.

A Man to Remember

(RKO Radio)

A Doctor's Story

The action of this story will start after the death of its principal character and continue during his funeral. The life story of a country doctor will be told by a series of flashbacks with one central bit of activity holding the episodes together. The plot concentrates on the courage, public spirit and sacrifice of an unassuming rural doctor. As the retrospective method of narration is followed, the theme will show the vivid contrast between the physician's generosity and humanitarianism in contrast to the selfish, penny-pinching short-sightedness of the town's business and civic leaders. With accurate insight and sometimes with incisive sarcasm the plot hits home at what often is termed the unpleasant feature of small town life when smug hypocrisy and the abject worship of the almighty dollar are powerfully contrasted with tolerance and high mindedness.

The story is adapted from Katherine Haviland Taylor's story, "Failure," for which Dalton Trumbo wrote the screen play.

Edward Ellis, wellknown character actor, will be seen in the leading role. His son will be played by Lee Bowman, in "Having a Wonderful Time," and the child he adopted when her mother died grows up to be Ann Shirley, last featured in "Mother Carey's Chickens" and "Condemned Women." The three players who examine the papers, all of whom were antagonistic to the doctor during his life, are Granville Bates, Harlan Briggs and Frank M. Thomas. Some of the players participating in the episodes are Gilbert Emery, John Wray and Dickie Jones.

The film is being directed by Garson Kanin, stage director who is making his debut as a film director.

Release date: To be determined.

Inventor Employs Radio to Pick Up Sound in Picture

An application for a patent on a system of employing a radio in conjunction with a 16 mm. projection machine has been filed by Jack Rabinowitz, projectionist at Loew's Valencia Theatre, the Bronx, and head of the newly formed Home Talkie Sound Laboratory, 401 Broadway.

Through the use of his invention, Mr. Rabinowitz claims, the cost of having sound with 16-mm. projection would be reduced and the quality would be comparable to that obtained by present apparatus.

For the purpose of substantiating his claim that sound-on-film is faithfully reproduced through his system, Mr. Rabinowitz conducted a demonstration in the offices of his attorney, Irving Korn, also of 401 Broadway. Under the system, the audio impulses taken from the film are converted into radio frequency and, in effect, are broadcast and then picked up by the radio.

The Federal Communications Commission already has ruled that use of the equipment will not interfere with regular reception or broadcasting, Mr. Rabinowitz said. The technical explanation of the equipment, as given by the inventor, was that:

"The output of the photo-electric cell is coupled to a pre-stage amplifier which also supplies the photo-electric current. The output is then sent to a final stage of amplification. The final stage of amplification is coupled to an output transformer whose secondary is connected to an oscillator of special design."

From the oscillator a thin wire extended and was connected loosely to the antenna wire of the radio. Thus by tuning in on the frequency of the oscillator the radio picked up the sound recorded on the film. Mr. Rabinowitz pointed out that the oscillator wire was not connected directly with the antenna but was merely draped over the insulated wire of the aerial. He also stressed the point that the sound contained no track noises.

BOOK REVIEW

"ARE WE MOVIE MADE?" By Raymond Moley. Published by Macy Masius. Cloth, 64 pages. $1.00.

Here is a slender, chaste little volume, bound in brown, academically crisp and pungent like a very dry, thin gingersnap, an able but esoteric document pertaining to an absurd sequence of developments in a curious salient of what might be called the public relations activity of the organized motion picture industry.

"Are We Movie Made?" is a book about a book which was to have answered a book about a set of books intended to show that the amusement screen was not very good for children, which was to give reason for an organization which was to keep a man in a job.

This all means that the book under examination here is a derivate document four times removed from its origins.

Despite the obvious skill of Mr. Raymond Moley in both ratiocination and writing, his screed, which explains the explainer, requires some explanation, explanation indeed not only of the book in hand but also why the job has been done.

The real beginning is somewhere around or just prior to 1927 when William Harrison Short, variously a preacher of successively various creeds, and a migrant among jobs of social organization and special causes, once again had to find something new to do and decided to do the motion picture, and do it elaborately, scientifically, completely. There appeared to be promising opportunity. Canon William Sheafe Chase of Brooklyn, since about 1909 the perennial baiter of the screen, had removed to Washington and what with advancing years and much weariness had become substantially inactive.

Mr. Short came forward with a front of organization on a new basis. Canon Chase had held the screen an institution of offense to Christian purpose. Mr. Short took the scientific tack, getting socially conscious on a broad scale. He decorated his Motion Picture Research Council with high academic and social names, enlisted the support of the Payne Fund and ordered the movies into examination in the laboratories. He picked an array of assorted professors of psychology, and such, and to the best of his power and ability tried to order their findings. The movies had to be found bad or the promotion was not going to promote Dr. Short's new career. Some rebelled, some believed and obliged, and some gave negatively non-committal reports. All in time were assembled in documents that presently became books published by Macmillan.

It was clear enough that this row of eight, or some such number of books, was too unwieldy as a publicity instrument, so Henry James Forman was induced to abstract from the volumes of reports, and do some contributing of his own, in the production of a book entitled "Our Movie Made Children." The book was well calculated to please Dr. Short. It also had the makings of some headlines. It was in part syndicated by a magazine and it got considerable attention in the press. This was in 1933. Six years after Dr. Short started his movement.

It might be remarked that while Mr. Forman as the mouthpiece-in-print of Dr. Short had been able to adduce nothing more definite than the report that a certain number of children, after seeing movies, either wiggled in their sleep more than usual or not as much as usual, there was a sort of status of screen production at the time that did not help any.

It was right about this time that the motion picture business was getting serious with itself about the practicality of some self-regulation with a view to aligning its product with America instead of Broadway.

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., was about then decidedly cognizant of the existence of what might have been called a situation. Immediately available was the device of seeing to it that Mr. Forman's derived charges, originated by Dr. Short and cultured in the agar tubes of Ohio research, got answered by other researchers. That was for the immediate. Then, the daily press. But it was deemed necessary that since there had been a book, and a whole set of books behind the book, for the prosecution, there ought to be a book for the defense. It must not only be a book, but it must be from a professor and it must be from a bigger school than Ohio State University.

So it just happened, at once, or only four years later that there issued from the University of Chicago Press a whale of a volume entitled "Art and Prudence," presented as "A Study in Practical Philosophy by Mortimer J. Adler, associate professor of the Philosophy of Law, University of Chicago." It pertained to "The Moral, the Political and the Aesthetic Aspect of the Motion Picture."

And may one observe it pertained and pertained. It pertained for seven hundred pages. It was terrific.

This reviewer, not unfamiliar with the art of reading and the dialectics of the stratosphere of academic expression, went into retreat with the volume for a fortnight of black coffee and the silences of a valley in Connecticut. He emerged with a decision that it would be discreet to say nothing about it. A number of other reviewers had a look and wrote a paragraph about the book being rather large.

This seemed to be getting the public relations job nowhere much, and here it was along toward the end of 1937. Dr. Short had passed to his reward. Some of the researchers were approaching the retirement age. The Motion Picture Research Council's ornamentally academic and socially elite presidents in the East had resigned and it had become a mere focus of some minor snortings from out in northern California.

But the impulse to answer persisted.

Meanwhile Raymond Moley had come into the New York scene, from a period on the Brain Trust of the New Deal, and into a sojourn of journalism with "Today," presently merged with "Newsweek." Mr. Moley was equipped variously and extensively, a professor, one time research director of the New York Crime Commission, author of sundry treatises, etc.

Mr. Moley seems to have drawn an assignment, in his words, "at the suggestion of representatives of the motion picture industry." That was a year ago.

About then he had a look into "Art and Prudence." Also he cast about to read and inquire into the nature of the motion picture industry as seen by some of its intimates.

It was a job not to be approached casually. Out on the Bonneville salt flats the motor speed experts go six miles back to gather momentum for a measured mile. Dr. Adler; preparing to smack into Dr. Short's research scientists, backed up to Plato and Aristotle and worked his way forward through St. Thomas Aquinas, Jean-Jacques Rousseau and John Dewey—all good men in their way and day, but not the most commanding, in a publicity sense, among the patrons of the movies.

When he got around to it Dr. Adler said, with deepest accents of scholarship, that Dr. Short's research professors were full of prunes and their finding the most utter bologny. Those are not his exact words.

Mr. Moley thrashed through Dr. Adler's 700 pages and got the answer. He set it down in his 64 pages, saying in substance that "art for art's sake" is all very well, but it must be reasonable by the standards of "the prudent man." Also he set down, probably as much on his own behalf as by translation of Dr. Adler, that experimental psychology had not yet reached the status of quantitative and qualitative analysis in chemistry and that human affairs are still best left in the hands of common or horse sense. Those are not Mr. Moley's exact words, either.

Just along the path it was indicated that some professors always find what they are looking for, like hired alienists, and that some are honest and in consequence not so sure about anything.

Some of Mr. Moley's footnotes, including the one about the Production Code being "adopted in 1930," presumably supplied to him without research, represent retrospective wishes of his client rather than the fact. Had the Code become adequately effective in 1930 this and probably several of the other books in this complex chain would not have been written.

"Are We Movie Made?" is difficult reading for the many. It had to be that to be a translative paraphrase of Dr. Adler's "Art and Prudence," beside which it has the clarity of a primer. Both books belong on the research shelf. Mr. Moley's job was ordered presumably "for the record." Maybe the idea was salvage.

A considerably more constructive approach probably would have been to have asked Mr. Moley to write a book of his own, if a book had to be had. Probably he would have preferred to do that, too.

Too obviously the final objective, a popular understanding of what it was all about, could only be attained by a popular approach and probably through media less formidable than a book bound between stiff covers. The people are afraid of books. It would have been better to have given the job of exposing the researchers of the Motion Picture Research Council to the collaborative attentions of Mickey Mouse and Charlie McCarthy.

The public relations job is a showman's job. Lawyers and academicians win no arguments with the great commonality.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—Once again the second night's gross proved that neither a picture with this star combination or a screwy comedy is suitable for our town. Grant and Dunne never have meant a thing to us. My advice is that if you haven't played this one yet and if your audience likes hokum, you ought to run it. If they don't like the above type, pass it up. Running time, 92 minutes. Played August 12-13.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

GLADIATOR, THE: Joe E. Brown—The best Joe Brown in two years. Another splendid comedy feature like this will put Joe back at the top. Audience reaction splendid. A nice profit. This feature and "Mother Carey's Chickens" were the only pictures that made any money at my theatre during the entire month of August. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 28-29.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

GLADIATOR, THE: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—Columbia has got something here. The best Joe Brown picture ever produced. Nice story, plenty of action, good comedy well done, not overdone. Will stand alone in any big or little spot and don't miff it, for it's good. Running time, 71 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant—A very fine performance to fair business. Played during the heat wave. Played August 17-18.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Gary Grant, Doris Nolan, Lew Ayres, Edward Everett Horton, Binnie Barnes, Jean Dixon—This looked like big stuff, but somewhere along the line some cook put in something and the thing just didn't jell. Maybe it's Hepburn, but it laid an egg here and didn't gross expenses.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant—Didn't do business we expected to. For some reason or other this feature didn't seem to please the majority of my patrons. Running time, 93 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Gary Grant, Doris Nolan, Lew Ayres, Edward Everett Horton, Binnie Barnes, Jean Dixon—Excellent comedy that failed to click at the box office. Hepburn has lost her drawing power or something is wrong. Played August 27.—Floyd Faubion, Long's Theatre, Angleton, Texas. General patronage.

LAW OF THE PLAINS: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—These stories with the Sons of the Pioneers plus Starrett are good westerns and they draw their share of patronage. If you need some good action to balance a program, try one of these.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LONE WOLF IN PARIS: Francis Lederer, Frances Drake—Above average program picture which held up nicely for us in conjunction with a fashion show and another western.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PIONEER TRAIL: Jack Luden, Joan Barclay—It's another western and they gallop and gallop; they fight but that hair dressing won't let them knock each others' hats off, then, when they've got the horses all run down, you show the other feature and let the noise subside.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SOUTH OF ARIZONA: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—These are very good westerns and this one is tops. The same cast in each Starrett western though, Columbia, gets very tiresome and distracts from pleasure of the picture. Also would suggest a few changes in scenery. My patrons are now as much at home on a Columbia western set as though on their own farm. Running time, 56 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS A WOMAN: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas—Pleased and satisfied us as far as box office worth was concerned. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS A WOMAN: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas, Mary Astor, Frances Drake—While the exhibition of motion pictures has been more or less saturated with sophisticated comedy. I can't understand why this picture didn't get more play, as it was very, very entertaining and I believe it was one of Blondell's greatest for a long time. I liked it and the audience liked it. Running time, 82 minutes. Played August 30-31.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. General patronage.

First National

ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Played a little too late for a good gross. Pleased, but believe the beautiful color made up 75 per cent of drawing power of picture. The action in "Robin Hood" was grand. Running time, 102 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BELOVED BRAT: Bonita Granville, Dolores Costello, Donald Crisp, Natalie Moorhead—While this is an old theme, I thought Bonita Granville did very well and I have no hesitancy in heralding her as one of the screen's coming top stars. Her name doesn't mean much to the box office as yet, but given the right break and support, she is sure to click. Running time, 60 minutes. Played August 26.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. General patronage.

SH! THE OCTOPUS: Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Marcia Ralston—Pretty good. Too silly for most of our patrons. Recording poor. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TORCHY BLANE IN PANAMA: Paul Kelly, Lola Lane, Tom Kennedy—Vitagraph did right by getting Farrell and MacLane back again to take over this series. Miss Lane has not the power that Glenda Farrell has and, naturally, we felt it at the box office. A good story with Kennedy carrying the entire story

'MOST RELIABLE SOURCE' ON FILMS

"I would like to express my appreciation of your 'What the Picture Did for Me Department'. My experience is that it is the most reliable source for information about pictures when booking, as, in regards to my small locations, the critics in the trade publications are as often as not miles out."—J. MACDONALD, Ace Theatre Circuit, Hedley, B. C., Canada.

with his comedy role. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice—We played this on our Bank Night and the give-away plus the feature seemed to satisfy the crowd. I would not recommend this for a single feature bill unless some good shorts are booked with it. However, I don't mean that it is an especially poor picture. On the contrary, it is an amusing comedy, but there is a great deal of talk to it. Running time, 72 minutes. Played August 15.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Edward Arnold, Lionel Stander—There is no question on this picture. It is highly dramatic and both Taylor and Miss O'Sullivan great in their roles. This little lady is certainly coming along. She seems to take her roles in her stride. She has become deft and sure in the roles we have had her in lately. For a time, she was not one of the "Forgotten Men" but the "Forgotten Woman," until Metro picked her up and cast her in good roles. Not forgetting the unsung hero who always adds to any picture that he is in, Lionel Stander. And believe it or not, his name in a cast means something. He is a lot better than some of the palookas that have their name in the lights.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Lionel Stander, Jane Wyman, Edward Arnold—A picture with all the action of an epic. Frank Morgan is outstanding in his role, as are Jane Wyman and Arnold. Taylor, who in my estimation has only looks and never was a convincing actor, struts his usual stuff. Miss O'Sullivan is her same sugary girl; an actress, no. The picture will go over because it is what the public wants. A show with plenty of action and suspense. An outstanding picture, no, but a money maker, yes. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice, Claire Dodd, Nat Pendleton—A cute trailer on this one.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice, Claire Dodd, Nat Pendleton—That title names it. It is fast, snappy entertainment, not a big picture but a damn sight better than some of those that they spend a million dollars on and then haven't anything.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice, Claire Dodd, Nat Pendleton—Fair picture; poor business. Just a programmer. Played August 29-30.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice, Claire Dodd, Nat Pendleton—We had more compliments on this picture than we have had on a picture for a long, long time, and it did better at the box office than any picture in the last six weeks. I'd say play it and on your best time.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FIRST HUNDRED YEARS, THE: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—A satisfactory family night picture that pleased a small crowd. Montgomery doesn't draw too well for me, not near as much as Metro thinks he does, but his pictures please generally and you will run plenty of them that are a lot worse than this one.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOLD THAT KISS: Mickey Rooney—Pleased and drew very good on a one day showing. Used as a teaser for "Love Finds Andy Hardy." Running time, 79 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HOLD THAT KISS: Dennis O'Keefe, Maureen O'Sullivan, Mickey Rooney—It just doesn't take a lot of money or stars to make a good picture and this proves it. One of the most entertaining pictures of the year and it will do business more on the second day. They even let you run it flat and don't even

JUDGE HARDY'S CHILDREN: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Set this in a spot where we usually set "B" pictures and it out-drew the "A" picture as far as audience response is concerned. It is a bit early for Mickey Rooney to really mean much to the box office, although he is obtaining much publicity. I believe this lad is going to be one of the big money getters next season. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 27-29.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. General patronage.

LORD JEFF: Mickey Rooney, Freddie Bartholomew—Passed OK on Bank Night. Kids went for it but believe adults got more of a kick out of it. Running time, 84 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

LORD JEFF: Freddie Bartholomew, Mickey Rooney, Charles Coburn, Gale Sondergaard—They are putting Mickey Rooney in too many pictures. Are they trying desperately to kill him off?—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Judy Garland, Fay Holden—Even though the cost of the Hardy family features has gone up with each new picture, I'd say they were well worth the money paid. Did very nicely on this and to date have found only one who didn't enjoy the feature. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: James Stewart, Florence Rice, Lionel Barrymore—From the way our patrons reacted to this picture, and from the favorable comments heard in the lobby after the show and also around town for the next week after the run, I take pleasure in recommending this picture to any exhibitor. It is a little old, but play it at the start of the football season this fall and they will never know the difference. Running time, 94 minutes. Played August 22.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

NAVY, BLUE AND GOLD: Robert Young, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore—Very good picture that pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 94 minutes. Played August 26-28.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal—Why don't they let Wallace Beery play parts that are more in keeping with the wonderful man that he is, and why do they put him in something like this when there are so many stories that he should be cast in. This picture didn't do half the business we ordinarily do on the same days of the week with other pictures. Use your own judgment, but I'd be careful what I paid for it and where I set it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SHOPWORN ANGEL: Margaret Sullivan, James Stewart, Walter Pidgeon—A very good picture that did average business. Had this one in a top allocation but they changed it so that I will get "Love Finds Andy Hardy" in this picture's original allocation. My people like James Stewart but he isn't any big draw. In time he will be tops.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SHOPWORN ANGEL: James Stewart, Margaret Sullivan—Was surprised at draw and remarks heard about this. Only had choice to play it one day but should have played it three. Running time, 87 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SWISS MISS: Laurel and Hardy, Della Lind, Walter Woolf King—We did a very nice business with this picture and another one on a Friday and Saturday. There are plenty of laughs in this and it will please their following. Too bad they're gonna split, because comedy is just awful scarce in pictures lately.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TOY WIFE, THE: Luise Rainer, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young, Barbara O'Neil, H. B. Warner—This picture was brought back for one extra day. As reported several weeks ago on this page for the picture I think it was Luise Rainer's first real big mistake. Picture only fair. Running time, 76 minutes. Played August 30.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN: Mary Astor, Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce—One of those conversation pictures with no action to help matters along. Got by because of the names in the cast. Nothing exceptional and would hardly do for a single feature. Talk, talk, talk, and you think it will drive the audience crazy, but they come out with no comment good or bad. A problem play in all respects and very heavy. Use your own judgment on setting this. Running time, 61 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN: Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce, Mary Astor—A very good picture but entirely too short. The ladies will eat this one up. Get behind it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 1-2.—Floyd Faubion, Long's Theatre, Angleton, Texas. General patronage.

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN: Virginia Bruce, Herbert Marshall, Mary Astor—Pleased the majority of the ladies on a Bank Night. Can't say as much for

NEW REPORTERS FROM ALASKA AND 4 STATES

From Ketchikan, Alaska, and states in the West, Northwest and South come new contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week and last. They are:

H. E. CAWTHORN, Coliseum Theatre, Ketchikan, Alaska.

C. E. NORCROSS, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Oklahoma.

PAUL T. MITCHELL, Mitchell Theatre, Barbourville, Kentucky.

HOBERT H. GATES, Garlock Theatre, Custer, South Dakota.

EUGENE KENYON, Commercial Theatre, Sundance, Wyoming.

Mr. Gates was a former contributor to the department, but had not reported since February 22, 1936.

the men though. Running time, 61 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

YELLOW JACK: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce—I have panned Robert Montgomery so often I am glad to give him a good report at last. He gives a fine performance as Sergeant O'Hara. Perhaps he is Irish. Wish they would give Buddy Ebsen more, bigger and better parts. He is tops. A good story, although that kind of show is not so popular as some others. Fine supporting cast. I cannot quite see Virginia Bruce in as good roles as Leo thinks she merits. Anyway, this is a fine show and rates your best dates. Running time, 83 minutes. Played August 26-28.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Monogram

Paramount

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Claudette Colbert, Gary Cooper—This picture, in our opinion, is not suited for the small towns. At least, judging from the "nose dive" our box office took on the second night of the run, our folks don't care for these screwy comedies. Running time, 87 minutes. Played August 26-27.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

BOOLOO: Colin Tapley—My Friday-Saturday patrons go for a show of this sort, although I don't believe too many would be any good. Seemed a little patchy to me, but my patrons enjoyed it. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND IN AFRICA: John Howard, Heather Angel, H. B. Warner—Fair picture; fair business. Suitable only for Friday-Saturday. Played September 2-3.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue, Rufe Davis—The musical numbers in this picture are no doubt outstanding. Harriet Hilliard looks a bit more youthful than in her last picture. As for receipts, although this picture had names, music and a fairly possible story, yet it just seemed to miss being great enough to mean much to the box office, although it is a pleasing picture and was well received. Running time, 90 minutes. Played August 27-29.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. General patronage.

COLLEGE SWING: George Burns, Gracie Allen, Martha Raye—An absolutely dizzy dish from Paramount which is absolutely too foolish for words. Burns and Allen were O. K. three years ago, but not in 1938. Book this one for Bank Night, let your assistant run the house, and take about a three-week vacation so your patrons will forget about it before you get back. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 25.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

GIVE ME A SAILOR: Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Betty Grable, Jack Whiting—Crazy comedy that the young folks seem to enjoy. Got by nicely but must take its place in the second half of double bill. In big spots will stand alone. In small spots not strong enough for extended runs. Running time, 71 minutes. W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GIVE ME A SAILOR: Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Betty Grable, Jack Whiting—Fair picture; fair business. Not as good as previous Martha Raye pictures. Played August 24-25.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HUNTED MEN: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle—Held its own on a double feature program. Running time, 67 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE WEST: William Boyd—Not up to the usual standard, but then they might be in a more receptive mood for our next Hopy. Make 'em wild, Mr. Sherman, and cut out all this love business. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PROFESSOR BEWARE: Harold Lloyd—Didn't seem to set so good with a little group of regulars who'd come regardless of hell or high water and punk shows. Pretty terrible for our friend Lloyd. Running time, 93 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PROFESSOR BEWARE: Harold Lloyd, Phyllis Welch, Raymond Walburn, Lionel Stander—In the first place, Lloyd is showing his age. The second place: if this is his yearly effort, he had better get some advice as to what the public want. And that was not "Professor Beware." The picture did not give satisfaction except for the kids, and they are easy to please. All they want is some action, and that the picture had to a certain extent.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SING, YOU, SINNERS: Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray, Donald O'Connor, Ellen Drew, Elizabeth Patterson—A good story with Crosby and MacMurray doing a fine job. I think Paramount was wise to give Crosby star support. My best regards to them for this best of Paramount musicals. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 5-6.—John Sherwin, Colonial Theatre, Bristol, Vt. Small town patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, John Barrymore, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Louise Platt—Having just completed a pre-release showing on Paramount's "Spawn of the North," we thought the reaction of this picture with the people of Alaska and, especially, from the town where the story was laid, would be of interest to other exhibitors throughout the country, so I wish to submit the following report. This picture is one of the finest and should be box office attraction in any man's theatre. We expected to have this picture picked to pieces and criticized more severely by our patrons than any other place in the country as these fishermen are very critical when it comes to anything which pertains to fishing boats or the fishing industry in general. However, very much to our surprise we got nothing but praise from even the most skeptical, with but one exception. Both the natives and the Alaskan people objected very strenuously to parts of the dialogue where they referred to the Alaska natives as Siwash Indians. This was very incorrect and should never be in the dialogue, as the Alaska natives are not Siwashes and resent their being called by this name. The picture could have shown more of the Alaska's scenic grandeur but what they did show is authentic and exceptionally fine, especially the sequence taken in Taku Bay, which is nothing short of wonderful. In fact, the picture is 100 per cent better than anything that has ever come out of the north and should take its place among the best pictures of the year, so don't be afraid to step on it. Running time, 108 minutes.—H. E. (Hal) Cawthon, Coliseum Theatre, Ketchikan, Alaska. General patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Martha Raye, Bob Burns—Played on Sunday-Monday-Tuesday. It's pretty bad. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

YOU AND ME: Sylvia Sidney, George Raft, Barton MacLane, Harry Carey—I'm glad that they can't put you in jail for what you think. This picture is terrible and if you've got any bait it's a good time to be fishing. Don't run it if you have to swap it off for Screen Songs and run them all on the same night.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Republic

CALL THE MESQUITEERS: Three Mesquiteers (Ray Corrigan, Bob Livingston, Max Terhune), Lynn Roberts—Average western which pleased all. Average business. Played August 26-27.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry—A very pleasing picture. The showing of reissue features during the interim that Gene was on a salary strike did not do him any good in this town. However, a few good pictures like this one will bring them back very rapidly. The improvement of recording on this latest Autry is especially noticeable. Running time, 58 minutes. Played August 25-27.—G. W. Barber, Jr., McCrory Theatre, McCrory, Ark. Small town and country patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Very good musical western which pleased all. Good business. Played August 22-23.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Carol Hughes, Smiley Burnette—As an experiment I played this on Bank Night and the results surprised me considerably. We played to biggest business for said nights in two years. Autry is terrible as an actor but he evidently has what it takes to draw them in. Am anxious to play the next one. Friday-Saturday though. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

OUTLAWS OF SONORA: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan—Picture pleased. Was considered a good western by all, but played to poorest Friday-Saturday business in a year. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

OUTLAWS OF SONORA: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan—This drew good business. Good. Running time, 55 minutes. Played August 19-20.—G. W. Barber, Jr., McCrory Theatre, McCrory, Ark. Small town and country patronage.

TRIGGER TRIO: Three Mesquiteers (Ray Corrigan, Bob Livingston, Max Terhune)—Not in the class with Gene Autry or Buck Jones. The dog took the cake. Enjoyed nice business on a dual bill. Beauty contest helped the picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

UNDER WESTERN STARS: Roy Rogers, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Very poor business on this, but believe he'll draw better next time. This boy has something. Not exactly a down and out western. More a comedy, and that's what pleased here. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WRONG ROAD, THE: Richard Cromwell, Helen Mack—Failed to draw. Print bad. Sound fair. Skip it if you can. My first sorry print from Republic. Running time, 62 minutes. Played August 26-27.—G. W. Barber, Jr., McCrory Theatre, McCrory, Ark. Small town and country patronage.

RKO Radio

AFFAIRS OF ANNABEL, THE: Jack Oakie, Lucille Ball, Ruth Donnelly—An excellent satire on Hollywood's press agents. Oakie and Miss Ball score excellently with their sure fire comedy. There was a laugh a minute throughout the picture and it carries good word of mouth advertising. What more can an exhibitor ask from a producer? Running time, 68 minutes.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

BORDER G-MAN: George O'Brien, Ray Whitley—The poorest draw we have had this year on a weekend. The smirky smile of O'Brien is finally getting on the public's nerves. An entire different story that if William Boyd had played would have been tops on anybody's box office. We have felt for some time that O'Brien was slipping and now we feel that this is being confirmed. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown, Helen Mack, Paul Kelly—This is definitely a better picture than some of the later Joe Brown releases. Our crowd went for it in a big way, especially the chase in the last reel, which had them hanging onto their seats with thrills and laughter. Regardless of price, I would rate this as a three star picture for any small town. Running time, 73 minutes. Played August 29.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

GO CHASE YOURSELF: Joe Penner, Lucille Ball—A return to cooler weather helped our business materially. Most of the patrons like Joe Penner, while a few were adverse in their criticism. Played August 27.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

GO CHASE YOURSELF: Joe Penner, Lucille Ball—Played this on a Saturday to good house. Penner's jokes went out with the Ark but for all this the crowd was laughing for the whole 70 minutes of it.—John Sherwin, Colonial Theatre, Bristol, Vt. Small town patronage.

JOY OF LIVING: Irene Dunne, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Very satisfactory to normal business. Played August 24-25.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Ruby Keeler, Anne Shirley, James Ellison—A small-town natural. Word of mouth advertising resulted in second day almost equal in gross to Sunday opening. Advertising efforts should be centered on attracting women and children. All you have to do is get them in: they'll like it one hundred per cent. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 21-22.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Ruby Keeler, James Ellison, Anne Shirley, Fay Bainter, Ralph Morgan, Frank Albertson—A very nice and entertaining picture that I made the bad mistake of playing only one day. Give it three days. As trailer is bad on this, and word of mouth advertisement will increase business; it's good. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SAINT IN NEW YORK: Louis Haywood, Kay Sutton—Entertaining. O. K. in small spots; big towns second half. Something like "Bulldog Drummond." Perhaps not so well done. Running time, 72 minutes.—

W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SKY GIANT: Richard Dix—A good aviation feature that holds the interest. However, for some unexplainable reason, it failed to make any impression at the box office. Those who came were well pleased. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 7-8.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

SMASHING THE RACKETS: Chester Morris, Frances Mercer, Rita Johnson—This one is a sure sleeper. One of the best action pictures that ever hit our screen and I am indeed sorry that I did not give it more playing time than I did. We played this as a low allocation picture but it is better than any other "racket" film. Running time, 69 minutes.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche—Super colossal. Stupendous. Wonderful. Tops. Best picture and doing more business than any picture put out by any producer this year. This is a 10,000 star picture and I don't mean maybe. Wonderful cast, swell plot and the oldtime songs pleased everyone, young and old. It sure did bring back memories to the older folks. This picture is just what any exhibitor dreams of. It's a showmen's dream come true. Tremendous. Why, words can't describe this masterpiece. Fox, you should shout at the top of your lungs for the whole world to hear you, the facts about "Ragtime Band." And did that radio campaign help out the picture? Well, I should say it did. The program not only lasted an hour but lapped over into somebody else's time. This picture of pictures not only should, but will, draw big in practically every community in the United States. Incidentally, I put out my own four page newspaper size paper on this picture in addition to my "OBSERVER" with six pages in place of the usual four and dedicated to this picture. Just a tip, Mr. Manager. Don't miss up on the stunt of having a phonograph in your lobby playing "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Of course, have a nice display of pictures, too. Well, to go on to my report on the picture, all I can say is play this one early, plug this one hard and this will put money into your till. Yes, I think even Lloyd's would take out insurance paying you for every empty seat you would have in your theatre when you played this picture. Business was so tremendous down here that we had the entire theatre roped off, all standing room sold out, doors closed, stopped sale of tickets and started a standing room line from the lobby out into the street. I'll admit that is nothing unusual for the bigger theatres but in this town it is an event. I cannot find enough words to say what I want to about this picture so will just repeat: book it immediately, plug it heavily and you won't be sorry. Thanks a million, Fox, for your splendid production. No one should miss seeing this picture, even if you have to run across the street to your competition's house in order to see it. Running time, 106 minutes. Played August 31-September 1.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche—Excellent picture, colossal business. Had to give three shows each night to take care of the crowd. Had it booked for two days; could have played it four. Broke all box office records. Played August 31-September 1.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BATTLE OF BROADWAY: Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy, Louise Hovick—Some ex-service men got quite a kick out of this but it is the poorest drawing picture that we have had for a long, long time. The allocation on this deserved a better picture, but then New York says they're worth it and why should we complain even if they don't pay express. This better be left in the can unless you've got a lot of summer profits to lose. Played August 31-September 1.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BATTLE OF BROADWAY: Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy—Picture OK. Rather weak for single bill. Played July 27-28.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

BIG TOWN GIRL: Claire Trevor, Donald Woods—Satisfied a fair audience which was held down by hot weather. Played August 20.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

BORROWING TROUBLE: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—Good family picture. Played July 20-21.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

GATEWAY: Don Ameche, Arleen Whelan, Lyle Talbot, Gregory Ratoff, Binnie Barnes—This picture failed to please and business fell down badly on second day. Not a bad picture but just didn't seem to get over. Played August 28.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GATEWAY: Don Ameche, Arleen Whelan, Lyle Talbot, Binnie Barnes, Gregory Ratoff—Hard to report on this. It seemed to please and increase business the second night but I couldn't seem to find out what the thing was all about nor could majority of my patrons. I don't believe anyone actually enjoyed this portrayal of Ellis Island but they did think it was OK. Running time, 74 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Cesar Romero, Ethel Merman—Our patrons liked this one, but neither this one or "Thin Ice" can compare with "One in a Million" for honest-to-goodness entertainment. The first one was something different, but these last ones seem to be just more skating pictures with the same plot. Also, our folks tell me that they like more popular modern music, and not so much light classical skating music. Running time, 102 minutes. Played August 19-20.—George W. Pettengill, Jr.,

Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

JOSETTE: Simone Simon, Don Ameche—Fair picture. Played July 24-25.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

KENTUCKY MOONSHINE: Ritz Brothers, Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver, Slim Summerville—This picture is real entertainment. The only complaint it was hard on the seats. Our farm trade would have liked to roll in the aisles. Business above average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

KENTUCKY MOONSHINE: Ritz Bros.—Picture did good business. Had a few get tired of the Ritz Brothers and walk out, but enjoyed as a whole. Played August 7-8.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

KIDNAPPED: Warner Baxter, Arleen Whelan, Freddie Bartholomew—Scottish accent makes it hard to understand. Played July 31-August 1.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT 40 (Reissue): Will Rogers, Rochelle Hudson, Richard Cromwell, Jane Darwell—One of Rogers' best pictures, which will stand out as a monumental tribute to his career. It was grateful to note that this picture drew people out of the backwoods, and our audiences, rich and poor alike, seemed to have one thing in common in enjoying this picture immensely, especially the old timers. I am one of the many who are sorry that the industry has lost such an outstanding example of America at its best.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

MR. MOTO'S GAMBLE: Peter Lorre—Fair picture. Played August 3-4.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

MY LUCKY STAR: Sonja Henie, Richard Greene, Joan Davis, Cesar Romero, Buddy Ebsen—An excellent picture from start to finish. Better than "Happy Landings." This collegiate picture is very enjoyable and quite a number were sorry when the picture ended, they enjoyed it so much. Sonja Henie is her own sweet self and it looks as though Fox has something there in that Richard Greene. He may go places. Who knows? You won't be sorry you played this one. Played September 2-3.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

PASSPORT HUSBAND: Stuart Erwin, Pauline Moore—Good program picture that did not gross film rental. It takes stars to get them in these days. Stuart Erwin is very good, with a fair supporting cast, but they just did not come. Pleased the few we coaxed in. Running time, 67 minutes. Played August 24-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RAWHIDE: Smith Ballew, Lou Gehrig, Evalyn Knapp—This isn't any knockout but is a fair western, and I think maybe Gehrig's name did help the draw but we still didn't do enough.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple—Satisfied fair audiences. Played August 10-11.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

TRIP TO PARIS, A: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Russell Gleason—We played this one as the "B" picture on the program with "In Old Chicago" and it was an ideal combination. The tremendous ovation the comic antics that the Jones Family received offset the more tragic portions of the other picture. I have always felt that the Jones Family series were ideal for family trade. Running time, 63 minutes. Played August 20-22.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Joan Bennett, Henry Fonda, Dame May Whitty, Alan Marshal—Not a bad picture but it won't get you a nickel's worth of business and you can get along without it very nicely.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Universal

AIR DEVILS: Dick Purcell—Drew well because of air story appeal. Played July 15-16.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

COURAGE OF THE WEST: Bob Baker, Lois January—This was Baker's first appearance in Sodus. Opinion was divided. He may be able to build himself up. Played August 13.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

DANGER ON THE AIR: Donald Woods—Good for double bill. Played August 5-6.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

DEVIL'S PARTY, THE: Victor McLaglen—Pretty fair for double bill. Played August 10-11.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

LAST STAND, THE: Bob Baker, Constance Moore

—A pretty good western but this boy don't look the part. However, he does sing a couple of good songs and does that very well. Will do all right as the other part of a double bill. Running time, 59 minutes. Played September 2-3.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LAW FOR TOMBSTONE: Buck Jones—Regular Buck Jones picture. Played July 22-23.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

LETTER OF INTRODUCTION: Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," George Murphy—We often read about a picture classed as a box office natural. Well, you can spell NATURAL in capital letters. More power to you, John M. Stahl and Universal. Running time, 103 minutes. Played September 4-5.—Floyd Faubion, Long's Theatre, Angleton, Texas. General patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUY: "Dead End Kids," Helen Parrish, Robert Wilcox—Give this one everything you've got and watch the results. The "Dead End Kids" are a good tonic for the box office. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 3.—Floyd Faubion, Long's Theatre, Angleton, Texas. General patronage.

NURSE FROM BROOKLYN: Sally Eilers, Paul Kelly—A good program picture that has just enough action to please and it is just long enough to make up the other half of a double feature and still get you home before the milkman makes his rounds. Played September 2-3.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RAGE OF PARIS, THE: Danielle Darrieux, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Helen Broderick, Mischa Auer, Louis Hayward—We had a number of good reports on this picture and they were from patrons who know their pictures. This foreign star did a nice job of acting in this naughty but nice picture and made a lot of friends who were a bit skeptical and they sent their friends to see it. We didn't break any house records but had the satisfaction of knowing that the patrons were well pleased.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RAGE OF PARIS, THE: Danielle Darrieux, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Helen Broderick, Mischa Auer, Louis Hayward—Fair entertainment. Do not make the mistake I did in trying to put good money after bad. It won't work in this case. My advice is to just put it on regular and you may come out all right, but it simply is not box office. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is very continental and does a fine job in this picture. This new star is still new and quite unknown and the paying customers do not seem to want to see her.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

BOY MEETS GIRL: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Marie Wilson, Ralph Bellamy—We put out the SRO sign on this one but if anybody wants to know what's wrong with the business this is the most correct answer so far. My patrons couldn't understand Cagney and O'Brien being put in roles suited for the Marx Brothers or the Ritz boys. Only those who knew Hecht and MacArthur can understand this picture, although many patrons thought it good but screwy entertainment. Running time, 84 minutes.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

COWBOY FROM BROOKLYN: Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell—Pleased here. A few like this out of the 30 to 60 features we buy from each company would compensate for a lot of stuff we small town exhibitors have to play that means nothing in our situation. "Cowboy from Brooklyn" was just the picture for a small town. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS IN PARIS: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Schnickelfritz Band—Fair picture; fair business. Schnickelfritz

To Republic Pictures:

This Buckwheat exhibitor wants to go on record here and now and say that your product made us more money than any other product we ran last year and also your exchange has been the fairest we have ever dealt with. Your studio could go into the corner of most of the big boys but when it comes to making pictures your men could teach them tricks they never heard of. I cannot understand why more or rather all—and I mean all small towns and a heck of a lot of the big ones—don't play more Republic pictures.

We have been an exhibitor for ten years and sold film for a hundred and fifty before hibernating to south Missouri, and maybe I have not learned a lot but this business can only survive when theatres play worthy product and not trade-marks. I use to give that statement the raspberry and a lot of my old customers will get a kick when they read it, but gosh it's true.—A. J. SIMMONS, Lamar's Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Rural patronage.

Band is a knockout. Played September 4.—Earle M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS IN PARIS: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins—Rudy Vallee to pull them in, Rosemary Lane and a good cast to please them. Rudy Vallee has improved. Don't seem so awkward. He would be great if they could make him act natural. No extended runs. Running time, 95 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

OVER THE WALL: John Littel, June Travis, Dick Foran—Was OK and held own on double bill. Running time, 59 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

RACKET BUSTERS: George Brent, Gloria Dickson, Humphrey Bogart, Walter Abel—Good crime picture. Stands alone. OK in small towns; big towns, second half. Plenty of action and audience appeal. No extended runs. Running time, 71 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Bonita Granville, Jackie Cooper—Went by nicely. Liked by all. Book helped. OK in small spots; second half in big spots. No extended runs. Running time, 91 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING: These shorts are very popular with us here. The old folks take out their false teeth and the young folks stretch their tonsils.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TIME OUT FOR TROUBLE: Charley Chase—This really got some laughs with a lot of that old hokum that you don't see often enough in the two-reel tragedies that are being ground out to sell.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Educational

DIME A DANCE: Imogene Coca, Danny Kaye—One of the stupidest shorts, lacking in action and insulting to one's intelligence, and worst of all, no comedy at all.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

GREY OWL'S LITTLE BROTHER: Treasure Chest—A nature study subject which is very interesting, especially if you don't happen to be located in the Beaver country. They are a pest up here with us, but the kids and some of the grownups liked "Grey Owl's Little Brother." Running time, 9 minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

HOW TO DANCE THE SHAG: Song and Comedy Hits—A real dance lesson which our patrons enjoyed. I recommend that you advertise this so that your high school crowd will know about it in advance. If they do, they are sure to come to see it. Running time, 9 minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

WE LIVE IN TWO WORLDS: Treasure Chest—This short will pass on any theatremans program. Running time, 11 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BILLY ROSE'S CASA MANANA REVUE: Musical Comedies—Pretty much the same as the original and filled with some outstanding performers. Not the best you ever ran but good entertainment.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BLOTTO (Reissue): Laurel & Hardy—This is a rather weak subject and didn't seem to get many laughs. Running time, 27 minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

CAME THE BRAWN: Our Gang—Our Gang goes to town in another fine comedy. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CANARY COMES ACROSS, THE: Virginia Grey—The subject is very good but the action is slow and draggy. Again we say MGM should put some pep in their musicals.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

COME ACROSS: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—These "Crime Doesn't Pay" shorts are in a class of their own and my patrons like them much better than most of the shorts that we force down their throats.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA ON PARADE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very colorful and instructive. A most timely subject.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

IT'S IN THE STARS: Johnny Downs, Eleanor Lynn—A honey. Swell for Sunday. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. C. Archart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: O. K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

OLD SMOKEY: Captain and the Kids—Guess these are now O. K. as the kids scream when the title is flashed on the screen.—E. C. Archart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

PERFECT DAY, THE (Reissue): Laurel & Hardy—We have played three of these reissues and found this one to be the best of the lot. The only drawback is that these subjects show their age because of the costumes of the actors. This is a very funny comedy. Our folks liked it. Running time, 19 minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

RURAL SWEDEN: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—These FitzPatrick travel talks are very good and are a welcome addition to any program. Well photographed in color and voice recording is very good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SURF HEROES: Pete Smith Specialties—Again Pete Smith scores with this short. He had been slipping some but this one brings him back to his high standing of good subjects. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THREE MEN IN A TUB: Our Gang—This is hitting on all cylinders for us with one of two exceptions. Enjoyed by the entire audience. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK, NO. 3: MGM Miniatures—I believe a short of this nature is a very good one for the purpose of balancing programs. Well directed and well narrated, I would place this among the top bracket in shorts. Running time, 11 minutes.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. General patronage.

Paramount

COLOR CLASSICS SERIES: This color series from Paramount seems to be slipping. We don't think they are as good as they were a year ago. However, they are still plenty well worth playing. Running time, 8 minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

FOUR SMART DOGS: Grantland Rice Sportlights (New Series)—An interesting short for dog lovers. One of the best of the sport series from Paramount. Photography and sound as good as ever. 'Nuf sed. Running time, 9 minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

HORSESHOES: Grantland Rice Sportlights—The short is O. K., especially if you like to throw horse-shoes. Picture shows all kinds of stunts that expert horseshoe throwers do. From this fact alone you should know whether you want the short or not. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 9: Excellent in all respects. Well diversified and the offstage remarks exceptional. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWING SCHOOL: Betty Boop Cartoons—One of the poorer of this series. Better put grampa back in to pep them up. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

POLAR TRAPPERS: Walt Disney Cartoons—The best Disney cartoon we played.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

QUINTUPLAND: Dionne Quintuplets—Ran this on the same program with a Joe Brown picture and broke our two-year house record for kids. The adults enjoyed it also. Running time, 18 minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

MOVIETONE NEWS: Lew Lahr—O. K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

RECORDING MODERN SCIENCE: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Quite enjoyable. Don't book it on the same program with a News if you like plenty of variety.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

STRING BEAN JACK: Terry Toons—In color and excellent. Above the usual color cartoon. This was very cleverly done and I considered it to be one of the best if not the best colored short cartoon that I have seen on the market this year. This is the type of short that you should not pass up. It's the unusual and extra good short subject that you want, and that's what you have in "String Bean Jack." Why take any old thing when, for probably the same price, you can get an enjoyable short like this. Don't fail to book this one, Mr. Exhibitor, and your patrons will thank you for it as well as Fox. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

Universal

LAMPLIGHTER: Oswald Cartoons—A good cartoon with some laughs in the closing scenes.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NELLIE, THE SEWING MACHINE GIRL: Oswald Cartoons—Good cartoon. Well enjoyed. Running time, one reel.—C. E. Norcross, Tower Theatre, Seiling, Okla. General patronage.

SHOW FOR SALE: Mentone Musical Comedies—Some pretty good acts in this two-reeler but it isn't any knockout and it isn't a flop. Just one of those things.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CLYDE MCCOY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A corking good musical. Warners should put out more of this material.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

HAVE YOU GOT ANY CASTLES: Merrie Melodies—Merrie Melody cartoons such as this ranks tops. The subject is far more clever than Disney has given us this season. Tops in all respects. If the feature product was as good as the shorts, Vitaphone would be the tops of anybody's program. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MIKE RILEY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very, very poor. Not worth running. Vitaphone short are slipping. They are not running as good as they did some time ago.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TWO BOOBS IN A BALLOON: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—I don't believe that the reissues of Warners do any justice to Bergen and "McCarthy," because most of them seem to be so crude that they are far from upholding the standard of his radio performances. Perhaps it is the material, but at any rate the entertainment isn't there. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. General patronage.

VITAPHONE CAPERS: Joe Termini—One of the best singles we ever played. Just a succession of vaudeville acts but it was a touch of yesterday with the comedy of today.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

MYSTERIOUS PILOT, THE: Captain Frank Hawks—Taking very well. Playing it midweek. Believe it helps out.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SECRET OF TREASURE ISLAND: Don Terry, Gwen Gaze—We are halfway through this material and it is holding up fair. It doesn't have a thing that its predecessors have shown and we use it on our bargain nights to fill in.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Universal

FLAMING FRONTIERS: Johnny Mack Brown—By the grapevine system I can tell this is going to click. Apparently it's a dandy.—E. C. Archart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

Housing Film for Liners

The Federal Housing Administration has made an arrangement through Modern Film Corporation, New York, for the showing of its film, "Today We Build," on a number of European liners docking in New York. The first showing was held on the Normandie recently.

Leon Schlesinger has signed Irving Hineman to represent him in the merchandising and licensing field in the United States on his Vitaphone cartoon characters. Mr. Hineman succeeds David C. Green, resigned.

Film Theatres in Poland Increase

The office of the U. S. Commercial Attache at Warsaw, Poland, has informed the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce, Washington, that film theatres operated in Poland in 1937 numbered 769 and 40 traveling shows.

In comparison with 1936 the number of theatres increased by 28 or 3.75 percent. Theatres operated in 1934 were 752; in 1933, 728; in 1934, 707; in 1935, 722, and in 1936, 741. The total capacity of theatres in 1937 was 272,812 compared with 264,271 in 1936.

The city of Warsaw had the largest number of theatres and seating capacity with 66 theatres and 39,920, followed by Lodz with 37 houses and 16,058 seats. All of the theatres in the larger towns and cities are wired for sound and out of the total of 769, 743 were wired and only 26 were not, these latter figures being 703 and 38 respectively in 1936.

The Polish official censors passed 127 locally-produced films and 481 foreign films of all types in 1937, according to a release of the Rada Naczelna Przemyslu Filmowego w Polsce (Central Council of the Polish Film Industry). The 127 local films included 26 full program films of 1,500 meters or over in length, nine medium films between 900 and 1,500 meters in length, 31 short films up to 900 meters in length, 58 film short films up to 300 meters in length with Polish themes, and three advertising films.

One film and two short films up to 900 meters in length were rejected by the censor and not allowed to be exhibited. Several films were declared unfit for exhibition before children, including two full program films, two short films up to 900 meters in length and three short films up to 300 meters in length. Silent films produced amounted to 702,194 meters.

Of the 481 foreign films approved by the Polish censors 261 were features, over 1,500 meters. The United States led with 168 films, followed by France and Germany with 29 each, England, 14; Austria, 13; Italy, three, and Czechoslovakia, Japan, Switzerland, Sweden, and Hungary, one each.

Monogram Appoints Goldman

Mark Goldman, manager in Pittsburgh for GB since the organization of the company, succeeds the late David Selznick as manager of the Pittsburgh Monogram exchange. Joseph Kaliski, GB manager in Washington and prior to that Educational manager for 12 years in Pittsburgh, replaces Mr. Goldman.

Hoffberg Acquires Two Films

J. H. Hoffberg, head of J. H. Hoffberg Company, Inc., has acquired two Edgar Wallace melodramatic action pictures, "Crimson Circle" and "Secret of Stanboul," for national distribution. Both features are set for fall release.

Bissell Joins Monogram

Holbrook C. Bissell, former Cleveland branch manager for Columbia, and later in independent distribution, has returned to Cleveland as Monogram exchange manager.

One "Sex" Film Loses, New York Ruling on Second

New York State Supreme Court Justice Gilbert Schenck in Albany this week denied an application for temporary injunction, sought by Samuel Cummins, manager of Social Hygienic Films of America, and Jewel Productions, who hold the distribution rights on the film "Animated Diagrams of the Human Body," a two-reel picture showing the effects of social diseases. The action had been directed against Irwin Esmond, director of the Motion Picture Division, Education Department, who terminated a permit last June for "Animated Diagrams," leading to the current court action.

"Animated Diagrams" was made by the United States Government during the war and later licensed for exhibition in New York State through a permit issued in 1921 by the old Motion Picture Commission, which preceded the present-day unit. Subsequently, the film was shown as part of a show called "Some Wild Oats." The Motion Picture Commission revoked a license on "Some Wild Oats" on October 24, 1924.

Hearing on Censorship Issue

The much disputed censorship issue over "The Birth of a Baby" moves a step nearer conclusion Friday when the application of the American Committee on Maternal Welfare and of Sam Citron for an order pursuant to Article 78 of the Civil Practice Act will be heard in special term, Supreme Court, at Troy, Rensselaer County. The action is directed against Thomas J. Mangan (Chancellor) and his fellow members of the Board of Regents, who refused an appeal from the decision of Motion Picture Director Irwin Esmond in banning "The Birth of a Baby" from public exhibition in New York State.

Fined for Nudist Film

A fine of $100 was given Harold Wingler in Denver for showing "Unashamed," a nudist film, at the Tivoli theatre. Charges against R. G. Mapel, owner of the theatre, were dismissed.

The Ohio division of film censorship reviewed a total of 546 reels during the five-week period in August, from which 55 eliminations were ordered. Seven reels were rejected for the week ending Sept. 2. This compares with 349 reels reviewed and 24 eliminations ordered in July, 1938, and 575 reels with 27 eliminations in August, 1937.

Toledo Blade Aids Drive

The Toledo Blade Company, publishers of the Toledo Blade, newspaper, is cooperating in the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign by publishing a series of eight two-column advertisements. The company, in conjunction with Toledo Loew's theatres, also is conducting a contest to select 12 Toledo girls as "Movie Queens." By some ingenuity of mishap it was mentioned last week as a razor blade company—which might have been a "Tie-up."

Campaign Book Available

E. K. Evers, of Sunray Films, Inc., is issuing a complete campaign book in connection with the release of "The Little Flower of Jesus," film version of the life of Saint Therese of Lisieux.

Elephant Boy Who Made Good Comes to the Big City

Sabu, 14-year-old Indian star of Alexander Korda's "Drums" which is soon to be launched in the American market, is met and surrounded by the press on his arrival in New York on the Normandie. The youthful actor, who was selected from a crowd of natives by Zoltan Korda while filming location shots for "Elephant Boy" and was made the star of that picture, will attend the premiere of his latest film at the Music Hall, September 29th, meet President Roosevelt, and watch baseball and polo games, all under the auspices of United Artists. His father was a mabout in the service of the Maharajah of Mysore and he himself was a stable boy in the royal service when he was made a film star. Accompanying him are his brother, Sheik Destagir, and two Sikh bodyguards, Kartar and Assah Singh.

Hammons to Coast New York Sees To Study Product 'Edge of World'

Earle W. Hammons, president of the newly formed New Grand National, planned to leave New York for the coast late this week to participate in conferences on the company's initial production schedule and to carry on negotiations with several producers for release of product this season.

The schedule for New Grand National, which was formed through the merger of Educational and Grand National, is expected to include between 30 and 40 features in addition to short subjects.

Mr. Hammons was preceded to the coast by Jack Skirball, Educational general manager, who left New York Tuesday night, and by Edward L. Alperson, vice-president of New Grand National, who started the westward trip last Friday.

Before he left New York, Mr. Alperson disclosed that New Grand National will discuss a new distribution deal with Associated British Film Distributors before concluding any deal for the British rights to the new company's output. Grand National's two-year deal with the British company expires at the end of this month.

Particular significance was attached to Mr. Alperson's statement because of the recent overtures made by Louis Jackson, head of Anglo-American Films of London, to obtain the British distribution rights to New Grand National product.

"The Edge of the World," British-made film which is the first release of Pax Films for the new season, had its premiere at the 55th Street Playhouse, New York, Saturday. The picture was produced by Joe Rock Productions and was written and directed by Michael Powell. All footage for the film was shot on the Island of Foula, 20 miles off the Shetland Islands in the North Sea.

While the New York opening marked its first showing in this country, the picture has been shown in England and was reviewed from London in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, August 14, 1937, in these words, in part:

"The picture is akin to 'Man of Aran' and to that other very sincere British picture, 'The Turn of the Tide,' in the fact that it aims to give a true picture of ordinary men and women, and a realistic presentation of man's struggle in the face of nature. Like 'Man of Aran' it is magnificent in its settings and general pictorial values, and like 'The Turn of the Tide' it avoids all the obvious appeals in portrayal of a love interest."

Frank S. Nugent, motion picture critic of The New York Times, in his review of the film said: "... it is one of the most beautifully photographed, most unusual and most dramatic films England has given us this year—and England has sent over a number of great ones."

RAPID TELEVISION DEVELOPMENT IN U. S. SEEN; NAZIS PUSH TESTS

Radio Manufacturers Association Files Set of Proposed Transmission Standards for Television with Government

Following closely on the heels of Washington reports that considerable pressure is being brought to bear upon Federal Communications Commission officials to put television on a permanent operating basis, the Radio Manufacturers' Association this week laid before the FCC a set of proposed television transmission standards.

Would Open Commercial Field

Approval of the standards would mean the removal of television from its present experimental stage.

The drafting of the standards represents several months' work by the Radio Manufacturers' Association. To handle additional work by the organization, three new engineering committees are in the process of formation, to handle details on television interference, television transmitters and television receivers. The respective chairmen of the committees are J. E. Brown of the Zenith Radio Corporation; E. W. Engstrom of the Radio Corporation of America, and I. J. Kaar of General Electric.

Among the standards for which approval is sought are the following:

A television channel of not less than six megacycles in width.

A standard to separate the sound and picture carriers by approximately 4.5 Mc. to go into effect just as soon as single-band operation at the transmitter is practicable.

A standard in a television channel to place the sound carrier in a television channel 0.25 Mc. lower than the upper frequency of the channel.

A standard for a decrease in initial light intensity to cause an increase in the radiated power.

A standard to use a frame frequency of 30 per second and a field frequency of 60 per second, interlaced.

A standard 441 lines per frame.

A standard picture aspect of 4.3.

If the peak amplitude of the radio frequency television signal is taken as 100 per cent, the standard will be to use not less than 20 per cent nor more than 25 per cent of the total amplitude for synchronizing pulses.

A standard that black shall be represented by a definite carrier level independent of light and shade in the picture.

If peak amplitude of the radio frequency television signal is taken as 100 per cent, it will be the standard for the signal amplitude to drop to 25 per cent or less of peak amplitude for maximum white.

A standard in order to correspond as nearly as possible to equivalent rating of sound transmitters, that the power of television picture transmitters be nominally rated at the output terminals in peak power divided by four.

A standard to have the radiated power for the picture approximately the same as for sound.

Before the filing of the standards with the FCC, it was pointed out in Washington that regular transmission scheduled cannot be adopted until there is some assurance of stability of regulations.

Recent transmission tests, it was said, have shown that the art has reached a point where further development must be based upon experience rather than theory.

Foreseeing the approach of the time when television would reach this point, engineers of

CEA TO CONSIDER TELEVISION ISSUE

The question of television and its relation to exhibition was to be brought to the fore at the meeting of the general council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association this week in Glasgow by Major A. J. Gale. It was indicated that Major Gale would introduce a resolution calling for a joint discussion of the matter among the CEA, the Kinematograph Renters' Society and the British Broadcasting Corporation with a view toward the establishment of a solid trade policy on the matter and particularly on the use of films in television broadcasts.

David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, was guest of honor at a dinner given by his company in London this week and attended by numerous British exhibitors and circuit men. He forecast an important future for television in the field of education and told exhibitors they had nothing to fear from the new medium.

the FCC, it is understood, have been watching closely recent developments and particularly the test transmissions of the National Broadcasting Company and others.

Trade reports are that there is plenty of money available for television once the commission, by placing it on a permanent basis, gives the go ahead signal. The money, however, will not come out of hiding until that time, largely because there is a race between several interests to be first in the commercial field and each is keeping plans very secret.

Rumors have been rife for some time that a major drive for commercialization of television would be made before fall, the basis for such reports being largely the recent submission to the FCC of a number of requests for authority to construct transmission stations. A considerable proportion of these applications, it is said, are signed by individuals and small companies, but actually are backed by important organizations in the communications industry which do not wish to reveal their plans.

In recent months there has been considerable development of television facilities not only by the Radio Corporation of America, working with NBC, but by the Columbia Broadcasting Company, General Electric, Philco, Farnsworth and the Don Lee interests in California. RCA and NBC have five of the score or so of television licenses which have been granted by the Government. General Electric has three licenses which were recently granted; Philco has two and has applied for a third.

The development of an adequate source of program material has been one of several problems involved in television, it is said. Another is the financing of transmissions on a regular basis, which is bound to be very expensive. Still another is the production of receivers to sell at prices within reach of a depression-poor people, and a fourth is the question of how the country is to be covered, since television will be too expensive to permit the operation of a number of small independent stations.

Engineer Reports Germany Has Fostered Development in Hope of Fitting Medium to Government Propaganda

Spurred on by the belief that television will constitute another potent means of spreading Nazi propaganda, along with films, press and radio, Germany, with very little fanfare, has developed the new form of communication to a point much closer to perfection than that achieved in the United States, France or England, according to Marshall P. Wilder, television engineer for the National Union Radio Corporation, manufacturers of radio television tubes and parts, who recently returned from a six weeks' European trip during which he studied the latest developments in television.

Mr. Wilder cited three other reasons to which he attributes the strides made by German television engineers. They are: A "gentlemen's agreement" to eliminate possible infringement actions by the pooling of patents; Germany has no "traditions" or "sacred cows" to hold back its progress in the field, and television companies are tied in directly with the important German optical corporations.

Although, at present, Germany does not have commercial television, Mr. Wilder said that while he was in Germany a public announcement was made to the effect that telecasting on a commercial scale would be launched in Berlin October 1st.

Although America usually prides itself on being "young," "modern" and not steeped in traditions, according to Mr. Wilder "old fashioned traditions" are responsible for the United States not occupying the leader's position in the development of television.

The United States, Mr. Wilder explained, entered the television field much earlier than Germany and heavy investments were made in equipment. Now, he continued, American companies are intent upon utilizing the equipment and protecting their investments with the result that each company continues to seek to develop its own type of television without using the discoveries made by other firms.

In Germany, though, these "sacred cows" do not exist, he declared. The country entered the field late and then said "we'll develop all ways of televising," Mr. Wilder explained.

Three Types Explained

According to Mr. Wilder there are three types of television broadcasting: one, storage transmission; two, Farnsworth instantaneous transmission, and three, intermediate film transmission.

The storage type of television, Mr. Wilder explained, is approximately 20 times more sensitive than instantaneous but the latter, he continued, faithfully transmits average brightness which is one of the weak points of storage transmission.

The intermediate film transmission has been developed in Germany to the extent where a subject can be photographed and, in addition, the film is developed, dried and ready for scanning by a disector built into the equipment

AUTONOMY OFFERED TO STUDIO WORKERS

Leaders of Alliance Accede to "Minority" Demand for Elec- tions by Hollywood Locals

With an informal conference before the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board hearing set for this week in Hollywood on charges that producers "bought" control of four International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees studio locals, all principals concerned in the complaint which was filed by Jeff Kibre, a studio craftsman, denied the accusations as "ridiculous." William Bioff, mentioned in the complaint as the recipient of $100,000 from the producers, was given a vote of confidence and a year's bonus by the IATSE executive board and offered a permanent position in spite of his recent resignation as personal representative of George E. Browne, International president.

Charging that a small minority persistently has caused trouble in the studio locals, IATSE leaders answered agitation for local autonomy for the worker groups with an announcement that nominations for officers of the locals would be opened immediately.

A later statement accused the CIO and "Communist supporters" of fomenting the trouble in the hope of invading Hollywood.

The announcement of the elections was made for the IATSE executive board by Harold Smith, International vice-president in charge of the Hollywood offices with Harland Holmden. Mr. Smith said, "President Browne and the general executive board are convinced that the interests of studio workers would be best served under international supervision, but there is a small minority which resorts to vilification and instigation of trouble, demoralizing proper procedure for betterment of conditions for the membership. Consequently, it is necessary to take this action."

The official autonomy statement was:

"Meetings for nominations of officers for studio workers affiliated with the IATSE were ordered Tuesday from New York by International President George E. Browne. I will call meetings immediately. This follows the fact that a committee appointed by International President Browne and the general executive board of the Alliance has been in session for the past 10 days. The general executive board does not feel that the international alliance in general should be subject to these unwarranted attacks, and from now on it will be the duty of each of our west coast studio locals to clean its own house with respect to subversive elements in the ranks retarding progress.

"The action filed yesterday before the NLRB by one individual previously shown to represent a small minority of less than 84 out of 12,000 members is only another attempt to discredit IATSE officials. It seems apparent that the action filed was a last attempt to discolor the previous action of the committee appointed by the international president and general executive board to benefit the IATSE membership in studios.

"Autonomy was taken away from the four locals in 1935 following reorganization of the group after the disastrous studio strike during which the IATSE lost much of its work. The American Society of Cinematographers, non-labor affiliate, obtained a 10-year contract with producers covering first cameramen's work and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers obtained much of the electrical work formerly going to the IATSE. With the signing of the basic agreement with producers prior to the suspension of autonomy of the studio locals, the IATSE gained closed shop conditions and regained jurisdictional lines with the exception of cinematographers who in the major studios still must belong to the ASC. However, all assistant cameramen and first cameramen on independent productions must be IATSE members.

"Also affected by the new order is Makeup Artists Local 706, which joined the IATSE last year following the Federated Motion Picture Crafts strike."

Schenck, Casey Deny Charge

The charge in Mr. Kibre's complaint was branded as "ridiculous" by both Joseph M. Schenck, president of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, and Pat Casey, labor contact for the producers.

Mr. Schenck, in Chicago on his way to the coast, said, "This is the first I have heard about it but it looks like a factional fight of the unions. The charge that I paid anyone $100,000 on a union deal is a ridiculous statement. I never gave anyone a bribe of any kind. One hundred thousands dollars is a lot of money."

Mr. Casey said, "If these unions were company unions do they think they could have gotten from 25 to 35 per cent increases in pay during the last three or four years?"

Guild Hearing Continues

Membership in the Screen Directors' Guild in all three classifications, directors, assistants and unit managers, doubled in the period from May 11th to August 15th, J. P. MacGowan, executive secretary of the organization testified at the Labor Board hearing on the Guild's petition for collective bargaining designation.

Mr. MacGowan gave figures purporting to show that the Guild had a preponderant majority of such workers on all major lots.

Six assistant directors took the stand and were closely questioned by Alfred Wright, representing Twentieth Century-Fox. They were Eric Stacey, Mack Wright, Wilbur McCaugh, Charles Carr, William Argyle Nelson and Edward F. O'Fearn.

Meet on Actors' Contract

Murray Kinnel, B. B. Kahane and Charles Biard, the committee which will arbitrate the proposed amendments to the producers' agreement with the Screen Actors' Guild, will meet September 19th with representatives of the producing companies who are signatories to the agreement to discuss arbitration.

Under the provisions of a proposed Screen Writers' contract submitted to the producers this week the employer would have the right to cancel the contract of any writer guilty of "wilful malingering" or employing a ghost writer. A minimum of $125 a week is sought.

Stagehands Get Increase

Negotiations between a New York circuit committee and the executive board of the Theatrical Protective Union No. 1, this week resulted in a six per cent increase in salary, retroactive to September 1st, for New York stagehands in motion picture theatres. The new conditions and wage scales will be written into contracts which may be ready for signatures this weekend and which will supersede a "gentlemen's agreement" in effect since last year. The term which the contracts will run is still under discussion.

Nazi Television Progress Told

within 80 seconds. The camera employs a sound head which records the sound at the same time the picture is developed, Mr. Wilder explained.

The fact that the government in Germany controls radio and television, also is proving to be an advantage in the development of television, Mr. Wilder said. A company developing television is assured of a buyer for his product if it is successful, he continued.

Another development viewed by Mr. Wilder in Germany was a projector showing large screen pictures which afforded an increase in brilliancy 15 times more than on a normal screen.

According to Mr. Wilder there are approximately eight different manufacturers and development laboratories now showing models of television receivers in Germany, both of the direct viewing type, the home projection type, television in natural colors, and large screen television projection systems. Among the more important companies, he said, are the Fernseh Company, the Telefunken Company and the German Post Office Development Laboratory.

The transmission on a commercial scale in Germany will be from atop the Amerika Haus, a new building. The programs will come from a 15-kilowatt station. Germany, Mr. Wilder explained, will not only send television by radio but also will send it by wire line on a carrier of 4½ megacycles.

Wilder Demonstrates Television Set at Meeting of Amateurs

One of the highlights of the meeting in Chicago of the Radio Relay League, an organization of 28,000 amateur radio operators, was the demonstration of an English-type television apparatus by Marshall Wilder of Newark, N. J.

Mr. Wilder informed the amateurs that one could build a television receiver for $150 and then told of the equipment needed and where it could be purchased.

The "Hams" as they are known among themselves, expressed eagerness to go into television as soon as someone will transmit to them.

RCA Acquires Process Of Vladimir Zworykin

The Radio Corporation of America has acquired rights to a new transmission patent, held by Vladimir K. Zworykin, by which it expects it may cut to reasonable proportions the cost of distance transmission.

As explained by engineers the inventor's process uses two receiving antennas hooked up to a single receiving station combined with an automatic device which corrects itself to match the wave length of atmospheric conditions of the moment. Through this system there is said to be an unbroken ultra high frequency communication between the transmitter and the receiving station beyond the horizon.

Mr. Zworykin also invented the iconoscope which scans pictures for television by electronic impulses.

RCA Television Tours Opened at Radio City

Regularly conducted television tours for the public are being offered at Radio City Daily from 9 A. M. to 11 P. M. by the Radio Corporation of America.

The exhibit includes a complete television studio, an explanation of the fundamentals of television provided by the guides, television reception shown on the RCA experimental receivers, and a display of miniature settings, backgrounds and special visual effects used in television.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

UP THEY GO

From the beginning of the Quigley Awards, George Limerick has been among the most active contestants. His record of accomplishments speaks for the Round Tabler's talents. He has taken down honors time and again, topped by the Silver Plaque, Class "D", and Additional Citation of Merit for best campaign, regardless of classification, in the First Quarter of 1938.

Now come glad tidings of Limerick's appointment to City Manager, Griffith Amusement Co., in Enid, Okla., from his previous post as head of the Yale and Palace, in Cleburne, Texas. It is well deserved recognition, indeed.

The winning of a Quigley Award may not automatically rate a theatreman for immediate advancement. But the fact that so many winners are so recognized is to be regarded as much more than a casual coincidence.

* * *

Since promotions among Round Tablers are to be regarded as most important news, these pages are further enlivened with announcement of elevations come to other known members. B. F. "Dinty" Moore, headman at Warners New York and Brooklyn Strand theatres, goes to the general managership of Oklahoma City's Standard circuit. Rudy Kuehn steps up from the Stanley, in Jersey City, to a district post in the Warner New Jersey division.

Most every day, somewhere, hard-hitting theatremen are being advanced to more responsible and better paying positions. It's that kind of a business.

WHY HOLD THAT AGIN' HIM?

*You may lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink;
You may send a stude to college, but you can't make him think.*

* * *

The above couplet is a bit of old-time doggerel echoed years back in higher halls of learning. It is recited here again for the edification of an indignant Round Tabler upon whom must rest the blame for this lyrical outburst.

The member writes protestingly of a recent New York Times classified ad for theatre managers by a representative metropolitan circuit, addressed exclusively to the attentions of college graduates, preferably those without experience in show-business. He "points with alarm," inferring that encouragement of any such trend can be regarded as nothing less than a threat to the livelihood of theatremen without cap and gown. The Round Tabler wants your Chairman to lead a movement agin' it.

We intend to do no such thing. This department holds a man's formal education should not be held against him. We see no reason why a college man should not be regarded as worthy as any other citizen, within reasonable limits, of course. If he is seduced by the glamour of theatre business, why scorn him for that. Is there one among us who at some time in his youth has not been equally impulsive?

SERVICE IS SERVICE

In the words of Ken Force, the HERALD's Kansas City advance guard, it goes as follows: "This week's prize for the most unusual advertisement goes to Ed Rolsky, of the St. John theatre. Read it," he dares us. So we read:

"It is no longer necessary for you to stand in a long line on Dish Nights. We have arranged a special ticket office where men and children may purchase tickets and ENTER by special entrance and secure choice seats. No Waiting. No Delay."

Tush, tush. Is that what the gentleman calls service? Why not do it right by delivering dishes right to the homes and save folks the bother of coming to the theatre at all.

The selection of J. P. Shipley, of the Dunkin Theatre, Cushing, Okla., by Paramount, completes the list of winners in the July-August contest for the prizes of all-expense trips to New York. For his efforts on "Professor Beware", Shipley now joins with the other winners, announced in last week's issue, who are expected to meet in New York on Sept. 26, to be guests of the companies sponsoring the contest in cooperation with your Round Table.

Display above was painted in front of the Million Dollar Pier, Atlantic City, to plug "Carefree" opening at the Warner Theatre. Yam contest, latest dance craze, was put on at the pier and danced by the Roxettes as done by Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in the picture.

Giant blowups of stars and scene stills were used by C. Priestman of the Plaza Cinema, London, atop his marquee for advance exploitation on opening of Republic's "Call of the Yukon." Immense title and cast sign was illuminated at night. Below marquee and at either side of boxoffice, further advertising copy helped plug his attractions.

Manager George C. Lewis of the Rialto Theatre, Peoria, Ill., used this trailer street bally in connection with the showing of "Sky Giant." Trailer was especially effective at night as the entire float was flooded with light and transparent. Six storage batteries and 300-10 watt lamps were used for lighting. Trailer covered main thoroughfares, stopping for traffic and the distribution of heralds.

Among the many vigorous exploitations supervised by Herman Addison, Jr., while with the Walter Reade organization in Asbury Park, N. J., was state-wide beauty contest, finals of which were held at Convention Hall. Photo to right shows the Round Tabler presenting cups to the winners, Miss Asbury Park and Miss New Jersey, at the ceremonies.

Arranged by Acting Manager Fuller and Assistant Manager Kaplan at Locw's Valencia, Jamaica, L. I., was model boat contest for "Lord Jeff." In addition to display above, cooperating merchants also planted some of the models in their windows with proper theatre credit and picture plugs.

Boxing Angles Exploit "Crowd Roars" Date

Paul Kamey, Lincoln Theatre, Trenton, N. J., for "The Crowd Roars" prepared a special letter detailing the boxing angles of the picture, mentioning past and present well-known fighters who appear in it and mailed it to sports writers together with a pair of passes.

Theatreman also aided Dave Levin, manager of the RKO State, New Brunswick, N. J., in conjunction with the New Brunswick Recreation Commission for which they arranged an RKO State-Robert Taylor Boxing Tournament, held before night of picture opening. Announcements were made of the special Taylor bouts at prior boxing matches and cards exploiting it were placed around the ring. Newspapers gave full cooperation; theatre printed special programs, one page listing the fighters, weights, etc. and the other three exploiting picture highlights. These were distributed at fights by boys and for prizes, local department store contributed boxing sweaters which were featured prominently in window display.

Illuminated Street Float Sells "Miss Broadway"

For street bally on "Little Miss Broadway" at the Chief Theatre, Gallup, New Mexico, Johnny Sanders built a float on which was mounted life size cutout of Shirley Temple. Over the top were hand-cut letters covered with silver metallics spelling out title and cast. Shadow box with flasher button illuminated the display.

Week ahead of opening girl was stationed in lobby at ironing board with iron continually stamping heads of the starlet on the dresses and sweaters of those children desiring it. So successful was this stunt that Sanders reports some of the mothers requested the head stamped on pillow tops to be embroidered for their kids. Another highlight was a Temple impersonation contest.

Newspaper Readers Invited To Choose "Arden" Lead

Contest sponsored by Warner Brothers to determine what player shall get the part of "Jane Arden," will start September 19th in approximately 150 dailies throughout the country. Papers participating in the contest, which will run for eight days, will daily publish a picture of a candidate, all of whom are under contract to Warners.

Readers will be asked to cast their votes indicating their selection through their local paper figuring in the arrangement. Papers involved in the stunt have a combined circulation of more than 40,000,000.

"Let's Hear From You"

Bryan's Local Newsreel

William Bryan, Manos Theatre, Vandergrift, Pa., is another theatreman to get out his own local newsreel. Taken with a 16 mm. camera and backed up with a public address system and microphone, it is given a real newsreel touch. Bryan does the editing himself and the reel runs 16 minutes. To offset financial cost, manager takes shots of several merchant windows which are also plugged over the mike. Bryan reports that the stunt has met with such wide approval, that he has reservations from merchants for several newsreels in advance.

Mauch Twins Make Personal

Will Osborne, Warner's Huntington Park Theatre, Huntington Park, Cal., reports that through the efforts of his assistant, Sam Lyon, a personal appearance of the Mauch Twins was arranged in connection with opening of "Penrod's Double Trouble." Parade was held and twins welcomed from the stage by the Mayor, boys autographed photographs for patrons. Osborne reports the personal appearance as being one of the most successful stunts put over for some time. Newspapers cooperated with stories and art work and also represented in the parade were American Legion Post veterans and three troops of Boy Scouts.

MGM's latest motorized traveling exhibit, this time in the interest of "Marie Antoinette" takes the form of a marionette theatre on wheels visiting theatres in all parts of the country. Mounted on a handsome sound equipped truck with a 16-foot stage and curtain, covering a glass enclosed stage, the marionettes themselves are exact likenesses of the Hollywood stars in the picture. Their voices are those of the stars played on a sound track as the puppets go through the motions of scenes from the picture. Bally is covering all key spots in the country, the show put on in various spots by local theatremen playing the date.

The Providence, R. I., engagement was personally supervised by Manager Ed McBride of Loew's Theatre. On the outskirts of the city escort of state police picked up the caravan proceeding to city limits, here by special command of the Governor, the motorized Providence police escort took charge and headed it for the State Capitol. Governor consented to innumerable photographs with the marionettes.

McBride put over a very unusual campaign by having the exhibit taken up on the sidewalk and stationed directly in front of the City Hall. Glass front of the motorized theatre some 32 feet in length was visible for a block away. So well did the idea go over, reports McBride, that the puppeteers were allowed to remain at the City Hall until their departure from the City, during which time, four complete shows were given.

Aeronautical Background Stressed in "Sky Giant"

George C. Lewis, Rialto, Peoria, Ill., tied in on the airplane and flight background of "Sky Giant" through a unique ballyhoo consisting of flyer who covered the streets with parachute equipment and placards to the effect that he had just bailed out to see, etc.

In a vacant window near the theatre, Lewis arranged a miniature airport, with background of picture posters. Street trailer ballyhoo with a wing on a float was another stunt, wing having considerable depth and within were heads of the stars. Flooded with 300 10-watt incandescent lights at night, the upper part of the float was made transparent.

Lobby shadow box and pole cards processed by the theatre art department were also used. Lewis contacted all local clubs interested in flying including the National Aeronautical Association, with direct mail literature descriptive of the picture.

Plants Sunday Broadcast

Since his house is not open on Sundays, Maddy Wallace, Forsyth, Winston-Salem, N. C., has arranged for a weekly broadcast on that day. Running for a half hour, program issues from stage with talent, bands, singers, etc., furnished by the radio station. Admission is free and Wallace during the program manages to get in all his advertising plugs on current attractions in addition to keeping his house in the public eye.

JULY CONTEST CAMPAIGN ENTRIES COVER WIDESPREAD EXPLOITATIONS

Many Ideas Employed by Prize Winners in Entries for the All-Expense Trips Offered for Best Summer Campaigns

Effective advertising and exploitation of every practical nature was employed by the winners in the July-August contest. From their campaigns some of the highlights have been selected and set down here briefly.

In Baltimore, Billy Saxton for the date on "Algiers" at Loew's Century featured a long distance interview with Hedy Lamarr in Hollywood by a group of local critics, columnists and radio commentators. Stunt was preceded by screening and actual interview took place at Variety Club, where star was interrogated in turn by each of the guests, loud speaker attachment making it possible for all assembled to hear the interview.

Life-size cutout of Hedy Lamarr was made on a large sheet of beaver board, surrounded by stills and attractive art. This was taken out on the streets of the city and women were invited to step through the cutout. Those fitting the dimensions of Miss Lamarr were awarded guest tickets to see the picture. This attracted crowds of hundreds wherever it was placed. Another effective tiein was made with Greyhound Bus wherein giant banner was hung on each side of super-bus, copy tying in along lines of "see exciting places in a Greyhound, see 'Algiers' at" etc., etc. Bus worked three days ahead of opening and through the date. After premiere, public was invited to ride bus, free of charge, to theatre.

Top publicity tieins were 17 day review contests with one paper and anagram contest with another.

Sells "Wonderful Time" As Buildup for City

Since Michigan City, Ind., is a resort center, with some 2,000 summer homes lining the beaches, it was Harry Rubin's idea that "Having Wonderful Time" should be used in community buildup. In conjunction with the showing of the picture at the Tivoli at that spot, Rubin reports the campaign as so successful that it is intended something similar be done in the future as an annual event.

Harry explained the idea at a Chamber of Commerce meeting attended by local newspaper publishers and leading merchants. The immediate result was a four page section, all publicity and ads tied to the title. Highlights of the city's vacation attractions were stressed and every co-op ad either mentioned the title or carried further advertising for the date. Featured was a special co-op page wherein guest tickets were given to the best 25 answers, readers filling in blanks in a story referring to a shopping trip around town, the blanks representing various stores. Extra copies of the paper were distributed to every home in the beach area.

In addition Chamber of Commerce put out window cards, imprinted auto stickers and special stamp containing the title for all outgoing mail. As a further aid every participating merchant allowed Rubin to imprint shopping bags with theatre copy and of course made much of the tiein with elaborate window displays.

CONTEST CAMPAIGNS ELIGIBLE FOR AWARDS

Whether or not entries in the Summer Contest have won prizes, all campaigns start from scratch as concerns Awards judging.*

To start his street campaign, Rubin promoted an auto parade with new models from the local Plymouth dealer, with each car bannered. Arrows were used along the main roads, title strip placed on back of every seat in the theatre and for beach bally, Rubin had a squad of bathing girls carrying back banners ballying the date on the beaches and also used a sail boat with title and date prominently imprinted.

Wide Coverage Indicated On Collier "Cowboy" Campaign

Utilizing every possible angle to publicize his date on "Cowboy from Brooklyn" at the Stanley, Baltimore, Rodney Collier arranged tieup with local bowling alleys planting one sheets explaining special contest whereby passes were given away to the leading bowlers each week. Sheets also plugged current and forthcoming attractions.

Radio angles included spot announcements over Station WFBR on their program "Trailing the Stars," which is broadcast each Sunday morning. Special mention of opening was also secured on fashion program. Foyer display was placed in theatre week ahead of opening and during run was transferred to window of leading store.

Tieup was effected with five and ten whereby theatre received special window display plugging the song hits in addition to credit cards to theatre and picture copy. Tieup was also made with department store, special counters in music department carrying cards announcing playdates. Counter cards and posters were displayed by every newsstand and dealer in Baltimore in conjunction with the screen test tieup with Picture Play Magazine.

Taxi cab fleet carried cards plugging the picture ahead and during run, cards illuminated at night. One sheets were planted in leading hotels, window cards planted in strategic spots about town and newspapers devoted considerable space to readers.

Williams Organizes Journeys To Home of "Limberlost" Author

The fact that Gene Stratton Porter was a Hoosier was recognized immediately by Rex Williams in his campaign for "Romance of the Limberlost" at the Hoosier, Whiting, Ind., the theatreman promoting a newspaper contest with prizes of four free trips to the author's birthplace. Entrants were invited to write no more than 100 words, letters on "Why I would like to visit the Limberlost" and for this purpose, official entry blanks were printed. Booklets describing the Limberlost area and its well-known beauties were distributed to waiting patrons, also placed on reading tables in libraries, etc.

Winners were transported to the vacation spot in a swank limousine which Rex had bannered with explanatory copy, and which also publicized the date and theatre.

Best of William's theatre stunts was what he termed a Hollywood Mock Premiere opening. All the necessary properties were employed to put over the event, such as flood lights, broadcast, cameramen, celebrities, etc. Not the least of the attractions were the local boys and girls chosen to impersonate and make up as prominent stars. In costume these were brought to the theatre in individual limousines and interviewed in the lobby broadcast.

Aerial bombs touched off at three minute intervals, signaled the start of the affair and Williams welcomed the crowds gathered for the premiere before introducing the master of ceremonies who took over. Done in all seriousness among those who broadcast were the Mayor, in addition to the glamour stars, the Ritz Brothers as hillbillies, The Lone Ranger, Zazu Pitts, Joan Davis and Bobby Breen, etc., did their stuff. It so happened that William Powell's double was visiting locally and was prevailed upon to make an appearance.

Among other ideas put over by Rex was the importation of drinking water from the Limberlost Spring placed in lobby for convenience of patrons, spin wheel for guest tickets, exhibition of Gene Stratton Porter first editions, original drawings and photos of the author's family. The theatreman also appeared before various clubs and organizations.

Unique Poster Displays Mark "Professor" Drive

In the interests of "Professor Beware," at the Dunkin, Cushing, Okla., Manager J. P. Shipley employed a number of out of the ordinary billboard displays, one in particular being a 24-stand about a mile from the business section. This was lettered with the date, title and star, the last two letters of Lloyd's merely outlined and not filled in. A dummy dressed as a sign painter upon a painter's scaffold was constructed as if he were completing the lettering. Lighting was supplied by promoted reflectors and highway light to the effect that many comments were heard regarding the painter who worked all night. Dummy gag was worked for six days ahead when lettering was completed.

Another street attractor proved to be a barrel idea wherein three boys on a truck with nine freshly painted oil drums drove to various parts of town, where the drums would be unloaded and a set of surveyor instruments used to level off the street while crowds gathered. The drums would then be

Opening of New Theatre Given Sock Campaign

"Name the Theatre" contest was the highlight of Francis Gooch's campaign for the opening of the new M & P Uptown Theatre in Bath, Maine. Conducted in cooperating newspaper, a $25 cash prize was offered for the best suited name. This netted space on front and inside pages in addition to editorials, paper furnishing all photos and cuts used in the publicity.

Week ahead a free two-column by three-inch ad appeared in each issue of the paper calling the attention of readers to the supplement which would appear in Sunday's edition. Opening day a single-column front-page story was given. Complete four-page supplement, entirely free to theatre, carried two pages of "welcome" ads from local merchants and contractors on the job. Other two pages included straight publicity and advertising about the theatre, its executives, opening attractions and congratulatory messages from prominents.

Issues Souvenir Program

Sixteen-page souvenir program with line drawing of theatre front as cover illustration was presented to first 2,000 patrons. Entire cost was met by paid ads. Program carried message to patrons from Gooch, another page introduced members of the staff, others included policy setup, double-page layout of first week's attractions and photos of the owner, district manager and manager.

Through cooperation of the State in Portland, another M. & P. house, street broadcast was held. To persons giving correct answer to question on what big event was taking place in Bath that day, guest tickets were awarded. Radio audience was informed of the theatre opening, and other questions appertaining to the theatre were worked in.

Managers of all the different Uptown Theatres in the United States and Canada were contacted by letter well in advance of opening and solicited for congratulatory letters to the manager for his choice of the same name as their theatres. These letters were made the basis of an attractive display in lobby together with wires from the Governor, Mayor and other state officials.

Ties Picture to Opening Of Will Rogers Highway

With the local celebration in full swing for the opening of the new Will Rogers Memorial Highway there, Bill Smith, Capitol Theatre, Amarillo, Texas, booked in "Life Begins at 40," picture starring the late comedian. To get in on the celebration, Bill had a special trailer made up for the Chamber of Commerce advertising cuts on presentation of "Old Southwest Days" tying in copy that the public should see the picture.

When it was announced that the Chamber had secured the services of Tex Ritter, the theatreman immediately contacted star and arrangements were made for a personal appearance on stage opening night. In addition Ritter was appointed to the Governor's staff as honorary colonel, the commission was presented to him at the theatre.

Miniature size star cutouts were placed in box-office in advance and in dress shop window cooperating on display.

Hot Springs Business Men Found Eager to Cooperate

by W. CLYDE SMITH
City Manager, Malco Theatres,
Hot Springs, Ark.

Anyone in the employ of a major theatre circuit, which depends largely on the ingenuity and aggressiveness of its individual manpower for successful operation, has an edge for profitable theatre operation—first through the reflected knowledge of his superiors, department heads skilled through years of training in their particular field and second through actual experience in varied assignments which most circuit managers are privileged to fill.

To me, one of the most important and possibly the most interesting lesson I have learned in the few years' experience I have had with Malco is the fact that operation in one locality may be a success while a similar manner of operation in another city may be a total failure. This applies to nearly every phase and department of the theatre—exploitation, advertising, booking, personnel and operation. Of course, there are certain basic principles that should be adhered to in all instances. A manager should try to make himself and his theatre a vital part of the community, his house staff should be well trained, courteous and efficient, and his theatre should be well maintained and kept spic and span no matter where the theatre is located. It is the application of these basic principles wherein the variations ensue.

Ads Determine Exploitation

It is in exploitation and advertising, however, that we see the greatest necessity for making our manner of operation suit the locality in which the theatre is situated. Some towns are inherently enthusiastic, both in merchandising and in public spirit, while others are conservative and slow moving and each must be handled accordingly. I have discovered, too, that the spirit of a town is reflected in the advertising copy used by department stores, grocery stores, drug firms and the like. Whenever you see a newspaper chock full of large ad spreads carrying sensational copy—whether it refers to groceries, clothes, or furniture—you can bet your hat that that particular town will respond to high pressure salesmanship and ballyhoo. If, on the other hand, you find ad layouts that are dignified and conservative, you'll probably discover that this town is no place to try to set the woods on fire in exploitation.

It is an old saying that "it pays to advertise"—yet it is the lifeline of the motion picture industry and thousands are employed for this specific task of what we term "putting over" a picture. In my particular case, Hot Springs is a resort town, where I must depend on the visitors for a large percentage of my business. I have naturally turned my attention to the best possible contact to bring these people to my theatres. In selling

M-G-M PRESENTS LION CUBS TO ZOO

Called the son and daughter of Leo, the MGM lion, were the two cubs presented to the Taronga Park Zoo, Sydney, Australia, now on exhibition daily alongside of a poster board in the den, a cable from Leo himself advising the youngsters to comport themselves in a mannerly fashion. "Always be good lions and worthy of the greatest lion of us all—the symbol of the British Empire," read the cable.

Much smart publicity was garnered in the presentation broadcast from the lions' den and from other sources, under the supervision of N. Bernard Freeman, MGM general manager in Australia.

your pictures in a resort town I have found that you have five principal mediums to fall back on. This, of course, only applies to the usual campaign. They are in the following order of importance:

Trailers, Fronts and Lobbies, Outdoor Advertising, Newspapers and Advertising Direct by mail and radio. (Please remember that I have ranked these in accordance with a resort town exploitation.)

Trailers. I list first because of the efficient way in which they tell your story of coming attractions and, as your patron must know, remember the old Chinese proverb, "that a picture is worth 10,000 words."

Lobbies and Fronts. I list lobbies and fronts second because of the central location of my theatres where thousands of visitors pass each day. It is, therefore, important that these fronts should be wide in variety, color and easy to catch the eye. After all, the main task is to get your patrons to stop and look around. Your attractions should do the rest. Personally, in a resort town, I am of the opinion that your theatre itself is one of your biggest selling points. A visitor in a strange city is unconsciously drawn where friendliness and hospitality prevails, therefore, to capitalize on this fact every employee is instructed to be extremely polite, friendly and courteous. Another reason for ranking Front and Lobby second only to Trailers is the fact that my own house is centrally located and on Central—the one street of Hot Springs—and every visitor and native must pass it.

Doubles Summer Posting

Outdoor Advertising, which I rank third here, might be placed at the top of the list during the hot summer months when tourist, visitors, and home-folk alike are seeking cool entertainment, such as swimming, boating, and open-air entertainment. In this period I double my outdoor advertising, shooting home every possible chance the fact that my theatres are air-conditioned, where in cool comfort, one may view the finest motion pictures industry has to offer. On every main highway leading into the city I have erected 24-sheet stands, posting my attractions weekly. A portion of this stand I devote to air-condition copy. All tourist camps, swimming pools, lake shore taverns and hotels are posted with my attractions weekly and again emphasize that air-conditioned comfort will prevail. These same places receive every week the regular theatre program which carries the entire next week's pictures and dates. Our weekly house organ, "The Movie News" (details of which will be found in the January 22 issue of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD), also are distributed to these points.

Direct Mail Important

Newspaper Advertising, of course, the classification of newspaper advertising must be judged by local conditions. In most places it would be ranked first, but in my own situation I rank it fourth as most visitors read their own hometown papers, overlooking the local paper.

Direct Mail, I list fifth, however. This should depend to a great extent on the circulation of the local newspapers. Personally, I use the theatre program and our own Movie News for personal contact, due to the larger distribution that these means afford me. Our "Trade Industry Coverage" is adequately taken care of by our Movie News which is distributed every week through the Arkansas Gazette (Arkansas' most widely read newspaper). The news is inserted in the papers that reach within a radius of fifty miles of Hot Springs.

Radio varies in classification. In some situations it ranks higher than others. In Hot Springs, although we have the largest station in Arkansas I do not rate it a high medium of advertising in selling our numerous visitors.

All Merchants Cooperate

Here in Hot Springs, world famed health resort, every merchant and business man is active 100 per cent in cooperating with the Chamber of Commerce in selling Hot Springs to the peoples of the world. Here everyone appreciates the value of cooperation in selling his products. Hence, the numerous theatre tie-ups we have been able to make in selling our pictures. Last year the theatre in cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce promoted two special Mail-It-Away editions of 72 pages, 25,000 of which were mailed to various parts of the world. This is now an annual affair to further exploit the greatest health resort in the world—and in doing this I am ever increasing the theatre attendance in Hot Springs, Arkansas.

Largest Elephant Sells "Professor" for Shipley

placed alongside the curbing and changed around until attention was keen. Then the drums were quickly stacked, and a sign attached reading: "Not one barrel of fun but nine when Harold Lloyd," etc., etc. A further unique billboard idea was worked with a series of Veedol 24-stands featuring a large pair of spectacles similar to Lloyd's. Securing permission to change the copy, Shipley covered the boards with picture copy, a streamer above the specs and theatre credits in the lens space.

When Jumbo, called the largest animated animal in the world, passed through town on the way to the World's Fair, Shipley arranged to have the mechanical pachyderm bannered to advertise the picture a week ahead. Traffic was at a standstill while the animation was on the streets, twice a day. Among the theatre decorations were upside down clinging cutouts of Lloyd suspended from the marquee, etc.

Other effective slants were children's costume parade, distribution of promoted cigarettes, college dean's party in the foyer, properly decorated refreshments served, house staff in cap and gown, stickers on all fan magazines, trick newspaper ads and a number of contests.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

MARKET FOR FOREIGN FILMS TRIPLES IN U. S.; 200 HOUSES FOR 100 FILMS

Increase in Number of Subjects Available Parallels Total of Theatres Available for Showing Them; Titles Listed

Importers of foreign pictures, encouraged by the increasing number of outlets for their product, will release in the United States approximately three times as many films this season as they did last year. Between 75 and 100 foreign pictures will be made available during the fall and winter as compared to about 27 last season, for showing in about 200 theatres.

The increase in the number of pictures to be released matches the rise in the number of theatres available for foreign product, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last April. There has been a permanent but variable market for foreign product in the United States since 1930, but the greatest increase in interest in films produced in other countries has been recorded during the last three years.

A similar survey this week by Motion Picture Daily revealed the theatre total as being four times as great as it was in 1935, now totaling some 200 houses.

Market Developed

The market for foreign language pictures has developed from the occasional importation of an "artistic" production for exhibition in so-called art theatres to a highly competitive business. Whereas, formerly foreign product played chiefly in districts inhabited by persons speaking a foreign language, the market has been widened by the success of such films as "Mayerling." This picture, in addition to playing in houses catering to French audiences, also was exhibited in metropolitan circuit theatres.

The greatest impetus from the success of "Mayerling" was given to French productions. Before the ascendance of French product, German films were the most successful imports.

"The reason is simple," Max Goldberg, head of Gallic Films, said. "You could put German pictures in many more spots because there are more people who understand German in this country than any other language. In New York alone there are 600,000 people familiar enough with the German language to enjoy a German picture. The Jewish portion of that group has withdrawn its support from German pictures and consequently the German picture is on the decline."

Home with More Product

Among those who have recently returned from Europe with film deals are the Brandt Brothers and E. I. Lopert of Pax Films. John E. Otterson, former president of Paramount, announced that on his recent trip abroad he purchased the American rights to 25 pictures for Interallied Pictures Corporation.

New York City, with 30 theatres showing imports regularly, is considered the best foreign picture market. Ranked as second best is the West Coast. Proof of this is found in the report of a second circuit to open on the coast soon for foreign product exclusively. This will give the coast nine art theatres as outlets.

The production code seal of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America was obtained for 41 films last year but it is a recognized fact that many other films were imported.

EUROPEAN FILM EXPENDITURES

Germany spent $22,500,000 on film production in 1937; France, $11,125,000 and Italy, $8,250,000, according to the League of Nations Motion Picture Bureau, as reported in the London press.

Julian Levy, working with John Tapernoux in reorganization of French Motion Picture Corporation, reported his company imported 34 films last season, of which 17 have not been released as yet. World Pictures Corporation plans to release four English, five Austrian, and nine French films, in addition to six short subjects featuring world famous concert artists.

J. H. Hoffberg, Inc., American distributor of the Irish picture, "Kathleen," is handling more different language films than any other company. The schedule includes four American exploitation pictures, two French productions, four Irish, two Yiddish, six Polish, five Italian and two Dutch, all with English titles. Danubia Pictures, Inc., handling Hungarian language features and short subjects, has lined up seven new features for the 1938-39 season.

More Technicolor Pictures

WILL BE RELEASED DURING THE NEXT 12 MONTHS THAN EVER BEFORE

The box office appeal of Technicolor features is realized to the fullest extent when they are shown with snow white projection light—the natural light for showing natural color photography. Get full profit value from these coming features. Keep your patrons from drifting to other theaters where obsolete, low intensity projection, with its yellow tinted light, has already been replaced by modern, high intensity lamps.

Simplified High Intensity projection gives the snow white light which shows Technicolor at its best. It gives two to three times as much screen light as low intensity, at little or no increase in operating cost. Increased patronage soon makes up the modest investment required.

Ask your dealer to give you definite figures on the economy, low cost, and profit possibilities of this modern projection light.

SPECTACULAR DECORATION WITH LIGHT

■ Decorating with light achieves some spectacular expression in the new Cine Presidente Roca in Buenos Aires, Argentina's capital. With auditorium surfaces principally of tinted plaster in great sweeping expanses, spots, stripes and veritable bursts of light are relied on almost entirely for aesthetic values. The auditorium ceiling gives the effect of being suspended, owing to the coves which separate it from the walls, creating a cornice of light. Running down the center of ceiling, coves on either side of reflecting bands throw them in relief. The proscenium arch is ringed with light from sources concealed behind moulding borders, while the soffit of the balcony opens up into a great flower petal bathed with light from coves at the scalloped, modeled rim. This auditorium is further distinguished by having 950 of its 1,800 seats in the balcony. The Cine Presidente Roca is owned and operated by Clemente Lococo, who heads one of the largest circuits operating in the Argentine Republic. The architect was Alberto Bourdon.

OPENING OF 2 MORE NEWSREEL THEATRES BRINGS TOTAL TO 11

WITH THE opening September 8, of the Penn Newsreel theatre in New York City, and of the first Trans-Lux theatre in Boston, on September 9, the total number of American theatres exclusively or pre-eminently presenting newsreels, was brought to eleven.

All but four of these houses are located in New York. A newsreel theatre was included in the construction of the union railroad station in Cincinnati, completed several years ago, but soon after opening it changed to a feature picture policy. Similarly, the 500-seat theatre opened last year by Alfred Gottesman in Miami, Fla., as a newsreel house, was changed to one regularly presenting full-length features.

While the Trans-Lux theatres include various short subjects on their programs, only two, both in New York, present features, and in every Trans-Lux situation all of the newsreels are shown and featured in billing and program makeup. Besides the New York and Boston houses, there is a Trans-Lux theatre in Boston and in Philadelphia. All use rear projection except that at 49th and Broadway, New York, which was built by B. S. Moss originally as a feature theatre.

Newsreel Theatres, Inc., operators of the Newsreel theatre (formerly the Embassy) in Times Square, New York, also operate a similar house in Newark, N. J., and are constructing another at 72d Street and Broadway, New York, for opening late in September.

The new Penn theatre places newsreel houses in or near both of New York's great railroad terminals. The Grand Central theatre is located in the station, just off the main concourse. The Penn is on 34th Street across from the Pennsylvania station. It is operated by Penn Newsreel Theatres, Inc., principals of which are Stanley Heller, William Klein and Joseph Steiner. (Pictures of the Penn appear on page 20.)

FIVE NEW DRIVE-IN THEATRES ADDED IN '38; MORE PLANNED

FIVE OPEN-AIR, automobile-parking, see-the-movies-through-a-windshield theatres, commonly known as drive-in theatres, got under way during the past summer, bringing the total number of such innovations in the technique of motion picture exhibition to eleven.

Five more are already projected for opening next spring.

Despite the decided increase in the number of these unique establishments, which brought a distinctly motor-age touch to the airdrome type of motion picture theatre with the opening of the first one outside Camden, N. J., in 1933, they still are too few to be regarded as the source of summer competition to regular theatres that some exhibitors anticipated.

In a survey just completed by Better Theatres, the opinion among theatre and exchange men of key cities throughout the United States was that few situations were favorable to the operation of drive-in theatres. These opinions were based on local climatic conditions and the prevalence of insects, while in some areas it was felt that the citizenry just wouldn't "go for the idea."

The drive-in theatres added in 1938 were located on highways near Detroit and Cleveland, where they were operated by Philip Smith of Boston; near Washington (Mount Vernon) and Miami, operated by E. M. Loew; and at Valley Stream, Long Island, suburban to New York.

The latter theatre is the first drive-in in the New York metropolitan area. It was built by the Chanin Theatres Corporation of New York, for Sunrise Auto Theatres, Inc., headed by Max Rothstein of Boston. Opened in August, it is expected to operate until November 1, and to reopen April 15, 1939. Two shows are given nightly, with admission at 35 cents per person.

The Valley Stream drive-in has a screen image 65 feet wide, but the image width of drive-ins is usually about 50 feet. Like all of the theatres of this type, with elevated ramps, the Valley Stream estab-

Occupying twelve acres, it accommodates 650 cars. The ramp system (see accompanying story) follows a patented scheme of elevations and driveways, providing for seven or eight rows of cars on radially curving elevations having a depth of 45 feet and each 9 inches above the other. The Valley Stream drive-in also follows the usual method of placing the sound system speakers above the screen. Projection equipment is housed in a wooden structure just ahead of the first ramp.

ishment is constructed according to a method patented by Park-In Theatres, Inc., of Camden, which built and operated the first drive-in theatre. The company is headed by R. M. Hollingshead, Jr., who is associated with his father in the "Whiz" auto products business. This summer the Camden establishment was discontinued, its equipment being removed to a new parking theatre at Union, N. J.

The original ramp scheme provided for about 500 cars, but modifications in the ramp formation, relying entirely on ground grading and eliminating all wood construction, have increased the capacity for the same lineal area to 650.

In addition to the theatres named, there are similar theatres at Weymouth and Shrewsbury, Mass., near Boston, both operated by Thomas DiMaura; near Providence, R. I., operated by E. M. Loew and Peter Laudati; near Lynn, Mass., operated by E. M. Loew; and two in the Los Angeles metropolitan area, operated by California Drive-In Theatres, Inc.

The latter operator expects to open a third theatre in the Los Angeles area next spring. The other drive-ins projected for opening next spring will be located near Philadelphia, Cleveland and Detroit, and on Long Island. Still another may be constructed near Phoenix, Ariz., by K. C. Hooker and C. M. Clark of Phoenix.

EMOTIONAL REACTION HELD CORRECT KEY TO SOUND VOLUME

EMOTIONAL reaction to sound on the part of the theatre audience is the correct key to a useful interpretation of decibel readings, in the view of Paramount engineers now offering theatres gratis advice on tuning up their sound equipment for exhibition of Paramount's "Spawn of the North." To obtain the maximum audience effect, these engineers, headed by Loren L. Ryder, Paramount director of recording, specify a minimum volume range of 30 db. above noise level in noisy theatres, 40 db. above noise in average auditoriums, and a 50 db. margin in houses that are exceptionally quiet.

These figures, and other recommendations offered by Mr. Ryder's staff in the course of personal inspections of theatres requesting their service—Mr. Ryder was interviewed at the Paramount home office in New York while East in connection with the inspections—are not based on theory but on trial showings in West Coast theatres to test projection room requirements for obtaining the full benefit of new methods of recording. "Spawn of the North" was shown before an average audience in a theatre where the sound resources met the specifications now recommended to all exhibitors, and in another equipped only according to average present-day sound standards.

Comparative Audience Reaction

In the first case, it was found that the audience remained motionless during the iceberg sequence of the picture and for a considerable time thereafter; the other audience was less enthralled. As a result of such investigations, Mr. Ryder became convinced that the real advantages of modern recording can be reaped only by theatres whose equipment fully meets the current Academy specifications for sound, with preferably a 3 db. excess volume range above those standards.

Smaller theatres in particular, he said, should cling as closely as possible to the upper limit of the Academy recommendations for volume range. Inducing theatres to adopt and hold such standards, in order to give the public the benefit of recent heavy investments in new recording technique, appeared to Mr. Ryder to be an industry problem, and by approval of Adolph Zukor the services of the Paramount technicians are made available to all theatres within their range of travel, regardless of the theatre ownership or bookings.

In testing the dramatic effectiveness of sound systems whose owners have requested such service, the Paramount men rely primarily not on frequency reels and measuring instruments, but on selected sequences of a current release with which they are thoroughly familiar. A reel of "Spawn of the North" is used at present. If the engineer's trained hearing finds the emotional results less satisfactory than he has heard under ideal conditions, the sound equipment is inspected to turn up its shortcomings. In the course of this inspection frequency film gain runs may be used, or if acoustic difficulties are involved, microphone pressure measurements may be made in the auditorium. The Paramount representative then recommends the indicated improvements, without specifying any particular make of equipment or accessories. If the theatre is one receiving sound service, a special arrangement with the servicing organization is used to transmit the recommendations to the regular sound engineer, who follows through on the details.

Sees Two-Way Horns Continuing Best

Mr. Ryder favors two-way speaker systems wherever they are not already installed, believing that no further improvement in theatre speakers can be expected in the next five years, and that the exhibitor will therefore obtain the maximum benefit of economy as well as of sound quality by installing current speaker models at the present time.

The recommended changes, when made, will be applicable to all product of all studios as a result of the new standardization of recording methods, and the completed theatre adjustments can be considered final for an indefinite period of time. Even the volume control setting is left unchanged except to compensate for variations in attendance, all cueing for dramatic effect having been put into the picture at the studio.

The current staff of traveling sound inspectors are Al Knox, William Thayer and Charles Daily. In the course of their rounds these men will also collect data on general "field" troubles, and more especially on inconsistency in prints, poor intelligibility, and faults that can be remedied in production and distribution.

The Staggered Seating Plan For Improvement of Sightlines

Auditorium of the Yale theatre in Houston, Tex., with center bank of seats arranged on stagger plan. See drawings on following page.

● New interest is being taken in methods of attaining unobstructed vision. Here one such method is discussed both as to principles and as applied

By GEORGE SCHUTZ

THE IMPORTANCE of having proper viewing conditions in the motion picture auditorium has been receiving more and more notice. A number of the more recently constructed theatres give evidence of the new attention being given this factor. The Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers early last summer issued a statement which went so far as to disapprove of any "noticeable and unpleasant obstruction of the screen view of one patron by other normally seated patrons, no matter where seated."

Practice has permitted conditions requiring spectators to look between the heads of those in the row in front, and over the heads of those two rows in front, giving the so-called "second-row vision." This allowance of course necessitates in many cases, an uncomfortable posture and adjustment to heads and shoulders in front, when they are shifted or when the dramatic action is at various parts of the screen.

Elimination of objectionable screen area obstruction caused by persons seated immediately in front of the viewer can be achieved rather readily. Seating arrangements and floor slopes which permit completely unobstructed vision, so-called "first-row vision," have been frequently cited during the past year or so. One theatre architect, Ben Schlanger of New York, who has made many studies of the problem, lists such arrangements as follows:

Ways to Improve Auditorium Vision

1. A floor sloping sufficiently downward toward the screen. "This system," he comments, "requires hazardous aisle slopes except in theatres having twenty rows of seats or less, and results in excessive structure heights; in the case of upper levels, excessive stepping results in difficult access and poor seating position in relation to the screen."

2. A modified downward pitch used in conjunction with staggered seating. This method, he adds, also causes needlessly excessive stepping heights in upper levels.

3. A combination of downward and upward slope further reducing pitch.

4. A combination of downward and upward slope with staggered seating, resulting in a minimum departure from the horizontal.

The Stagger Plan in Interstate Theatres

The increasing interest in seating plans which can conveniently and economically improve vision is notably indicated by the action of the Interstate circuit in Texas. This circuit has used the staggered seating plan, to some degree, in thirteen of its houses, of which the Yale theatre is discussed here as being typical of the schemes used in the group. The Yale plan was worked out by R. J. O'Donnell of Interstate, Houston & Smith, the architects; and the International Seat Corporation, which seated this theatre. The arrangement of the staggered seating, which is confined to the center bank of the main floor, is described in connection with accompanying drawings of the floor plan and longitudinal section. The method is essen-

PLAN OF THE SEATING OF THE YALE THEATRE IN HOUSTON, TEXAS

The drawings above show the floor plan and a longitudinal section of the Yale theatre in Houston, Tex. The seating scheme is indicated in the former. It will be noted that a line drawn from the center bank or in the front half of the side banks, will pass through the arm block division of the seats of the row ahead if directly drawn to a point in the center of the screen. This means that patrons in such seats are assured of vision without obstruction by any head immediately in front.

The arrangement may be described further as follows: Starting with the first row at the rear of the auditorium, one less chair was used on this row, and one less in every second row forward. The intermediate row has one more chair than the alternate row. The first row at the rear begins with the aisle chairs set in from the aisle one-half chair width. On the next row ahead of this row, the seating begins at the aisle line. This places the first person ahead one-half chair width to one side or the other of the person behind, and the latter views the screen through unobstructed space. The patron seated in a chair of corresponding row position to one seated two rows ahead, is in line with that person, but looks over the latter's head because of the two-row distance.

It has been observed at the Yale theatre that the plan has the effect of speeding up incoming and outgoing traffic and that vacant seats are more readily located. The short space between the aisle seats, in rows having one more chair, and the aisle carpet itself definitely establishes the aisle line and there has been observed no tendency among patrons to become confused and bump into these chairs.

The longitudinal section shows the floor slope, although it has a total drop of about 5 feet, to be essentially the same as those of theatres having conventional types of slopes. The only improvement in vision comes in this case from the staggering of the seats in alternate rows of the center bank.

tially the second one cited by Mr. Schlanger.

While the staggered seating and floor slope employed in the Yale theatre allow for completely unobstructed sightlines for the main floor seating, the floor incline and screen position adopted has necessitated a rather steep balcony (see longitudinal section), and as a result, considerable height of total structure. (It may be noted here that a similar stagger plan is used in the Atrium theatre in Budapest, Hungary, and will also be employed in a theatre now being constructed in Hampden, Conn. Section drawings of these theatres show use also of a combined downward and upward slope permitting a moderate balcony rise.)

An important feature to be noted in the Yale theatre seating plan is the use of staggered rows only in the center bank. This is because seats in the side banks, although placed directly behind each other, form a stagger effect due to the angle that these side rows subtend to the screen. This angle diminishes however, as the last row is approached, which advises some stagger here also.

Loss of Seats Relatively Small

The use of staggered seating only where vision conditions dictate it, reduces the number of seats lost by this system. The loss would amount to only about fifteen or twenty seats in a theatre having approximately 30 rows.

Regarding audience reaction to the staggered seating in the theatres of the Interstate circuit, Mr. O'Donnell has told the writer that it has justified their adoption of the method.

"To our way of thinking," he said, "it has been most successful. The only comments we have received from patrons have been highly favorable."

The Interstate theatres in which seating is staggered are the Village, Tower and Lakewood in Dallas; the State in Amarillo; the Tower and Yale in Houston; the Martini in Galveston; the Grand in Paris; the Palace and Parkway in Fort Worth; the Waco in Waco; and the State and Varsity in Austin.

SOBER SHOWMANSHIP IN HONEYMOON LANE

Reporting something of the varied career of A. Charles Hayman in showbusiness, and his ideas concerning it

A. CHARLES HAYMAN and the motion picture industry have literally grown up together. It might be safely added they have grown into wise and prosperous institutions together.

A. (for Adam) Charles has obviously become an institution among theatre men in Western New York. As president of LaHay, Inc., he owns and operates two houses in Niagara Falls, the New Cataract House and the Strand, as well as the first-run Lafayette in Buffalo.

Back of these highly profitable ventures is a lifetime spent as a showman—in all the branches of activity covered by that word. Hayman was born in New York City 53 years ago, and at 15 started an apprenticeship with what he calls "a modest East Side nickelodeon."

From there, he graduated to a "magic lantern" company operating out of East Orange, N. J. His duties included washing and pressing the bed sheet on which the company projected its slides whenever it had a club or social gathering assignment.

Around 1904 he put on knickers, pulled the peak of a checkered cap half-way down his spine and became a cameraman for Biograph. He moved then in the professional sphere of D. W. Griffith, Flora Finch, John Bunny and Mabel Normand.

And then he turned actor! That was before most of the honeymooners holding hands in his theatres today were born. Never a matinee idol, however. He played a villain's role in "The Great Train Robbery," one of the earliest and best horse operas—iron horse, in this historical instance.

How historical, Actor Hayman of course could not know. "The Great Train Robbery" was the first application of the motion picture camera to narration. It may be cited as the beginning of the photoplay—it started the nickelodeon era, for this Edison "super" of its day, photographed in Essex Park, N. J., was the luridly billed attraction of the first theatre called Nickelodeon, opened in Pittsburgh by John P. Harris (now the Harris circuit) in 1905.

When his colleagues revived the epic at a party in his honor recently, Mr. Hayman recalled, "The company had to make a dozen retakes or so in that picture because the dummy tossed out of the window wouldn't behave." He spent much of the rest of the night denying he had been the dummy.

Not long after the flight in nickelodeon drama, young Hayman opened a film exchange in New York. He had Adolf Zukor as one of his first customers.

It was in 1921 that he turned to exhibiting, with a theatre in Yonkers. He successively operated theatres in New Rochelle and Elmira, N. Y., when he went to Niagara Falls. He specialized in turning shaky properties into profitable investments and in keeping abreast of the latest developments in equipment. He's still doing it.

For instance, he took over the bankrupt

Lafayette theatre in downtown Buffalo in 1930. There were four other first-run houses there, all belonging to the Shea Theatres Corporation. This industrial city was as hard-hit by the Depression as any other. Hayman thoroughly remodeled his new house, contracted for the products of Columbia, Universal and Gaumont-British, set his admission price at a straight 25c and opened for business. He scored an instant success, and it's still going on. This year he completed the rebuilding of his Niagara Falls Cataract House into a gorgeously modern cinema. For it he ordered auditorium seats veritably of loge width (appreciated by the honeymooners, you can bet) and spaced wide enough to permit passing without the trouble of bringing the newlyweds to their feet. Of course this cost much precious space.

Some of his experiments have laid sizeable eggs. When he was air-conditioning the Lafayette a few years ago, he squinted out of his office window at Lake Erie lying practically in Buffalo's lap, and he decided to dig artesian wells. He had to give the idea up after his diggers had spent several thousand dollars, hit rock, sand, shale, clay and everything but water. Not yet convinced, he tried the same thing in Niagara Falls. Hasn't hit water in paying quantities yet.

Long ago, Charles Hayman saw the motion picture theatre as a place for popular entertainment at low prices. Before 1929, he was saying that "popular prices must prevail to bring patrons."

Remembering his own beginnings, and being plumpishly jolly besides, Hayman maintains a fatherly attitude towards his employees. He lists among his favorite golf companions George Mackenna, manager of the Lafayette, who once worked for him as an usher.—J. B. Braner.

NEW THEATER SEAT INVENTION

Magnificent new Esquire Theater, located in Chicago's exclusive Gold Coast section, is completely equipped with new Kroehler seats. Opened by H. & E. Balaban Corp., Feb. 16, 1938. Architect—PEREIRA & PEREIRA, Chicago

Here's the Most Revolutionary Theater Improvement of Last 100 Years

Here is absolutely the first theater seat ever designed for the constant turnover of the movie theaters. The amazing new Kroehler Theater Seating System eliminates standing to let others pass. Patrons can enter or leave a row without annoyance to others. This means not only an increased box office because of added comfort, but also faster peak-day turnovers, because patrons will not hesitate to enter or leave in the middle of a picture.

Retracts for Passing — No Waste

The new Kroehler seating system makes a phenomenal gain in passing space with no waste floor space. It's all in the simple retraction of the seat.

The occupant merely places his feet under the seat and gives a slight thrust. The action is instinctive. Instantly and noiselessly, the seat (the seat standard does not move) moves back on its emplacement, providing ample passing space without the occupant rising. When the occupant relaxes, the seat automatically returns to normal position.

This action takes place without disturbing the occupant behind.

Easily Installed on Old Emplacements

The new Kroehler seating system can be easily and quickly installed in old

READ WHAT HARRY BALABAN SAYS:

"Before purchasing theater chairs for our new Esquire Theater on the Gold Coast in Chicago, we made a very careful investigation. We finally purchased the new Kroehler seating system, which in our opinion revolutionizes the theater chair business, because of the 'push-back' feature which eliminates standing to let others pass. We and our customers are very well pleased with them, and the convenience and ease of operation is even beyond our expectations."

Modernism in AMERICAN Theatre Styling

- Displaying in theatres of various classes and locations architectural and decorative devices which are being widely used in cinema design in the United States today

WHAT THE AMERICAN theatre owner wants when he asks the designer for something modern (and of course he almost always does, these days), is definite only in a general way, as the pictures accompany this brief summary indicate. That is to say that modernism, at least in the United States and quite similarly in Canada, embraces a great variety of decorative devices which may have little or no relationship to the original and perhaps basic idea of modern design—function. Such considerations as the latter are, however, of little significance in the practical affairs of most motion picture theatres. What the exhibitor wants is a theatre

■ M. E. Comerford has been operating motion picture theatres in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., since 1907, when he opened the Bijou Dream, a typical nickel-odeon. In August he opened the new Comerford, one of the most elaborate of motion picture theatres built in recent years in any city. The theatre has a frontage of 50 feet from which lobby and foyer area leads deep into the block, encircling the auditorium and reaching several levels. The auditorium, which seats approximately 1,800, is 90 feet wide. The facade (pictured above) is colorfully done in fired tile, with bronze and cast steel ornamentation. The main foyer (a section of which is shown at right) rises to a height well above a mezzanine balcony, and from the ceiling is suspended a massive, though slender, chandelier. Walls are finished in faience and ornamental plaster, with panels here and there of metal cloth. Illumination throughout the theatres is by fixtures, which take on a variety of types (all for direct lighting) and forms in modern patterns executed in glass and metal.

that is attractive in an up-to-date manner. Certain forms have become characteristic of what the public understands as modern, even though they frequently represent a method essentially no different from that of the rococo now so emphatically thought obsolete, and modernism in the theatre (and elsewhere, for that matter) tends to be measured largely by the presence of such superficial forms.

These have probably been developed in greater variety for the theatre than for other types of buildings. A reason for this may be cited in a word—showmanship. Though modernism has generally meant simplification (stripping of non-essentials, “streamlining”) of form, the theatre operator, in the average community, is still convinced that prominent, colorful embellishment provides the kind of atmosphere that helps to bring patrons to his theatre.

The simpler treatments are not uncommon, however, with the furnishings relied on for color and a feeling of luxuriousness.

The decorative forms have not only dictated the selection of materials, but the newer, “modern” materials have suggested many of the forms. Boards and tiles of wood and other fibres lend themselves to sweeping bands and panels, with chromium for joint mouldings. Some of these are suggested by acoustic requirements, while considerations of sound have also led to widespread use of fabric decoratively, laid over rock wool. Structural and architectural glass, phenolic materials, and for the more economical jobs, porcelain-enamelled metal plates have suggested colorful effects in bold geometric patterns, luminous panels, and so on.

While function, as<sup>o</sup> pointed out, is not an essential characteristic of the modernistic scheme as generally employed, it often exerts an influence, principally through ventilation and lighting. Outlets of duct systems frequently suggest contrasting bands at cornices, ceiling steppings, ceiling baffles of a decorative nature. Built-in devices for indirect lighting, and specific types of surfaces for reflecting light, introduce forms of aesthetic significance in themselves.

Realization of the value of light as a decorative medium is indeed an outstanding development of the modern theatre treatment. Its application in manners emphasizing decorative values are shown throughout these pages.

■ The Liberty theatre in Ellensburg, Wash., is an excellent example of the establishment of modern-styled, well equipped theatres in typical American small towns dissociated from any metropolitan area. Ellensburg, which has a population of only 5,000, is a county seat located 125 miles from Seattle, in a rich farming region. The town has two other theatres. The Liberty belongs to the Inland Theatres circuit, headed by Frederick Mercy, Sr. It was designed by Bjarne Moe, Seattle architect. The auditorium (pictured at upper left) has plum-colored damask along the side and rear walls, laid over rock wool acoustic treatment. The color scheme is in pastel shades of peach, brown, blue and purple. Illumination is by chromium semi-indirect fixtures. The front relies for its architectural effect principally on the massing of concrete forms, partially fluted, around the entrance. The marquee is also of concrete and not only blends with the rest of the facade, but participates in the formation of the vestibule. A 50-foot vertical sign, with neon lighting, is located for visibility from three directions. Entrance is through a lobby into a foyer (below) at each end of which is a staircase leading to a mezzanine level on which, at opposite sides, are men's and women's lounges. Plaster, painted in pastel shades, is the finish.

LUXURY THROUGH COLOR IN LIGHTING AND SURFACES

■ Saenger's Paramount theatre in Jackson, Miss., has a facade (above) of architectural concrete supporting a porcelain enamelled sign painted white, with red trim. Extending from the free part of the sign is a corrugated iron member, painted white, shaped so as to provide coves for lamps lighting its own "fluted" surfaces. Channel sign letters contain triple lamping operated on twinkle flasher circuits. The marquee soffit is also the vestibule ceiling and contains Alzak reflectors set flush, each with a 150-watt lamp and a bordering ring of 10-watt lamps. R. W. Neff was the architect, J. T. Knight, Jr., the designing and supervising engineer. . . . Below, the Hegewisch theatre in Chicago similarly presents a massing of modern forms, but employing a colorful treatment in burgundy, cream and black Lustron porcelain enamel. Designer: Roy B. Blass.

Translucent glass brick, in colors, and illuminated from behind, will be prominently used in the facade of the Warner theatre in Wilmington, Del., now under construction. The sketch above is a rendering of the front design. Wallace E. Hance is the architect, with David Supowitz as consultant. The entrance scheme calls for unification of box office and marquee architecturally by having the marquee soffit emanate, fan-shape, from the box office. Stainless steel will be used liberally throughout.

Above is sketch of the auditorium of the Warner in Wilmington, designed in the colorful "shadow box" style employed in many of the newer Warner houses, with fabric over rock wool on the side walls, and plaster forms in different planes, painting and fabric of colors receding from dark to light toward the rear. Lighting will be an encircling ceiling cove (which will also carry the air outlets), with automatic three-color lighting.

ECONOMICAL DEVICES FOR AUDITORIUM ILLUMINATION

The Paramount in Jackson, Miss., has auditorium illumination provided by a tier of light pockets behind ornamental grillework, and transverse ceiling troughs carrying lumiline lamps in three colors, each on motor-controlled dimmer. These troughs may be relamped from an attic catwalk.

All illumination in the auditorium of the Algonquin theatre in Manasquan, N. J., owned and operated by Lee W. Newberry, is from narrow metal troughs suspended from the ceiling. Troughs are painted the color of the reddish-brown hard plaster walls; the ceiling is painted dull white.

A single, decoratively treated light trough plus a few wall fixtures supplies light to the auditorium of the Empire theatre in Montreal.

Although designed for operation on a subsequent-run policy, at extremely low admission prices (it is located on a side street of the main business section), the Forum theatre in Akron, Ohio, nevertheless well illustrates the "luxury idea" of treatment for which its designer, John Eberson of New York, is celebrated. The interior is colorfully done in blending shades of blue, dark red and pink, with touches of silver and light tones. The auditorium walls are covered in fabric throughout, over rock wool as far as the forward exits. The fabric forms panels between painted plaster pilasters. Auditorium ceiling, of hard plaster, is elaborately stenciled. The mezzanine lounge (center picture above) has tinted plaster walls except where Salubra paper extends up and across the ceiling. The facade is inexpensively done in brick laid two directions to form panels. The Forum is operated by Skirball Brothers of Cleveland.

MODERNIZATION OF TWO FRONTS

■ Before-and-after views of the Wilmer & Vincent circuit's State theatre in Altoona, Pa., showing the radical change wrought by remodeling of the entrance area. Display case and box office bases are of wine-colored Carrara glass; doors, mouldings and display cases are of aluminum. The marquee, painted green with red trim, carries green neon at cornices and gold neon bordering Adler silhouette-letter attraction boards. The front name sign and vertical sign have trim lighting in green with red neon letter outlining, operated on flashers. All decorative pieces, are of stainless steel. An unbroken line of neon extends from top of vertical sign across marquee to top of the box office.

DEFT USE OF MOULDINGS AND LIGHTING IN LOUNGES

■ Basically a simple treatment, but with tasteful introduction of ornamental elements, is shown in the lounges of the Lido theatre in Los Angeles, designed by C. A. Balch, and operated by Pacific States Theatres. Walls and ceilings are of light-tinted plaster and left plain except for a deft use of mouldings and placement of brilliant light sources.

Auditorium of the San Marco theatre in South Jacksonville, Fla., one of the newest of the theatres in the building program of Sparks Enterprises. The walls and ceiling are of Celotex in two tones, tan and cream, in a panel formation. Contrasting with these neutral colors are red and green, which are used in both drapes and carpeting. The ceiling is also finished in Celotex boards, the darker tone used merely for directional stripes and cornice figures. The San Marco seats 500 on one floor.

A DEPARTMENT OF PRACTICAL COUNSEL AND TIMELY INFORMATION ON THEATRE MANAGEMENT, MAINTENANCE AND MECHANICAL FACILITIES

[Technical descriptions of products of specific manufacturers appear in this department without distinction between projection and other functions]

How to Plan Your Lighting Scheme

3. ILLUMINATION FOR THE FRONT

● The third of a series of articles offering, in addition to general counsel, specifications suitable to typical conditions of modern motion picture theatres

By FRANCIS M. FALGE

THE FEATURES which a modern front should possess to give it maximum attraction and advertising value are well established and are here restated to arrive better at the most effective and economical front:

1. It should attract attention from afar.
2. It should stand out by contrast with surrounding displays because of its brightness and color.
3. It should create a favorable impression by pleasing design.
4. It should have movement and sparkle.
5. The name of the theatre should be clearly legible from all strategic points.

6. It should sell the theatre and its program and meet the competition of its surroundings.

7. Changeable attraction letters should unmistakably "bulletin" the presentation.

8. The underside of the marquee should be bright and sparkling, leading customers right up to the "box-office."

Today there is a wealth of new materials, new light sources and new lighting methods to inspire new concepts in architectural design; to put new appeal and attraction value into the modern front. For sparkle and scintillation the lighting designer now has at his disposal durable lustrous reflecting materials. He has a wide range of translucent materials, marbles, plastics, new glasses, glass block, rods, tubes and moulded forms, in a wide range of colors. In new light sources he has available new types of incandescent lamps including the new projector lamps and reflector and lamp combinations, new electric discharge lamps, including the newest fluorescent lamps which are available in a wide range of colors and with color values never before approached. The combination of all of these new forms provides unlimited flexibility and enables the designer to create houses that have new beauty and magnetic attraction. Let us see how they can best be woven into our model front to make it outstanding.

Influence of the Location

The location of the theatre plays an important part in planning its electrical advertising. Distance to strategic traffic points should decide the size of letters to be used. These same distances as well as the traffic flow determines the placement of luminous surfaces. Surrounding brightness and color determines the brightness of the signs, the size of lamps used and their color.

The sketch indicates the location of the theatre which is used for this presentation. As will be noted it has an important traffic center 1200 feet down the minor street to the right. Surrounding brightness is average for the main street in a small city having many surrounding signs in red. Letter height for legibility at 1200 feet is as follows:

$$H \text{ (in feet)} = \frac{\text{Greatest viewing distance (1200)}}{500} = 2.4 \text{ ft.}$$

For good advertising value letter height should be approximately twice this figure.

By further reference to recognized design procedure [Sign Design Sheet of the General Electric Nela Park Engineering Department] it is determined that 25-watt lamps will be adequate for advertising value at the maximum distance. Spacing of lamps is determined by the minimum viewing distance according to the following formula:

$$S \text{ (in feet)} = \frac{1,000}{\text{Shortest viewing distance (in feet)}}$$

In the case of a theatre front, people view the signs at very close proximity and it is desirable that the bulbs be placed approximately 1/4-inch apart; never in excess of 4 inches is desirable. Because of the close lamp spacing a somewhat lower wattage may be used; in this case 15 watts. If reflector adaptors are used 10-watt lamps should be satisfactory; reflectors should be mounted flush with the letter faces. A small channel about 1 inch high will aid close viewing.

The name sign may be of the vertical type, preferably applied as an integral part of the building, or it may be incorporated as a part of the marquee of the building. In either case a short name has advantages such as permitting the use of luminous letters with individuality.

Specifications for Front Illumination

IN THE CASE of the theatre chosen for discussion it is decided to provide an individual effect by placing the name sign on the parapet at the top of the building, thereby enabling easy mounting and maintenance of the letters. Glass faced letters are planned, and each letter a deep box with a flashed opal glass front. The letter strokes are then formed by the use of opaque metal.

The boxes may be adequately deep for economical lamping, in this case a 16-inch depth is planned. This permits placing 36-inch green fluorescent lamps on 15-inch centers to provide a satisfactory brightness of 150 footlamberts. An alternative recommendation in this case is to use incandescent lamps also placed on 15-inch centers.

Emphasizing the Size

Any theatre benefits by an illumination scheme which gives full emphasis to the size of the front. In the case of our imaginary theatre this is accomplished by tying in the "name" sign to the marquee by bands of polished corrugated metal (chrome or nickel on copper). Bands of color are provided by lamps concealed in the silhouette strips. Alternate 36-inch fluorescent lamps and A-bulb lamps are suggested using green fluorescent lamps alternated with yellow incandescent.

Marquee and Attraction Boards

The marquee and attraction signs are the next to meet the eye and have important functions. A lesser function of a marquee is to act as a rain protector; therefore it is decided to give emphasis to the attraction letter signs to provide better readability at off angles, and to lengthen the advertising copy by angling the ends of the marquee to form a trapezoidal shape, as indicated.

In keeping with the modern spirit expressed throughout the theatre it is decided to use silhouette changeable copy, thereby permitting the use of various sizes of letters on the same supporting frames. Although it is common procedure to accept the handicap of a minimum depth of cavity behind the glass, it is decided here to use a deeper cavity in order to permit more efficient lamping. The 14-inch cavity allows placing lamps 12 inches from the glass (by laying them on their sides against the background). It is desirable to space lamps the same distance apart as the filaments are from the glass, in this case 12 inches. To provide adequate brightness of 220 footlamberts [Illumination design data of General Electric's Nela Park Engineering Department] 40-watt lamps are used. However, 25-watt lamps may prove satisfactory for this location.

For an attraction border, closely spaced flush mounted reflector adaptors are suggested. Six-watt lamps will provide adequate brightness and by the use of the colored roundels color combinations can be readily changed. A solid green line would harmonize well with the other illumination; another possibility is to use two gold reflectors separating groups of four or five green.

The Marquee Soffit

The focal point of all advertising is the box-office beneath the marquee. From down the street this area should appear bright and sparkling. Once beneath it, the brightness provides a forceful appeal, a warm invitation to enter. The most popular method of lighting the marquee ceiling is to stud it with quantities of small exposed lamps.

As an alternative to this arrangement it is proposed to use a combination of reflector adaptors and the new daylight fluorescent lamps. Ten-watt reflector adaptors inch to 6-inch centers, smooth, readily identified lines of light are produced and these have been so organized as to provide a directive force toward the box offices and the entrance.

The daylight fluorescent lamps aid with this directive force and also provide the additional advantages of:

High efficiency, 4 times that of the small lamps.

An attractive and distinctive daylight quality of light.

Freedom from heat, especially of the radiant type. Thirty-six inch lamps are suggested because they require but one accessory and therefore cost a minimum per foot.

The combination fluorescent daylight and reflector adaptor lines carry into the outer lobby as indicated in the sketch terminating in a polished or preferably mirrored surface so as to aid the appearance of length. At the outer pilasters near the ceiling a corrugated metal treatment similar to the building front pilasters is indicated.

The box-office also harmonizes with a streamlined corrugated metal treatment to pick up the light from overhead. Above the windows are small signs either of the silhouette or edglighted type.

Reporting New Developments in Equipment and Its Use

Reflector with Diffusing Roundel

A NEW TYPE of reflector, employing small-wattage lamps and with a decorative as well as light-diffusing roundel, has been developed by Climax Reflector, Inc., of Canton, Ohio. This model, with a roundel definitely bowed and more projecting than the same company's previous type designed for such applications as vertical sign and marquee trim lighting, is available in two diameters,  $2\frac{3}{8}$  and  $3\frac{1}{16}$  inches.

For the former size, reflectors are available with candelabra to medium base adapters for standard sockets and using 3- to 6-watt S6 Mazda lamps, or 7-watt "Nite-Lite" lamps. The same reflector with intermediate to medium base adapters employs 6- and 10-watt S11 Mazda lamps. Either type provides wide-angle viewing.

The larger reflector is available with candelabra to intermediate to medium base adapters and using the same lamp combinations as the smaller model.

On the basis of tests made by the General Electric Nela Park laboratories, these reflectors increase light intensity by several hundred percent by directing and concentrating the light. The roundels and reflector rim are notched for attaching the roundels without the use of snap rings.

Toilet Shelf for Purse, Gloves, Etc.

A SPECIAL SHELF for attachment inside the door of toilet compartments has been developed by the Superior Locker Company of Chicago. The shelf provides a convenient place for gloves, purse or other small objects, and includes space for advertising announcements. The advertising is exposed by lowering the shelf, since it is this action that locks the compartment door.

No article can be left behind, inasmuch as the shelf must be hinged back to vertical position before the door will open. The construction is such that any small rubbish left on the shelf drops to the floor when the door is opened, avoiding untidiness. The shelf is distributed in the theatre field by National Theatre Supply Company.

Incandescent Lamps of Reflector Type

A TYPE OF incandescent lamp which includes a reflector and lens and thus combines within a single sealed unit the elements required for controlled lighting, has been brought out by both General Electric and Westinghouse. It is designed for a variety of indoor and outdoor applications where projected light or floodlighting is used.

The "projector lamp," as the new unit is called, embodies a pressed glass reflector and a light-redirecting cover lens as part of a funnel-shaped glass bulb. It is available with two types of cover lenses, one giving a wide-spread beam for general floodlighting, the other providing a powerful narrow beam for spotlighting applications.

Using a 150-watt filament of the new high-efficiency type, this light source employs a medium screw base that fits the conventional socket. Constructed of special, heat-resisting glass, the bulb permits tight fusion of its reflector element and cover lens. Sealed in hermetically, the silvery, mirror-type reflecting surface inside the bulb is protected against dust, dirt, moisture and corroding fumes. The lamp has a rated life of 1,000 hours. Both the reflector and pre-focused filament are permanently fixed in place in manufacture.

The cover lens is frosted on the inside, diffusing the light and reducing the chance for grease, grime and other light-absorbing

In its application to the theatre, the projector lamp is especially adapted to the illumination of displays. Prismatic lenses for changing the beam pattern, and also color lenses are available.

Acoustic Device Added to "Mikes"

THE ADDITION of acoustic compensators to low-priced microphones has been announced by the Amperite Company of New York. Hitherto available only with the higher-priced Amperite units, the compensator functions as a shutter, progressively closing the rear of microphone, according to the adjustment chosen. The device can thus be set for either close or distant pickup, and simultaneously permits a considerable degree of compensation for unfavorable acoustic conditions, acoustic feedback and other common handicaps encountered in microphone operation. The new microphones come equipped with cable connector and on-off switch.

16-mm. Projector With Arc Lighting

A NEW MODEL 16 mm. sound projector with arc light source has been brought out by the Ampro Corporation of Chicago.

The equipment includes a full-wave rectifier that supplies 30 amperes at 28 volts to the lamp. Carbon feed is automatic, providing one hour of uninterrupted illumination. There is a manual dowser, and an automatic safety device that disconnects the power source when the lamphouse door is opened.

The projector stand is collapsible, with swivel attachment and downward tilt that can be set to as much as 25°. The projector accommodates reels up to 1,600 feet. It is equipped with an automatic safety shutter, centralized lubricating system and facilities for instant interchange of lenses.

The sound amplifier is rated at 40 watts undistorted output, and operates through two permanent magnet speakers mounted in directional baffles.

Disposable Covers

DISPOSAL toilet seat covers which the patron purchases from a coin-operated dispensing machine are offered, with complete servicing, by Sanaphane Inc., of St. Paul, Minn. The device is constructed that when its center portion is dropped into the bowl, the flushing action carries away the entire cover. The makers claim that their material does not clog.

Continuous Type Ad Film Projector

THE CONTINUOUS movement principle has been applied to the mechanism of the equipment brought out by Flo-lite, Inc., of Chicago, for the projection of advertising films in theatre lobbies and elsewhere. The mechanism is housed in a decorative unit containing all the apparatus required. Referring to the picture: A represents the lighting unit; B, the condensing lens; C, the aperture; D, prismatically shaped mirrors on an endless belt; E, the lens system into which the mirrors reflect the film images and cast them on the screen. F indicates the container for the endless film, and G the film sprocket.

Sound Trouble-Shooting Charts

4. SOUND HEAD TROUBLES

• The fourth of a group of practical guides for the projectionist in determining sound fault causes and cures without delay

By AARON NADELL

SOUND HEAD TROUBLES are usually easier to run down than any other equipment fault, for the reason that there are always two heads, and they can be compared, not only as units, but step by step if necessary, through interchanging their component parts.

Wherever in the charts that follow, replacement of any part is prescribed, interchange with the corresponding part of the good projector, (if a spare is not at hand) will serve equally well as a guide to the nature of the trouble. One precaution, however, is needed; namely, a preliminary check of the voltages involved to make sure that the same cause which may have ruined one part will not have a chance to damage two. The present charts are so arranged, that, if they are followed step by step, this cannot happen, except possibly in the case of exciter lamps, for which, however, spares are always available.

The charts are followed from left to right, beginning at the upper left-hand corner. Trouble tests are listed in the left-hand column. The central column indicates the commoner findings likely to follow each test, and the right-hand column tells which test to apply next in view of the results just obtained. Instructions to refer to charts previously printed in this series occur occasionally—they are necessary to avoid almost endless repetition. The order in which the tests follow each other is intended to secure the quickest possible results in all normal circumstances.

By way of example, consider the first test of the No Sound chart that follows: "Observe exciter lamp." Assuming that lamp to be out, the right hand column refers to Test No. 16 as the next step. This calls for installation of a new lamp, which may cure the trouble; but again the new lamp may refuse to light, or may burn out. The right hand column lists appropriate tests in each case. Thus, if the new lamp burns out, the prescription is Test No. 20, referring to further procedures which are similarly traced through an earlier chart of the series and which, on the basis of Tests Nos. 1 and 16, as just made, should logically and in all normal cases turn up the trouble.

The complexities of sound systems, their individual characteristics, and rare troubles that are encountered from time to time obviously make it impossible for any set of general charts to be used literally under all circumstances. This is particularly true of the present installment, since different makes and models of sound equipment vary nowhere more greatly than in the design and construction of their heads, optical scanning systems and photocell coupling circuits.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . .

By F. H. RICHARDSON

REVERSED REELS: VARIED OPINIONS OF PROJECTIONISTS

THE PROPOSAL of W. Lee Beckley, projectionist at the Spencer theatre in Minneapolis, that exchanges issue prints mounted in reverse (submitted in these columns in the July 23rd issue), continues to cause projectionists to take pen in hand in expression of their reaction. The vast majority of letters received are for the scheme, as I indicated in my Comment in the August 20th issue. This time, however, I am going to devote practically all of the space available for the discussion to letters which bring both sides of the question into consideration.

One of the letters does this in itself. It is from J. R. Prater of Palouse, Wash., who apparently is neutral. He writes:

"I am interested in the suggestion made regarding shipment of prints to theatres in reverse. I favor this practice for the reason that it would tend to improve projection by inducing more general inspection of prints before projection. This would not only improve results, but also decrease the fire hazard.

"However, it would give exchanges a better chance to sidestep inspection, passing it along to the projectionist. Also the rewinding which Friend Buckley cites as representing unnecessary wear upon prints, as well as consumption of time and energy, must still be done somewhere along the line.

"Where shipping reels are placed in the lower magazine at last projection, and in the upper magazine at the first showing, at the theatre receiving them next, a single rewinding during exchange inspection is all that is necessary. But if the exchange receives them in reverse and must inspect and ship them to the next theatre in reverse, it must rewind the reels twice, which would impose added work on the exchange inspectors. [How so? If they are received with leader out and must be shipped that way, two rewindings are necessary, are they not?—F. H. R.]

"I would suggest that if such a system be considered for general adoption projectionists use their own reels in lower magazine even for the last run, rewinding the prints to shipping reels afterward, returning all prints to the exchange mounted with with leader on top. This last rewinding is no more inconvenient to projectionists than rewinding between each run, and it eliminates the hazard of using the shipping reels in the projector at all."

Reversed Reels Issued in Cleveland

Still another discussion of this reverse print matter comes from Irl Gordon, projectionist of Akron, Ohio. He writes, "I note your request for discussion of the idea advanced relative to having prints reach the projectionist 'tails up,' so that they might be rewound directly to the house reels during inspection, and be already for use.

"Here in Akron, our local union requested the Cleveland exchange to do that very thing more than a year ago and one of them (Fox) started to do it, enclosing a suitable notice with each equipment. The plan worked out beautifully for a time and the local expressed its appreciation to the exchange. After five months, however, the plan began to peter out and now only occasionally do we receive a print mounted, thus. Once in a while other exchanges send us a reel so mounted, but it is not the general rule.

"I visited the Fox exchange recently and asked why the plan had been discontinued and was told (believe it or not) that they had received many kicks from projectionists who did not favor it. The reason? It seems (again believe it or not) many theatres are operating without even so much as one spare reel, to say nothing of house reels—just the two reels used in the take-up of the two projectors, running off the print to their own reel during first projection and using the shipping reels in projection.

"Arguing that such theatres must be in the minority, and that such a beneficial change should not be scrapped because of their objection, I was assured that facts were otherwise, which, frankly, I do not believe. It seems incredible! Other objections were based upon the fact that projectionists had not examined a print and had threaded it into the projector in reverse. All in all, exchanges assert that they have received more complaints concerning than plan than praise for it.

"Very possibly, those who had, or fancied they had, a kick coming, made it promptly, while those favoring it were too lax to express appreciation. Also, it is possible that exchange practice is dominated by absent swivel chair moguls who have an eye on cost sheets (it may or may not cost the exchange a trifle more, I don't know) and neither know nor care much about projectionists and their problems."

I have little comment to make. It seems hardly conceivable that the change would not be generally beneficial. That it would be more expensive to exchanges I do not believe. That it should be ditched merely because some theatres (minority or majority) object to having a couple of spare reels, or even a full set of house reels, or because some projectionists do not inspect reels upon receiving them from an exchange, and at least know whether the leader or tail piece is on the outside, seems absurd.

And Here's an Emphatic No

However, I have heard directly from a projectionist who does not favor reversed reels. Frank F. Toth, projectionist of the Colonial theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., writes, "Regarding the proposal that reels shipped to theatres by exchanges to be mounted with the tail piece outside, thus necessitating rewind before projection, I vote an emphatic no! After a long time service as projectionist I have yet to encounter a print containing any fault that would cause trouble in projection. Our exchanges are in New Haven and I must compliment them on doing a thorough job of inspection and repair through all the years. I have yet to have my first break at first showing of any print.

"I fully realize the danger involved in attempting the projection of improperly inspected and repaired prints and know it does occur in some places, as others have complained to you, but surely the fault may be remedied by proper action by theatres receiving films from such exchanges. Why cannot projectionists or theatre managers in cities where such abuses occur, get together, appoint a committee to visit the offending exchanges, ascertain where the fault lies and demand correction. Would not that be effective? The practice proposed would throw many exchange workers out of a job, which I am sure you would not wish. Please do not attribute my opposition to the plan to any objection to the work involved in making the pre-projection rewind. That is not the fact."

Usual Conditions Advise Inspection

It is easy to understand that a projectionist who always has received his prints in proper condition for projection may and probably would feel as Brother Toth does. Unfortunately, however, considering the field as whole, the receipt of prints in perfect, or even safe condition for projection, is not as common as he may think. True, many exchanges do quite thoroughly inspect and repair all prints, but unfortunately there still are very many whose inspection is rather casual, with repairs restricted to a splice where the print is very badly mutilated or torn entirely in two.

Then, too, only a relatively small proportion of theatres are in cities where exchanges are located. In fact, most exchanges serve widely scattered localities where only one, two or three theatres exist in any one town, under which condition, unless there be some determined leader, such action as is suggested would be well nigh impossible. Moreover, assuming exchanges to ship prints in perfect condition for projection, but which must travel many miles to their destination, with one or several transfer points en route, at which express men may and often do jam the shipping cases around regardless, what assurance then has the receiving projectionist that those prints have not been damaged, by the impact of the film edges against the reel sides? I personally have examined prints received with as much as 10 feet of the edge of the film bent over flat right through the sprocket holes, the damage unquestionably having been inflicted by abuse in shipment. The possibility of this being always present, how could any projectionist assume the responsibility of projecting without inspection? And if the prints are to be mounted on projection room reels, which is a most excellent precaution, the receipt of leader-outside reels necessitates two rewinds.

Further reference to the 20th Century-Fox exchange in Cleveland comes with an affirmative vote from Carl E. Graham of Canton, Ohio, as follows:

"I read with interest the suggestion made by W. Lee Beckley that exchanges ship prints wound in reverse; also your invitation to projectionists to comment thereon. My own idea is that an orchid should be handed the Cleveland 20th Century-Fox exchange, which has been shipping its prints to theatres mounted in reverse for about two years. Inclosed with each shipment is the following: 'Projectionists Note: This print has been inspected. However, it is delivered to you with the tail end outside. Delivery is made in this manner to assist you in making the changeover from our reels to your own, which co-operation we trust will help you.'

"For years I have waged a 'Battle of Rewinds,' in the hope that exchanges might finally wake up to the fact that film can be inspected while in reverse. So here's to 20th Century-Fox and may Shirley Temple never grow up!"

Now's the Time to Voice Your Opinion

And now let's hear from some more of you men on this matter. Now that the issue is before us, let us give it a good going-over. If reversing reels would tend to improve projection (making inspection more convenient), we should have it. If not, then let's forget it. What's your opinion?

Incidentally, the other day I received a letter from Kenneth R. Caldwell, who was advertising manager of the old Precision Machine Company, now the International Projector Corporation, telling me of a type of film shipping case which he says has been designed to eliminate all possibility of film damage in transit. At any rate, a corporation called the Film Protecto Shipping Case Company, with offices in Buffalo, N. Y., has been formed for its manufacture, and Mr. Caldwell says in part:

"Since the very inception of the motion picture industry one of the problems that has been the most difficult of solution has been that of suitable shipping cases. Due to the extreme manhandling that film cases get, it has been well nigh impossible to design a case that would permit of no damage to film edges when in transit. The cases of today carry film quite safely when the film is properly rewound on the reels but should film be rewound zig-zag and then shipped with several other reels in a single container, damage is bound to result. However, we have succeeded in designing a shipping case wherein film may be loosely or zig-zag rewound and damage to it is impossible. . . ."

I submit this merely as news somewhat pertinent to our present discussion. I know nothing further of the case. Mr. Caldwell has been projectionist in several of the Shea circuit theatres in Buffalo since leaving the projector manufacturing field.

A SCALE TO MEASURE CARBON BURNING TIME

J. R. PRATER, an active "student" in the Motion Picture Herald Bluebook School offers:

"Here is a tip for saving both carbons and embarrassment that may be worth passing on. Carefully measure the exact length of both negative and positive carbon consumed in 20 minutes at the normal amperage used. Measure the length of the shortest stub of each that can be safely burned. From these measurements mark off on a strip of brass an accurate scale, allowing first the necessary stub length, followed by marks for each five minutes of burning time. If positive and negative are consumed at different rates, make a separate scale for each.

"Scales may be made to read the amount of carbon protruding from lamp jaws, or if stubs are finished in carbon savers, to read the entire stub before it is placed in the saver. In any case, the useful life of any stub can be dependably measured in a jiffy, and by watching the length of the succeeding reel or two, every stub can, at an appropriate time, be burned safely to within less than five minutes of its maximum life.

"Carbons are a very considerable item of projection expense. Throwing away stubs with 15 or 20 minutes of good life in them is unnecessary waste. Believe it or not, I have known several projectionists to discard negative stubs having more than an hour of life because the positives burned faster and they thought the carbons had to be purchased in sets! A good raise in salary went in the garbage can every week.

"Also, if negative carbons, especially solid ones, were sharpened to a finer, or at least a more rounded point, it would greatly facilitate burning in new trims. A new negative with a partly used positive is even harder to burn in. Do you suppose the carbon companies would consider this a favor to the fellows who use their product?"

I think the carbon companies would, provided they were convinced that it would be of real benefit.

NOTING A CLEVER PROSCENIUM TREATMENT

WHILE ON a drive through upstate New York and New England recently, dropping in at a few theatres along the way to say hello, I noted a proscenium and screen border treatment that struck my fancy so much I am going to tell you about it.

It was installed in Proctor's theatre in Troy. Proctor's is a large house, seating nearly 2,500. It is managed by Harry G. Black, whose assistant is Jack Picket. The projectionists are Vincent Jamacito and George L. Nugent. My only criticism of projection at this theatre concerns the projection angle, which is all of 26°.

The false proscenium consists of a series of panels forming legs and borders ranging in size from about 24 feet in length to 9 feet in the border. The longest hang on either side of the stage, starting about 4 feet off the stage floor. The panels step off in width and length the largest upstage, the smallest downstage. They hang about 8 inches apart. There are four panels to each section.

The panels are framed pieces covered with velour, each a different shade and especially dyed. The smallest one and the farthest downstage, is deep maroon. The others become lighter and lighter in tone and more of a mauve, the last upstage being an orchid shade.

Directly behind the last panel hangs a velour tab of 100% fullness, dyed an intense blue at the top, blending into deep ultramarine at the bottom. The border of the false proscenium is treated in similar fashion, with five sections of four panels each, with the same color scheme and lighting effects, and backed by a very full velour border dyed to blend with top of the tabs on either side.

On the back of each panel is a metal niche or gutter in which is a continuous border of lumiline lamps tinted a "surprise pink." The border of lamps follows along the bottom and stage end of the panels and reflects upon the panel behind. The lamps are in series with dimmers and give an effect of neon lighting. The whole effect is vibrating and alive, which is especially effective in an auditorium that is almost continuously darkened for projection of pictures.

The house traveler is directly behind the false proscenium. It is of silver swirl velour of 100% fullness. This traveler opens, completely out of sight of the audience, to a working traveler of painted canvas, also hung at 100% fullness, the color scheme of which blends with that of the false proscenium. At the top it starts with the same deep blue, blending downward to a more delicate tone. On this is a lacy, conventionalized tree covered with soft pink and lavender blossom forms. The trunk is Nile green and lavender. Also, there is a silver aluminum hedge starting at a low point at stage right, ending at a high point at stage left. It is sprinkled with diamond dust, which completes the color scheme.

This setting was designed and installed by Miss Mabel Buell of New York.

Over in the Green Mountains of Vermont at Bennington, I met W. C. Morey, manager of the General Starke theatre, which seats 1,000, James T. Harte, projectionist. The latter has been projecting pictures for 18 years. E. Cornell is night projectionist.

The auditorium is lighted very intelligently when the show is on. No glare spots of light to annoy patrons and strain their eyes. The General Starke has Simplex projectors equipped with Strong lamps.

In Wareham, Mass., I called at the Warr theatre, where William Ross is manager and Gilbert Hamilton is projectionist. The Warr seats 579.

In Hartford, Conn., I called at Loew's Poli theatre on the "main stem." Manager J. A. Simons was absent, a chat was enjoyed with his able assistant W. J. Cooper, who reported business as fair, with the Hartford "movie pot" boiling in about the usual manner.

At the Allyn theatre in Hartford I was made warmly welcome by Mr. W. J. Lloyd, the manager, and Charles North, projectionist. Mr. North is business representative of Local 486. He reported everything running smoothly with the Hartford men and the local union. Mr. Lloyd said business was about normal for this time of year.

COIN PHONOGRAPH ADAPTED TO NON-SYNC

ALBERT HEFFERAN, owner and operator of the Lynx theatre in Coopersville, Mich., has sent in pictures of non-sync apparatus which he has rigged up to meet his needs. His accompanying letter explains both the gadget and how it is used in the Lynx theatre.

"This equipment," he writes, "is used between performances and before the show starts at night, and also after the final performance. It really is used a great deal and makes a very nice atmosphere. There are so many theatres now that do not have music before the picture starts, which lack makes a theatre seem dead and very un-theatre-like. Now, for example, when we played "In Old Chicago," we used records of music from the picture.

"I bought a machine of the kind that is placed in restaurants, beer gardens, etc., to play records by dropping a nickel in a slot. I took the machinery out of the cabinet and built a square box for it which fit in under the rewind table.

"I then hooked up this machine with electro magnets for operation by push buttons instead of nickels. There is a push button for each of the ten record holders, which would otherwise be placed in operation by coins. As a button is pressed, the motor spring is released, putting the motor in operation. An arm swings around and carries a record to the turntable as in the case of all nickel phonographs of the type this machinery was taken from. The turntable is run by one motor; another motor operates the arm and jaw that puts the record in place, according to which button has been pressed. A small amplifier is used for the electric pickup. A 14-inch speaker for the non-sync system is placed behind the screen."

In the accompanying picture of the machinery, the part marked A is a meter which "counts" the records as they are played, thus keeping track of which records have been played. The electromagnets installed for push button operation are marked B.

The switchboard is shown in another accompanying picture. The lamp at the top automatically lights when the equipment begins to operate. The center button under the lamp is a rejector button, pushing of which stops the record being played and immediately causes the substitution of another record.

SALEABLE SHOWS MEAN COMPETENT EQUIPMENT

IN REPORTING increases in orders for Simplex sound systems and the new Simplex E-7 projectors, my good friend P. A. McGuire of the International Projector Corporation, adds some comment that in general echoes what has been my contention for years—that the first thing to do in selling motion picture entertainment to the public (after producing reasonably saleable pictures) is to provide the theatre with the kind of projection and sound equipment—and, I might add, the kind of projectionists—that can present the picture at its best.

Referring to the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign now being waged, Mr. McGuire remarks:

"Hollywood is asking theatre owners and managers to show pictures so that patrons hear sound and see the picture as they were recorded. All the work of this great industry is delivered at the theatre in a can, and that is the point where the theatre owner and manager can prove that they are showmen by giving their audiences superior screen presentation. Their part of this important job is to discard old and obsolete equipment whenever possible and to keep their equipment in first-class condition at all times.

"The winning combination is the production of good pictures by Hollywood, good showmanship by the theatre owner and manager, technical knowledge of the projectionist with his realization that he also must be a showman in order that patrons may get the fullest possible enjoyment from the picture. All of this must be supplemented at all times by the use of up-to-date sound and visual equipment."

And I, for one, cannot see how there can be any argument to the contrary. All too often we believe that extra exertion—high pressure—alone can build up business. Perhaps it can do a great deal—certainly showmanship is an essential of our business. But you can't keep on selling what you fail to deliver, and you can't deliver consistently saleable motion picture entertainment when you haven't got equipment equal to the job. In the last analysis, what the theatre has to sell is ground out, on the spot, by the machinery centered in the projection room. The show can be no better than that equipment is.

PROJECTION FACILITIES ON THE "QUEEN MARY"

RECENTLY I had occasion to see a friend off on the Queen Mary, and I took advantage of it to look over facilities of that great ship for the presentation of motion pictures to the passengers. The ship begins each voyage with more than 50,000 feet of film on board. At the time of my visit, there were approximately 57,000 feet ready for use.

A full program of pictures is provided each day for each class of passengers, and each show consists of one feature and two or three shorts. In the event there is not sufficient seating capacity for all desiring to see any one show, the whole is projected a second time.

First- and second-class passengers "go to the movies" in the first cabin lounge. Third class passengers see the show in a "Kinema Room." Pictures for tourist passengers are exhibited in the tourist cabin lounge.

There are no professional projectionists in the crew, the projecting being done by the ship's electricians.

There are a total of eight projectors on board. Seven are 35-mm., one 16-mm. Six of the 35-mm. projectors are in constant use, two in each of the cabin class shows; one is used for special screenings.

The light sources are of the reflector type, though as to their exact type I could not be quite certain. The men in charge did not know the difference between straight high-intensity, reflector type high-intensity, low-intensity, and "suprex." They were sure, however, that 80 amperes were used at the arc.

Time permitted only inspection of the first cabin lounge projection room. While congested ship conditions would permit of no waste of space, still the room was of dimensions permitting the men to work in a fair degree of comfort. It is indeed much more commodious than many theatre projection rooms I have visited. It is thoroughly fireproof, of course. The side of the projector mechanisms traversed by the film was wholly unenclosed; however, this is deemed perfectly safe for the reason that there is a small tank in which is stored carbon dioxide at high pressure, with fuses so located that they will "let go" the instant a blaze reaches either the upper or lower projector mechanism sprocket, and both the upper and lower magazines are flooded with the gas. Not only that, but from eight openings located along the film track between upper and lower magazines, the gas also is released, the effect of which is to smother the blaze and extinguish it.

COPPER LOSSES IN MOTOR-GENERATORS

MY ATTENTION is called to a statement in these columns in the August 20th issue, which did not do justice to the real conditions involved in the installation of motor-generator sets. The correction, for that is what it properly amounts to, comes from an excellent authority on the subject of motor-generators. I am happy to submit the following communication from my good friend John Hertner, president of the Hertner Electric Company of Cleveland, who writes:

"Dear Richardson: I am quite a faithful follower of your department and in the issue at hand I notice a statement under 'Methods of Installing Motor-Generator Sets' that is likely to lead someone astray.

"You state that with an overload, the temperature will rise 'in proportion to the excess current.' It is worse than that. The copper losses increase as the square of the current.

"The copper losses as a whole are often in excess of all other losses when running full load, hence on double load with four times the copper loss, the total would be much more than doubled. In fact, the heat generated in the armature slot, the cause of coil burn-out, is just four times normal."

Modernized in Plan and Style at $54 a Seat

The facade of the remodeled Muller theatre.

- Describing the remodeling of an outmoded theatre building with balcony, to make a larger, single-floor Muller theatre in Omaha

WHILE THE Muller theatre in Omaha, Neb., represents the salvaging of an old, out-moded theatre building by remodeling, it is essentially new in both plan and style. The forward three-fifths of the building, and an adjoining structure housing the heating and cooling equipment, were existing; the rear two-fifths of the present theatre building is new, extending the original building back to the end of the block, where it connects with the structure used for the air-conditioning equipment (see accompanying floor plan).

Facade and interior treatment is new throughout, in a simple modern style. The new Muller (the name was originally spelled Mueller) represents an expenditure of $37,500, exclusive of all equipment except the marquee and stage and cooling equipment. It is owned by Charles and Fritz Muller and is operated by L. P. Grobeck. The architect was H. A. Raapke of Omaha.

Fronting on a shopping street that runs diagonally, and with site conditions requiring straight-line traffic into the auditorium, the plan provides a lobby shape which squares off the remainder of the building, with a pop-corn and candy dispensing room, and stairs to the projection room fitted into the space available at the broader side. Men's and women's lounge and toilet rooms are in the basement, reached by stairs off either side of a foyer which extends across the central portion of the auditorium, though entirely walled off from it.

The old facade was torn down and a new one (see accompanying photographs) was built in stucco, with the principal architectural effect consisting in a central square panel, separated from the remaining area by painted mouldings. The entrance area, extending across this panel beneath a V-shaped marquee, is finished in veined Formica with box office trim and light boxes of flush-set display frames in chromium.

The lobby (as well as the pop-corn room and a "cry-room" off the foyer, with a plate-glass window separating it from the auditorium) is finished in plaster painted canary yellow with cobalt blue trim.

The foyer is finished entirely in knotty-pine sheetrock, and into the wall opposite the entrance is set an ornamental fountain (see detail photograph on page 16). Foyer illumination is by means of small closely-fitted ceiling fixtures.

The auditorium, which originally seated 570, now seats 700. A new floor of cement was laid on the ground with the slope of "reversed" type—the forward portion inclines slightly upward. The three-bank seating plan provides for passages to side emergency exits leading up stairs to ground level. The former theatre had a balcony; all seating is now on one floor. Decoratively, the auditorium is of simple treatment with side walls finished in horizontal panels of natural-colored Celotex board (laid in 4x10-foot units) with joints covered by 2-inch metal mouldings, rear wall in Acousti-Celotex blocks, and the ceiling in two tones of Insulite tiles laid in a checkered pattern. Beneath the side wall panels a concrete wainscoting, in steppings 4 feet high, is painted maroon.

The auditorium is illuminated by lamps in reflector receptacles forming the terminals of certain side-wall panel units. Of the five horizontal panels, each of the lower four has one board splayed out to a total of 9 inches, and into the projecting end the lamp receptacle is set, with half-round dilophane glass cover. Light is directed essentially toward the proscenium. Each receptacle contains six lamps divided equally in three color circuits (see accompanying auditorium views and detail photograph).

The Muller is completely air-conditioned, with mechanical refrigeration. Outlets are along the ceiling cornices on both sides of the auditorium.

Equipment and furnishings of the Muller theatre (including air-conditioning and sound systems) were supplied by the Scott-Ballantyne Company of Omaha. Projectors, however, are Simplex, and the projection lamps Peerless Magnarc.

MAILING TUBES AND WALLBOARD FORM THIS FOYER FIXTURE

An ingenious application of such materials as mailing tubes and wall board to the making of a "modern" lighting fixture is shown in the accompanying drawings and photograph submitted by T. E. McGivney of the Princess theatre in Bristow, Okla. It was designed by Mr. McGivney, who explains its construction as follows:

"This fixture is built from two different-sized mailing tubes. One end knob is fastened permanently (see photo), the other contains an electric light socket. A long slender tube lamp is used (lumiline). The discs (see drawings 2A and 2C) are made from wall board. Putty, Tuxtone, and plastic paint fill the joints.

"Of the drawings, No. 1 is a front view, showing the end knobs. No. 2 is an inside view showing arrangements of socket and lamp—A, a washer-like disc holding inside end of knob "b"; C, a solid disc holding inside end of other knob in place; D, slot in bottom for light to shine through. Drawing No. 3 is a rear view, again showing the light slot "b." No. 4 is an end view, showing bracket for fastening to wall. No. 5 is a cross-section of the center portion, showing position of light slot."

89 INDEPENDENTS SUE B & K AND MAJORS STUDIO GUILDS' DEMANDS JEOPARDIZE ACADEMY

VOL. 132, NO. 13

SEPTEMBER 24, 1938

Entered as second-class matter, January 12, 1931, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Published weekly by Qualex Publishing Co., Inc., at 1270 Sixth Avenue, Rockefeller Center, New York. Subscription prices: $5.00 a year in the American; $10.00 a year foreign. Single copies: 5 cents. All contents copyrighted 1938.

What America needs this week is flood control.

Such crying over "Boys Town."

Exhibitors tell us the folks stay for a second and third cry.

But there's no weeping when the receipts are counted.

Leo is very proud of "Boys Town" because it's a great box-office success that also has won additional friends, new praise for the industry.

Doing sensational business everywhere, topping such hits as "Test Pilot," held over in practically every situation for extra weeks, extra days.

And doing as well in its 2nd week as a normal first week!

Please keep your release schedule very elastic, Mr. Exhibitor, because Leo's on an extended-run rampage: "Marie Antoinette," "Boys Town," "Too Hot To Handle"—one after another.

In fact Mr. Exhibitor here's our tip:

HOLD EVERYTHING!

HOLDING "MARIE"!

Folks who returned to Broadway after Labor Day found the town's biggest hit at the Astor. "Marie Antoinette" is packing 'em in at $2 (fancy) prices, 5th week! On other Broadways it's a happy hold-over at pop prices: 4th week Chicago; 3rd week Detroit, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Salt Lake; 2nd week Portland, Boston (day—date State & Orpheum) St. Louis, Toledo, Columbus, 'Frisco, Atlanta, Denver, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Washington, Louisville, etc., etc.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

'BOYS TOWN' STARTS!

Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney keep 'em coming 3rd week Capitol, N.Y.; 2nd week Atlanta, Reading, Harrisburg, Wilmington, Houston, New Orleans, Omaha, Salt Lake and more hold-overs every minute!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

EYES ON NEWSREEL!

Leo's very proud of the new streamlined issues of his "NEWS OF THE DAY." John B. Kennedy, famed radio voice speeds the news across in "The Front Page"; Bill Stern, N.B.C. sports authority covers "The Sports Page"; and Adelaide Hawley enlivens "The Woman's Page." Snappy newsreel! Largest world-wide coverage. Better than ever!

"Sweetheart of the day!"

WE HAVE JUST SEEN A GREAT PICTURE!

They ought to wire the seats for sound in M-G-M's projection room! If those chairs could talk, what an earful you'd get about the screening of "The Citadel." A great motion picture has come to your midst, gents, and from now until release in November you're going to hear a great deal about it, in the press, on the air, by word-of-mouth. Ten million people have read this best seller of a young doctor's dramatic fight for his ideals, of his surrender to the luxuries of a society doctor's life, of the girl who brought him back to the battle of humanity. Memorable scenes: heroism in the depths of a mine; the birth and almost death of a miner's baby; a society doctor and the women he knows. Powerful, tender, exciting... it's got the mixture that accelerates the box-office! But you'll soon know for yourself. Watch for NATIONWIDE TRADE SCREENINGS OF "THE CITADEL." (A bow to the stars Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell; and to the director, King Vidor.)

TOUCHDOWN, LEO!

A smart idea in shorts. Reviewing 8 gridiron classics of last year so that alumni in every territory will flock to see their college team. It's Pete Smith's "Football Thrills." Another Pete Smith subject "Grid Rules" and Robert Benchley's "How To Watch Football" launch the Fall Season. Book 'em while they're hot! (Aside to Leo, Jr.: "Gee whiz, kid, you sure make swell shorts!")

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

THANKS, KIND SIR!

"A Letter to Leo"

Dear Leo: That man's here again for the 15th time. It's the same story, coming for your product, the only product which spells continued success for me. I am grateful for the years it has been my pleasure to show M-G-M pictures, for they have been years of success, not only financially but also years of cordial and square business relations. Sincerely yours, August 11g, Ohio Theatre, Lorain, Ohio.

KING AND QUEEN OF THE SCREEN!

Leo of M-G-M takes this MOTION PICTURES' GREATEST YEAR campaign very seriously. Here's another for the Big Drive!

"Too Hot To Handle" flamed into fame this week with Clark Gable and Myrna Loy delighting record-breaking openings everywhere. It's topping "Test Pilot." And that's nice topping!

The trade press told you in advance. Those lads know their stuff. (Read the trade papers! Advt.) For instance: Film Daily said: "A smash at the box-office." M. P. Daily said: "Better than any of the stars' six preceding pictures." M. P. Herald: "A natural. Lines in front of the box-office." Daily Variety: "Sure-fire big-money show." Hollywood Reporter: "One of the financial stand-outs of M.P.A.Y.G.E. campaign." Showmen's Trade Review: "Cinch box-office." The Exhibitor: "SRO attraction." Box-Office: "As torrid as its title at the turnstiles."

The only complaint we anticipate is "too many to handle!"

IT ALL HELPS THE BOX-OFFICE!

Screenland's Honor Page for "Marie Antoinette." Few films have received so many tributes. They keep coming!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Here's a line that has become familiar in the trade press.

In fact we're quoting it this time from the PHILADELPHIA EXHIBITOR's review of "Boys Town," as follows:

"M-G-M made the picture, but it is a show of which the whole industry may be proud."

America said that editorially (and at the box-office) about "Marie Antoinette."

They'll say it again about "The Citadel."

M-G-M is the one company that consistently makes pictures "of which the whole industry" may be proud.

How fitting that as Motion Pictures' Greatest Year Campaign sweeps the country with an appraising press giving editorial support, it is M-G-M which delivers pictures of stature to merit such support.

May we be so bold as to say again:

ALWAYS THE LEADER!

PURSUING the CUSTOMER

PERHAPS it is just as well that the screen's "Greatest Year" drive got started when it did.

Now comes the National Retail Demonstration, sponsored by the National Retail Dry Goods Association, with some six thousand member stores, engaged in seeking to tell the consuming public the "significance of retailing."

The retailers' drive started this week with considerable hoopla, with "open house" night hours at stores and with radio fanfare.

If the drive chances to put more people into circulation in the evening show hours it is possible that the retailers of motion pictures may share in the benefits by capturing some of the window shoppers.

Meanwhile one may wonder about the condition of the ultimate consumer, John R. Public and family, with drives to the right and left, in front and behind. And where do the savings banks and their National Thrift Week get off?

The retailers' drive gets the impetus and publicity attention of the United States government through a radio address by Secretary Roper of the Department of Commerce, while the motion picture enjoyed the attentions of the Department of Justice just ahead of the screen drive.

SPEAKING of the strictures of government in and on business, the most forthright expression for the defense of the chain retail system is now coming from the Brothers Hartford of the Great Atlantic and Pacific stores, in large but dispassionate paid space. One of the entertaining aspects of the initial discussion was the remark, with figures, that the Hartfords were personally not nearly as much concerned financially as their workers and their customers. It seems that they get for their own pockets only about six dollars out of every hundred they make. Their suggestion that they did not need even that was, maybe, a delicate inference that capital could strike.

These drives urging the consumer to consume come in curious contrast with the news from Germany. In Monday's New York Times, Mr. Junius Wood recorded the diary of a housewife's week of adventures in the market trying to buy eggs, onions and pork chops—or anything else to eat. Over there you may have each week a half a pound of lard and a half a pound of butter, which is largely whale oil. Over there they are enjoying a fully "planned economy."

It is probably better to live where the stores stay open nights to convince the man in the street that the retailer is his friend—and where the marquee lights insist "Motion Pictures are Your Best Entertainment."

IN an outgiving about "Grand Illusion" and "Edge of the World," Mr. Howard Barnes of the New York Herald Tribune opens with the defensive gesture of "One of the surest ways for a film reviewer to call down the wrath of Hollywood spokesmen is to praise a foreign photoplay. . . . The fact remains that commendation of a French, English or Russian screen drama is construed as a direct slap at our national film industry. . . ."

The case would be better if some specimens of the afore-said "wrath of Hollywood spokesmen" had been attached.

It might be mentioned that commonly, or at least frequently, praise of a certain stripe of imported production has been accompanied by derisive reference to Hollywood's production and its entertainment purpose. Also commonly the Russian offerings winning the special approbation of the radically minded reviewers have been ill-made propaganda ending with a fanfare and a title "The Red Revolution Marches On."

There is a school of screen criticism which considers origin in Hollywood as a guaranty of inferiority to any backyard whimsy with an imported label.

¶ After many patient years your editor has come upon, in the pages of Motion Picture Daily, the substantially perfect news story, reading:

Morton and Herbert Minsky have reopened the old National Winter Garden, original home of Minsky shows, with Soviet films exclusively, for the avowed purpose of raising funds for Loyalist Spain.

Like a well cut gem, anyway you turn it, it glints with the same glow.

NOTES ON A COCKEYED WORLD—While a-gardening in Silvermine the other day, your editor was alarmed to observe a large load of hay thundering past, on a motor truck. Not long after, a tremendous motor van roared by, loaded with horses. Later passed a touring car, filled with polo players. So motoring is not a sport any more. --- From a conclave of scientists in Cambridge, Mass., come tidings, which the New York Times headlines as "Chaos Is Defined by New Calculus; Norbert Weiner Reports Mathematical Control of Utter Confusion". "Looks like he'd be the auditor for the New Deal," we remarked, on the New Canaan Express, to which Mr. Jack Pegler replied, "That fellow Einstein got famous talking to himself." --- Publicity item: New York State is printing new bank checks with pictures of Niagara, Saratoga and Jones Beach. Let's ask the Mint to give us two-bit pieces embossed with "The Motion Picture is Your Best Entertainment". --- Twice this summer a press agent has soberly informed the HERALD that crowds seeking his pictures have broken the doors of a Broadway theatre. We have suppressed the story for the good of the industry. --- Paramount went to Pineville, Mo., for authentic locale for "Jesse James" and had to import mud to make it real. --- The Carrier Corporation is building a manufactured weather demonstration at the New York World's Fair in an igloo to be 70 feet high. What a thrill that would be to Mr. Robert Flaherty's "Nanook". --- That by some expeditionary context reminds one that in the eyes of "Sabu", once the humble elephant boy from deepest India, now acclaimed and feted in the "Drums" promotion in New York, this must indeed be a world of miracle. --- And that in turn makes one wonder what ever became of that pretty Polynesian girl from "Tabu" who came to New York for her hour of glory some years ago? "Reri" was her name.

This Week

War Scare

Concern of the United States film industry over Italy's new decree declaring virtual governmental monopolization of distribution, and the possible effects of war in Europe growing out of the Czechoslovakian crisis, was expressed this week at a series of meetings of American film chiefs in New York and Paris.

A detailed report of developments abroad as they might affect Hollywood's films, together with the official text of the new Italian decree appear on page 13.

On page 15 is a story from Washington giving the insight into what the United States Government has in mind for motion pictures in the event of war, planning widespread use of the screen for publicity and otherwise.

Trade Practice

Allied States in Illinois this week filed an anti-trust action against Balaban and Katz, the Chicago circuit, its parent, Paramount, and the other major distributors. Specifically, the suit was brought under the Clayton Act "against unlawful restraints and monopolies," and seeks to "restrain the defendants from further violations of the anti-trust laws." Some 89 Chicago independent theatres and theatre companies are the plaintiffs, Essaness Circuit and the Silverman interests being the largest among them.

The Government Wednesday announced sending questionnaires to all industries, including the motion picture, asking for information regarding organization, financing, operations and policies for use by the Administration's monopoly investigation committee.

The suit and the events leading up to its filing are described on page 17.

Talent Guild Fight

The Screen Actors', Screen Directors' and Screen Writers' Guilds expressed their feelings against Hollywood's producers in a new form this week when they virtually blocked the reorganization of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. They said they "mistrusted" the presence of the producers in the Academy. The National Labor Relations Board continued its hearings on the Directors' Guild demands that it be named sole bargaining agency for directors, assistant directors and unit managers. The Screen Actors' Guild elected Ralph Morgan to the presidency. Thursday was set for the opening of the Screen Publicists' Guild petition to be named sole bargaining agency for studio publicity writers.

A story containing the developments of the actions of the talent guilds will be found starting on page 21.

Campaign Progress

With national and local campaign staffs devising many more and many unique stimulants for and in behalf of the "Motion Picture's Greatest Year" drive, progress and more progress was reported this week toward increasing box office receipts during the 17 weeks of the campaign.

Details of the week's developments—third week of the drive—are reported on page 31. together with an insight into new plans and programs for the new week.

No "Isms"

The motion picture industry "has no sympathy with Communism, Fascism, Nazism or any 'ism' other than Americanism," Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, declared Monday in Hollywood. Giving the lie to "certain bigots" . . . who whisper that Hollywood is run by "isms," Mr. Warner declared that "we, collectively and as individual studios, are doing much, all that we can do, in fact, to teach the principles of true democracy to the outside world." Mr. Warner's remarks were addressed to 150 guests of the American Legion and other guests at a luncheon at the Warner-First National studio in Burbank.

This and other developments in the industry's share in entertainment of the national convention appear on page 16.

British Campaign

Some of the leading exhibitors and distributors in the United Kingdom enthusiastically favor organization of a movement similar to the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign now underway in the States. Simon Rowson, trade statistician, says that with an outlay of £100,000 ($500,000) the trade's exchequers could be swelled by $25,000,000 a year. Francis Harley, Twentieth Century-Fox executive in Great Britain, advocates formation of a united trade committee, and the British Film Institute says it favors a campaign.

On the other side is a noticeable objection to expenditures. The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has dropped a plan for setting up a trade publicity bureau, on the grounds of expense. There is also the skepticism of a segment of the exhibitor field over joining any movement in which distributors would be participating.

Single Bill Tryouts

With a view to extending single billing, Loew executives are watching the results of new single bill tryouts in several confirmed double bill situations. Beginning this Thursday and Friday, for a week, Loew's will play "Too Hot to Handle" singly at the State, Providence; Palace, Indianapolis; Loew's, Rochester, and State, Louisville. In all of these theatres double billing is the regular policy. "Marie Antoinette" is being booked singly by Loew's circuit, and "You Can't Take It With You" played without support in Louisville and Rochester. "Boys Town" is to be single billed at Loew's Metropolitan, Brooklyn, next week.

Last March Loew's Ziegfeld, New York, inaugurated a policy of single features as an experiment for the Tuesday and Wednesday programs, and this will be continued indefinitely. While grosses have not increased, it is probably due to the fact that the big pictures have been reserved for weekend playdates, according to Loew's. The Ziegfeld is the only Loew house in New York not double billing on a full time basis.

Daylight Saving Over

Daylight saving time, perennially the cause of complaints on the part of theatre owners that attendance is reduced by the artificial ally of the summer call to the out of doors, comes to an end this Sunday, September 25th. It had gone into effect at the end of April in most of the states.

Exhibitor Conventions

Eleven exhibitor meetings have been scheduled in the next six weeks. The meetings are highlighted by the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America October 30th in Oklahoma City. It appeared this week that Edward L. Kuykendall, incumbent, would be drafted for the presidency of the MPTOA at the convention in view of the non-existence of any likely successor. Other changes, however, are expected in the rest of the official slate.

Lasky on Air

Jesse L. Lasky's return to amusement activity is expected shortly, through a radio-motion picture project, the nature of which he has been keeping close as he travels through midwestern key spots in its behalf.

Leaving Detroit, after conferences, he spent Monday and Tuesday in Chicago, returning to New York Wednesday to complete negotiations which he has been conducting there for six weeks.

One thing appears certain: the project will find Mr. Lasky on a major network in a program similar to the Cecil B. DeMille Lux Radio Theatre, with Mr. Lasky also acting in the same master of ceremonies position.

Mr. Lasky, one of motion picture's real pioneers, has of late years been associated with various Hollywood interests in production capacities.

Light in Mexico

The long suspension of Mexican production, resulting from the fight between two important unions for exclusive control of all film workers, is apparently causing restlessness among the labor leaders there, because of the lack of work, James Lockhart, Mexico City correspondent, reports. He says that a settlement of the controversy perhaps in a week, or at least by the end of the month, has been predicted. The prospect pleases producers, since that will enable them to complete production of pictures which were halted by the suspension, but they are dubious about what will happen when these are finished and new production gets under way, he adds.

Shipping to Japan

Large distributors in the United States are understood to be quietly resuming shipment of their films to Japan after a lapse of one year. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount each shipped film last week and others contemplated starting before the end of the month.

Business Holds Up

Federal admission tax collections in August were nearly $194,000 under those of the preceding month. But business throughout the country, with the exception of the metropolitan centers, apparently held up well, it is indicated by figures compiled September 21st by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Total collections for the month were $1,425,063, against $1,618,813 in July, and were approximately $174,000 under the $1,599,242 collected in August of last year.

That business generally held up well is indicated by segregated figures for the third New York district, which disclosed a decline from July considerably in excess of that reported for the nation as a whole. Receipts from the Broadway sector last month were but $282,513, the lowest figure for a long period, and were approximately $399,000 under the July total of $681,445 and nearly $111,000 under the August, 1937, collections of $393,838. In the New York area, declines were shown in all categories, August collections on admissions, including season tickets, being $243,909 against $620,631 in July; free on reduced rate admissions, $324 against $3,420;

Bureau records showed that total admission tax collections for the first eight months of the year were $12,390,638, or nearly $362,000 under the $12,752,344 reported for the corresponding period in 1937.

RKO Stirring

Attention for the RKO Picture Corporation reorganization project and plans became acute this weekend, with prospect as the HERALD went to press that important decisions as to a "design for management" would be made shortly.

The arrival of David Sarnoff, returning from Europe, brought back to the immediate scene the Radio Corporation of America as a party at interest, while there were evidences of special attention from the Rockefeller sector and reports of new consideration of various aspects by Floyd Odlum and his "downtown."

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, on his return, predicted that there would be no control or subsidy of television in the United States, as there is in England, but that the new medium would be developed by private enterprises, as with radio.

Reporting on the advance of television in England, Mr. Sarnoff said that London, with its 10,000,000 population, has 3,000,000 television receivers already installed in homes.

Otterson's Companies

Tri-National Films, Inc., with headquarters in the Fisk Building, New York, was formed this week by John E. Otterson as the operating and distributing subsidiary of Inter-Allied Films, Inc., which was organized last winter to acquire American distribution rights of foreign films.

Mr. Otterson is president of both corporations, and their vice-presidents are Edouard C. Mollinier of Paris and John Sutro of London.

Carroll S. Trowbridge, head of distribution for Tri-National, announced that distribution of the 15 pictures scheduled for 1938-39 will begin in October. One of the first releases will be "La Kermesse Heroique," which received a previous play at "art" houses here as "Carnival in Flanders." Others are "Orange," starring Charles Boyer, and "Peg of Old Drury" with Anna Neagle.

Smith's Plans

Andrew W. Smith, Jr., until recently general sales manager of United Artists, plans to enter exhibition, he said Wednesday as he sailed on the S. S. Queen Mary for a month's vacation in England and the Continent.

Before joining United Artists a year ago Mr. Smith discussed a deal with the Springer estate to take over several houses formerly operated here by the late Jack Springer, New York. He says now, however, that the deal has not been revived, but that he will make definite plans upon his return.

"The Lady and the Cowboy." A wag would here mutter something about the horse-marines. However, Samuel Goldwyn's new production shows the stars, Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon, in a logical enough locale, for "The Lady and the Cowboy" is a comedy-drama of many places. The cost is said to be running around a million, with production uncompleted. H. C. Potter is directing. The picture will be released by United Artists November 1st.

It was announced that RKO Radio's European business as a whole had trebled the amount of the previous year.

Broadway and 47th Street, New York, no matter what this sign says. However, it had a lot of folk momentarily believing in it as Stanley M. Isaacs, borough president of Manhattan, hung it up as part of goings-on publicizing the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign. There were newsreel cameras to attract a crowd and pretty girls galore to hold it. The famous old highway reveled in its Hollywoodian disguise for 45 minutes, then resumed its normal mien (which should provide hoopla enough for anybody).

A. M. Delgado Gomez (below) returned to Venezuela this week after a sojourn in New York concerning distribution in the United States of "El Rompimiento," which he produced and directed. First Spanish-language film produced in Venezuela, it features Rafael Guinand and Graciela Montilla.

INDUSTRY CONCERNED OVER ITALY'S "MONOPOLY" AND WAR SCARE

Leaders Confer in New York and Paris Over Decree at Rome and Threatened Loss of the Czechoslovakia Market

The European war scare, with its possible sweeping involvements, this week brought to the American motion picture industry the realization of the disrupting effects on its business abroad should the antagonisms of the political powers over there burst into cannon-fire.

Already faced with the virtual loss of the Italian market should they refuse to submit to the new Fascist decree giving the Government of Il Duce complete control of all distribution in Italy, distribution and corporate leaders of the industry in New York entered a week of conferences on the entire European situation. Their representatives abroad were concentrated in Paris for the same reasons.

While recognizing that the scenes of the political maneuverings were far removed geographically from home offices in New York, film leaders were concerned over the possible outcome, pointing to the threatening loss of Czechoslovakia alone as a market for at least 180 of their Hollywood films yearly, to say nothing of their business in England, France, Russia, Poland, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Rumania and other countries mentioned by European political observers as likely participants should war spread.

Sharp drops in receipts at theatres in the centers of dispute were reported in New York Wednesday.

The Wall Street Journal said the industry stands to lose indirectly as well as directly through effects on patronage.

However, other than to make a hurried analysis of their business abroad, there was little that could be done by the American executives other than to await developments, although they were wondering what action might be taken in the way of salvage in reciprocal trade agreements now being negotiated by the Department of State with various European countries, including England, and which, Washington believed, would be in jeopardy should war come.

Seek Modification in Italy

With the Italian film development, however, the situation was somewhat different, for the American companies, with receipt in New York of the official decree, had something tangible to work on, and sought a modification formula.

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors in New York had been aware for some time that Italy intended to amend existing quotas on film imports, changing the pact negotiated with the United States on films in 1936, and under "new arrangements" would distribute permits to give Italian producers a better distribution position at the expense of American films.

So it was no surprise when on September 1st Italy failed to assign distribution permits for the final quarter. What no one expected was the bombshell thrown by the Fascists against foreign films last week in the official decree, promulgated secretly the week before, which placed distribution in Italy completely in the hands of the government, requiring the liquidation of American selling branches in Italy.

Press dispatches from Rome previously had

SAYS QUOTAS HURT QUALITY OF FILMS

Quota measures act to lower, rather than improve, the quality of native product, an Argentinian Government representative, appointed to study the effect of film quota legislation on native production in European quota countries, recently reported back.

Since the filing of the report there has been no agitation for quota legislation in the Argentine, according to John Nathan, Paramount managing director for that country, Paraguay and Uruguay. Mr. Nathan arrived in New York Friday for a month's visit at the home office. The Argentine produces 40 to 50 features a year.

Mr. Nathan reported that American film distributors who were accused two years ago of operating in violation of the Argentinian anti-trust laws had just begun to enter their defense. The procedure under Argentinian jurisdiction calls for the complete entering of the case for the prosecution before the defense is called upon to answer in court, he said.

Mr. Nathan said that business in his territory is "good," although there has been but little improvement this year over last.

reported that Italy would denounce the Italian-United States agreement of 1936 and would reduce the quota on American films from 250 to 150 a year. However, United Press later reported from Rome a denial of a slash of 100 permits as issued by Luigi Freddi, director of the films section of the Ministry of Popular Culture, although he admitted that there would be "new arrangements," indicating that a reduction to some extent was contemplated. The original report also stated that American distributors as a whole would be allowed to take out of the country only 10,000,000 lire annually instead of 20,000,000 lire as formerly.

Official Text of Decree

The official text of the new decree, as received in New York this week, follows:

"ARTICLE 1: Monopoly for the acquisition and importation and distribution in Italy, its colonies and possessions of cinematographic films imported from abroad has been established by Royal Decree Law of Sept. 4, 1938, published in the official Gazette of September 13, 1938.

"ARTICLE 2: The monopoly mentioned in the preceding article is entrusted to the ENIC (Government controlled motion picture distributing body), domiciled in Rome.

"ARTICLE 3: The film companies which, on the basis of regular licenses issued by the Ministry of Finance, are still governed at the time of the present decree and have contracts running for the acquisition, importation and distribution in Italy, its colonies and possessions, of cinematographic films of foreign productions, must notify the ministry for foreign trade and exchange in ten days from the date of publication of the present decree with regard to such contracts handed over to them and indicating what use has been made of each of them and what remains to be done.

"ARTICLE 4: Power is given to the minister of foreign trade and exchange to establish in concert with the minister for corporations and popular culture the conditions and modalities for the execution of contracts stipulated and denounced in conformity with dispositions as in Article 3, or else to consent to have the contracts taken over on the above-mentioned conditions immediately. Should the contracting parties not be inclined to accept the conditions and modalities for the execution of a contract and not agree to the taking over of the contract by ENIC they are free to cancel the contract. Such cancellations do not entitle them to any indemnity.

"ARTICLE 5: Within the text of Article 3, and the Law of January 31, 1926, and upon propositions of the ministry of foreign trade and exchange in concert with the ministries of finance, grace and justice and popular culture, regulations may be issued for the coordination of the duties entrusted by the present decree to ENIC with the activities of national producers for foreign trade interesting the cinematographic industry.

"ARTICLE 6: Supplementary and executive regulations which may occur for the operation of the present decree, a law will be issued by royal decree according to the law of Jan. 31, 1926, upon the proposition of the minister for foreign trade and exchange in concert with the ministers for foreign affairs for Italian Africa, for finance, for grace and justice, for corporations, and popular culture. The present decree will be effective from the date following its publication in the Official Gazette of the Kingdom and will be presented to Parliament for conversion into a law."

Seek Clarification

The MPPDA's foreign representatives are attempting to obtain clarification of some of the passages in the foregoing, but meanwhile the law monopolizing distribution in Italy in the hands of the government is in effect, as of September 14th. Until such is received, no decision on action will be made.

On Friday, top-line executives of virtually all large companies got together in a board session at headquarters of the MPPDA on 44th Street, New York. The increasing number and seriousness of the problems affecting the U. S. industry's world markets immediately became the subject of discussion. No public announcement was made concerning the conference, but it was decided to reconvene this Thursday on the same subject.

Optimists expressed the opinion that a modification of the Italian decree will be obtained, negotiations pointing in that direction being conducted in Rome through the American embassy, which, on Friday, officially notified the State Department at Washington of the Fascists' action.

Possible softening of the monopolistic measures was indicated in Rome Tuesday in an amended decree published in the Official Gazette. It said that the minister of foreign trade and exchange might decide whether contracts would be conceded to individual distributors or outright to ENIC. The new measure was interpreted in some quarters in Rome to mean that possibly some American distributors might continue to do business in Italy.

Officials in Washington said that while no figures were available on either the investment of American companies in Italy, where they all have representatives, or on the amount of money which may be tied up in that country in the shape of returns from pictures, the sum of the two is impressive.

While no official U. S. Government information is available as to the extent of the film trade with Italy in the form of separate pictures, figures compiled by the Department of Commerce show that exports of positive sound film in 1936 totaled 1,278,391 feet valued at $27,512 and sound negative was 272,905 feet valued at $18,815. In 1937, exports jumped to 2,660,920 feet of positive sound film valued at $79,631, and to 330,821 feet of negative valued at $18,069, and for the first seven months of the current year sound positive exports were 1,377,963 feet valued at $33,664 and negative 280,301 feet valued at $9,199.

A report from Rome under date of August 18 stated that the average number of pictures projected in Italy annually was 300, of which 35 were Italian, 190 American and the balance from other sources.

Paramount, MGM and 20th Century-Fox operate from two to ten branches each in Italy. Other companies distribute through Italian companies under franchise. All would be liquidated.

Continental Executives Meet

Continental executives of American companies held a three-hour meeting last Friday at the Paris office of the Hays organization, with Benjamin Miggins, Twentieth Century-Fox Continental manager, presiding, to discuss the Italian decree. Phil Reisman, RKO foreign head, is attending the Paris meetings, as are Fred Lange, Paramount, and Harold Smith, of the MPPDA. John W. Hicks, Paramount, is en route from New York.

No decision was taken, but it was indicated that the decree will have serious consequences for American companies in Italy, probably causing their suspension. With French producers also hit by the edict, the news created a sensation in Paris film circles.

Most American companies directed their Paris offices immediately to suspend the routing of negatives into Italy until further notice. The practice of most companies in the past has been to route negatives for Europe from Paris to Rome, where the Italian prints were made, and then to continue the shipment of negatives further on through Europe.

The Italian decree, presumably, offers the American companies the sole alternative of entrusting their product to the ENIC, on arbitrarily designated terms, or of withdrawing from the Italian market without indemnification for existing contracts.

$7,000,000 Reported Tied Up

It was not clear what policy Italy would pursue with respect to disposition of the blocked currency which American companies have on deposit there in the event of an American withdrawal from the market. The total sum is estimated unofficially to be at least $7,000,000. Some conjecture centered around the indicated possibility of the American companies being offered Italian government bonds in exchange for their credits. The bonds are negotiable at an estimated 65 cents on the dollar.

Opinion in official distribution quarters in Rome is that the new decree practically kills the Italian film quota, inasmuch as the new order authorizes the government's new distribution agency to purchase all films in the future to meet Italian needs, and because of the foreign money exchange situation, such purchases are expected to be held to a minimum.

BRITISH FILMS EXCEED QUOTA

London reported this week that British product registered during the first five months of the new Films Act, through August, totaled 39 features against an aggregate registered of 207, indicating that British product is more than supplying its requirement under the exhibitors' quota. In the five months 168 foreign features were registered.

Under the Films Act, the exhibitors' quota is 12½ per cent, while the total in the five months amounted to 18.08 per cent. In the shorts category, the British product in the five months amounted to 40 per cent of the total, whereas 12½ per cent is required.

In the distributor quota, where 15 per cent is required, the total of British product in the five months, considering the double and triple quota provisions, amounts to 16.4 per cent. Ten of the British features for the distributor quota are in the high cost category.

The British product in the period is estimated to have cost £450,000 in labor cost, or £900,000 in total negative cost, under the new act, giving an average of about £32,000 negative cost per film, a considerable gain over the comparable figures during the old act.

Exports of exposed positive film from England in August totaled 2,016,558 feet, an increase of 342,935 feet over August, 1937. The imports of exposed positive film totaled 13,235,154 feet, a decrease of 473,948 feet from August, 1937.

Czechoslovakia Crisis Brings Film Study

Although American distributors continued, so far as could be learned, to do business out of Prague, the Czechoslovakian war crisis this week caused as much concern in official film quarters in New York as it presumably did in other businesses which make large exports.

One thing appears certain: regardless of whether any other European countries become involved in a conflict, bringing proportionate losses to American films in those areas, the U. S. distributors probably will lose whatever revenues have been accruing out of Sudeten, Czech-Polish or other sectors where by plebiscite or Czech action, under pressure from England and France, those sectors are returned to or annexed by Germany, as in the case of the Sudetens, and Poland. In excess of 2,500,000 Sudetens and Czech-Poles would constitute the lost potential audience.

The conclusion that this audience would be lost to American films comes from the anti-Hollywood film policy of the Nazis, a policy which was strengthened by the Rome-Berlin axis, applying to films as it does to other fields and factors.

According to a report received in the Motion Picture Section of the Department of Commerce, Washington, from the office of the U. S. Commercial Attache at Prague, the Czechoslovak Board of Censors issued permits in June for 18 features and 67 shorts, and for 166 features in the six months of January to June. Of these, in the half-yearly period, 90 features were from the United States. The following governmental report gives an insight into the standing of Hollywood in Czechoslovakia today, based on features imported by the Czechs in June, 1938, and between January and June, 1938, with a comparison for the same periods in 1937:

With a shutdown of native production, distribution and exhibition activities almost certain to follow the outbreak of fighting in any sector, activities of American companies would be expected to cease in the involved areas. While the investments of American companies in Czechoslovakia as elsewhere in Europe are for the most part represented by sales branches and distribution systems, the U. S. corporations do have scattered investments in production and exhibition, principally in England.

Another potential effect lies in jeopardization of existing and pending trade pacts between the United States and foreign countries.

Press dispatches from Washington Monday reported that Francis B. Sayre, assistant secretary of state, was reviewing with President Roosevelt probable effects of war on this country's reciprocal trade pacts and on the chances of extending them. A treaty between Great Britain and the United States is in formulation. In case of war, these negotiations and others probably would be interrupted.

Newsreels in U. S. Turn "War-Minded"

The American newsreels stand today thoroughly equipped and ready to report by camera on any hostilities. The newsreels have been in more war zones in recent months than at any time since the World War, what with the Italians' invasion of Ethiopia, the Spanish Civil War and the Sino-Japanese conflict.

The newsreels recently have been concentrating their experienced staffs in Europe's troubled zones, ready for the flash that borders have been crossed, cannons fired.

Allyn Butterfield, editor of Pathe News, sailed late last week for Europe on 24 hours' notice to build up the directing staff, in the event of hostilities.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HAS A JOB FOR FILM INDUSTRY IN EVENT OF WAR

Plans Call for Utilizing Motion Picture Facilities for Publicity, Supplying Men and Equipment, and for Propaganda

By FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

An outbreak of war in Europe involving the United States would find the Government ready to make full use of the facilities of the motion picture in maintaining morale.

For several years the War Department has been perfecting plans for the immediate mobilization of industry as well as of the military in the event of an emergency. Such plans involve the regimentation of the population into an internal army of supply, and under our theory of government, citizens are held entitled to know not only what the Government is doing but why and how, which involves publicity.

The publicity plans of the department embrace the most extensive use of all three national media of news dissemination—the newspapers, motion pictures and radio.

Back of the War Department's work of planning for possibilities of war is the determination that the next war shall find the country far better prepared than was the case in 1917.

Profiting by the experience of 21 years ago, the War Department, in the early 'twenties, began formulation of a program for speedy mobilization of industry and labor in the event of another emergency. That program, it is said, now has been completed, and the entire productive force of the country quickly could be swung into the provision of war materials for the military services and necessities for the civil population.

Data on Factories

In the War Department files are comprehensive data regarding the location, size, productive capacity and other details of every factory now engaged in the manufacture of munitions, shoes, clothing or other necessities, and full information as to plants which could be converted from the manufacture of their present commodities to articles of war.

Naturally, these plans involve utilization of the motion picture industry's facilities, not only for publicity purposes but for the supply of skilled men and equipment for the various pictorial activities conducted by a modern army in the field, and the use of the radio industry's men and equipment for communications purposes.

In addition, however, both industries would be called upon as such to lend their facilities for the publicity and propaganda work which will be a major feature of the next war, whenever it comes.

Would Expand Film Services

The motion picture producers and exhibitors contributed materially to the Government during the World War, and in the event of another emergency probably would be called upon to duplicate and expand the services then rendered in the showing of "drive" and other films, the use of their facilities for bond selling and so on.

For the broadcasting industry, however, the next war will be the first experience in meeting which the time and facilities which have been given to Government and other agencies in the past will form a valuable background.

A major feature of the radio work will be the effort to "black out" enemy propaganda and to offset such enemy propaganda as does get through the air defenses which will be erected. Largely, it is expected, defense will consist of "jamming" the ether on frequencies used by enemy stations—that is, filling that section of the ether with meaningless signals through which nothing intelligible would penetrate.

Propaganda's Job

Propaganda will bulk much larger in the next war than it ever has in the past. That has been demonstrated by the German, Spanish, Italian, Russian, French and Czech programs which for many months have been directed to the United States, each carrying the propaganda of the country transmitting it and each designed to build up sympathy for its cause in the United States.

In the event of war in any quarter of the world the participating nations would face this problem of propaganda—barring that of their enemy and getting their own into enemy territory—and in the event of widespread hostilities, such as have been threatening Europe for many weeks, a good portion of the air would be made useless and some countries might find it difficult to broadcast even to their own nationals.

All of these factors have been under constant study by radio engineers of the Army and Navy and have been taken into consideration in the development of plans for publicity under wartime conditions.

Under those plans, the newspapers, films and radio will be utilized to the maximum extent. Radio, in fact, may be practically taken over by the Government and an immediate watch instituted for efforts of enemy agents within the country to set up propaganda or communication services.

American film talent is much in demand in England, Edward Everett Horton reported this week on his return.

States are all highlighting and headlighting pictures on the history-making European events, showing travelings of the diplomats and politicians, scenes of defense preparations, panoramas of strife-torn land, activities at borders and other phases.

A Czechoslovakian message plea for European peace was dramatically directed to the American public during the week by way of the nation's screens.

Two months ago, when a March of Time production unit was photographing its Czechoslovakian reel, "Prelude to Conquest," Edward Benes, president of the Czechs, addressed the message to the American people for release when and if the present crisis developed. It was not to be released until then.

Relayed Monday night through the March of Time's Paris office came President Benes' permission to release the statement, the Paris office forwarding word over trans-Atlantic telephone to Louis de Rochemont, March of Time executive producer.

Immediately the appeal was inserted in "Prelude to Conquest," which is now showing. Said the Czech leader: "We have been working hard during the last 20 years and have accomplished a great deal. We have tried and are still trying honestly to be just, as much as human beings can be. We hope that we shall be able to continue our work in the future, believing that international peace can be saved and honestly maintained by pacific means."

March of Time disclosed that it had on hand more than 63,000 feet of exclusive film on the situation in Europe, as filmed within recent months. Associated Press this week obtained from March of Time a series of stills from "Prelude to Conquest," which A P dispatched to its 2,000 member newspapers in the U. S.

"Prelude to Conquest" was barred from France Monday by official governmental action.

"Wings Over Czechoslovakia" Reaches U. S. Screens

Apparently the first Czech-produced motion picture on the crisis reached New York this week from Prague and the A. B. Studios there, in the nature of a two-reel subject entitled "Wings Over Czechoslovakia." It had its first American exhibition at B. S. Moss' Criterion, at Longacre Square.

Produced by George Weiss for A. B., the picture has Czechoslovakian dialogue and English subtitles. Among the scenes are those of the young men of the country being made ready for war, in drilling and training, also air maneuvers and some of the recent events in Czech-land.

"This film is not a compilation of newsreels," said the Criterion management, "but an authentic story of the might of Czechoslovakia passing in review."

It played with the Hollywood-produced "Come On, Leathernecks," a picture about the United States Marines.

Mr. Reisman told RKO foreign representatives in Paris this week that the company's business on the Continent had trebled in a year.

RED CHARGE IS FALSE, WARNER TELLS LEGION

Industry Has No Sympathy with Any "Ism" Except Americanism, Conventioners Hear

The motion picture industry "has no sympathy with Communism, Fascism, Nazism or any 'ism' other than Americanism," Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, told 150 officers of the American Legion and other guests at a luncheon at the Warner-First National studios in Burbank on Monday.

Giving the lie to "certain bigots . . . who whisper that Hollywood is run by 'isms,'" Mr. Warner declared that "we, collectively and as individual studios, are doing much, all that we can do, in fact, to teach the principles of true democracy to the outside world."

Legion members, in Hollywood for their annual convention, thronged the studios for the event which, with the attendant parade and publicity, proved to be one of the outstanding achievements to date in the industry's "Greatest Year" campaign. Starting at 12:30 p.m. thousands of vehicles, from Model T's to sleek busses, jammed all roads in Hollywood and the San Fernando Valley leading to the Olive street entrance of the studio for the open house visit. The jam at the start of the parade caused a two-hour delay of the official cars carrying Governor Frank F. Merriam, Daniel Doherty, national commander of the Legion, and other executives to the studio. The response to the invitation of Jack and Harry Warner to tour the studio exceeded the most optimistic estimates of even the publicity staffs of S. Charles Einfeld and Bob Taplinger.

Jack Warner Toastmaster

Jack Warner, vice-president, was toastmaster and introduced Warner players, personnel and distinguished guests, including Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, Lewis Allen Weiss, general manager of the Don Lee broadcasting chain, Don I. Gilman of National Broadcasting Company, and Donald W. Thornburgh of Columbia Broadcasting System.

Harry Warner, the first speaker, received uproarious applause and Mr. Doherty responded with commendation of the Warner organization for the display of patriotic spirit in its motion pictures. He said the studio was not guilty, "as others in motion pictures had been," of "portraying the idiosyncrasies and shortcomings of a few Legion members," and urged that the industry as a whole show "in a fair light" the "Legion's utility for service in many ways." Warner Brothers showed four of its series of "patriotic shorts" to Legion officials during the convention.

"Need No Dictators"

Mr. Warner, terming the Legion "the watchdog of democracy," warned that "in recent years, since various foreign governments have fallen into the bloody hands of dictators, autocrats and tyrants, other organizations have grown up within our own borders. These groups are inspired, financed and managed by foreign interests, which are supplying a never ending stream of poisonous propaganda aimed, directly and indirectly, at the destruction of our national life."

He declared that "those who seek to change our system of government and to sow the seeds of discontent, of intolerance, and national destruction, are our common enemies and we can never relax in our vigilance against them if America is to fulfill her splendid destiny.

"There is no room in America," he said, "for those outsiders who preach intolerance, who ape the bigoted leaders of other troubled lands and who seek by every possible means to tear down what our forefathers built and which you and others like you have preserved at great sacrifice on Flanders Field.

"We have no need of regimented thinking in this country. We need no dictators to rule our private lives. We can sleep nights. Our families are safe here. You and I do not want these things changed."

Of the charges of the prevalence of red radicalism in Hollywood, Mr. Warner said:

"You may have heard that Communism is rampant in Hollywood and in the motion picture industry. I tell you this industry has no sympathy with Communism, Fascism, Nazism or any 'ism' other than Americanism. We, collectively and as individual studios are doing much, all we can do in fact, to teach the principles of true democracy to the outside world. I defy our accusers to prove that this industry is run by 'isms.'

"Drive them out."

Ideals on the Screen

"Here in Hollywood," said Mr. Warner, "we keep faith with American ideals because, like you, we believe in them, because they have brought peace and happiness to us when nearly all the rest of the world is miserable and afraid. We bring to the talking screen patriotic and historical subjects dealing with the high spots of American history and showing the firm foundations upon which our government was built. We tell the outside world, every day, the true principles of our great democracy. The world knows that ours is the best advertised nation on earth and I believe that motion pictures have played the most important part in making it so. We will continue to tell the world how worthwhile it is to be an American, working and living under American government, enjoying the freedom of thought, freedom of worship and life guaranteed by the American flag.

"The world looks upon America as the strong frontier of democracy because the motion picture has given them a true conception of our institutions and our life here. People the world over believe that America is the great land of liberty and the text book from which they have absorbed that lesson has been the motion picture."

Besides the reception at the Warner studio, the motion picture industry's entertainment for the Legionnaires included stars' appearance at the Motion Picture night at Olympic Coliseum Wednesday, the officiating of Jack Benny and Bob Burns at the Legion banquet at the Biltmore and Leo Carrillo at the Auxiliary's gathering, and teas at which the hosts included Jeanette MacDonald, Marion Davies, Shirley Temple, Olympe Bradna and Fred MacMurray. Martha Raye was mistress of ceremonies at the Paramount theatre showing "Sons of the Legion." In the Tuesday parade Evelyn Keyes was "Miss American Legion" on a motion picture float.

The Joseph Schencks entertained war generals at a luncheon at the Cafe de Paris on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot.

89 INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS SUE B & K AND LARGE DISTRIBUTORS

Chicago Circuit, Parent Company Paramount and Seven More Companies Accused of Illegal Trade Practices

Eighty-nine independent exhibitors, operating 101 Chicago subsequent run-theatres having a stated property value of $5,000,000, filed a Clayton Act anti-trust suit Monday afternoon in Illinois federal court against the large distributors to break up the entire existing clearance and releasing system in Chicago and environs.

Citing Balaban & Katz, the dominating Chicago circuit, and Paramount Pictures, its parent, and officers of both, as the principal defendants, and the seven other major distributors as secondary defendants, the complaint lists one of the largest groups of independent exhibitor plaintiffs yet to ask relief in the courts from so-called "aggressions" by the "Big Eight".

The action comes virtually on the eve of the expected departure of representatives of the large companies for Washington for conferences with the Department of Justice on the United States Government's anti-trust suit pending against the same interests and under which the Government seeks to divorce producer-distributors from exhibition and to have declared illegal most of the trade practices under which the majors operate.

Sponsored by Illinois Allied

The Chicago suit, devised and sponsored by Allied States Association of Illinois, has been a long time coming. It had been openly threatened regularly for months because B & K would not accede to a "speed-up" of product releases, either by abandoning double bills at their theatres, or else cut in half the ten-week protection accorded B & K by the distributors. By this 10-week system, the independents charge, the Paramount-affiliated circuit delays the releasing of practically all important films until they have played even in B & K situations in surrounding suburbs, long before the independents in the city itself are given availability.

The usual injunctions are asked, against conspiracy, monopolization, and against the releasing and clearance practices, which, the independents claim, are in restraint of trade in interstate commerce. Petition also is made for an injunction against B & K's dualing of films, on the grounds that the circuit with its doubles further monopolizes product.

The complaint asserts B & K really stands in contempt of court, of violating a consent decree entered into in Chicago federal court in 1932 and in which decree they reputedly agreed to refrain from such practices. The United States Attorney General is asked to correct this situation.

Joseph Rosenberg, attorney for Allied and the complaining independents, disclosed Monday that a suit for damages immediately will follow.

Washington and Industry Await Washington Talks

Department of Justice officials in Washington and the trade in New York had eyes focused this week on the inner offices of top-line major executive conferees and their attorneys for word of acceptance of the three-week-old invitation from the Department for a conference

U. S. Further Advanced on Radio Probe; Now Ready to Start on Broadcasters

The long-awaited investigation of monopoly in the broadcasting industry now is scheduled to get actively under way October 24th. Thus radio will precede motion pictures under the eye of governmental scrutiny, films now having standing against it a federal anti-trust suit.

Plans for the radio hearings were completed by the Federal Communications Commission this week, and were followed by the sending out of notices calling to Washington those executives and other persons in the radio industry whom the Commission desires to interrogate. NBC, CBS and Mutual network, and 18 regional chains have been ordered to send witnesses.

The hearings will be conducted by a special FCC committee set up some months ago for the purpose, and consisting of Chairman Frank R. McNinch and Commissioners Thad H. Brown, Eugene O. Sykes and Paul A. Walker.

Several weeks will be required for the hearings, at which the radio organizations will be interrogated regarding corporate and financial history, ownership and control, relations with affiliates and with each other, with advertisers and advertising agencies, and with telephone and telegraph companies.

In addition, all companies making and distributing electrical transcriptions and recordings for broadcast have been cited to produce evidence with respect to their relations with and the extent to which they control or are controlled by broadcast stations and networks.

at the Capital on certain phases of the pending Government anti-trust suit against the large companies. A date will be set soon.

The majors up to this week had not acted on the invitation, but on Tuesday Broadway heard that they were about ready to notify the Department of their willingness to talk informally at Washington. Previously, Department of Justice officials inferred they had expected a reply earlier.

The talks will touch upon the Department's proposal that the five major distributor-circuit defendants refrain from any further theatre expansion pending disposition of the suit. It is generally understood that in the event the majors refuse to accede, an injunction will be sought in federal courts compelling the circuits to so refrain.

In addition, it is expected that the conference will lead to a discussion of the position of the majors in relation to the pending plan for self-regulation and the effect, if any, such concerted action in self-regulation might have on the companies when and if they are compelled to defend the trust case. There has been talk from Washington that the suit might be settled "amicably" by a consent decree. Home office officials in New York, however, hold that no consent decree will ever be entered on the basis of the government's pending complaint.

Self-regulation is looked for in the industry after the Washington meeting between the Department of Justice and the majors regardless of the nature of the talks. In this connection, Edward L. Kuykendall, MPTOA president, on arriving in New York this week from the south, demanded that no further delays stand in the way of enactment of the program. He said that self-regulation must be won for exhibitors now, despite the pendency of the Government's suit and the adverse legal opinion of the majors.

Suit Threatened for Months

Allied States in Illinois, led by the late Aaron Saperstein, has been threatening to sue Balaban

& Katz and its parent, Paramount, for months on the Chicago releasing and clearance situation which the independents have described as "discriminatory." When their threats of court action led them nowhere, on July 6th Mr. Saperstein, accompanied by Eddie Silverman, head of Chicago's independent Essaness Circuit, and Joe Rosenberg, Allied's chief counsel, marched on New York to bargain at Paramount's home office.

Not known generally at the time was that the independents were willing to forego their legal attack if B&K and Paramount were willing to abandon B&K's double bill policies in Chicago.

They advanced the argument that there are 300 subsequent runs in the Chicago district, that nearly every one of them is affected by the 10-week clearance protection enjoyed by Balaban and Katz from the majors, and, as is usual, obtained by the circuit because of its greater buying power. It was further argued that B&K uses twice as many features on its dual bills under the existing clearance arrangement as it did when it ran singles under the same protection, and, therefore, a speeding-up of the existing releasing system is essential to the operations of the independents. The 10-week clearance was set up for singles, not duals, they charge, demanding that it be cut in half.

Letters Sent to Companies

Mr. Rosenberg, for Allied, at the time sent personal letters to the heads of the majors in New York threatening legal action if they did not get together with the independents. So far as is known, the Chicago delegation, in July, had some talks with Austin Keough, Paramount home office counsel—but that was as far as the complaint got.

That weekend, Mr. Saperstein and his colleagues returned to Chicago, where a heart attack brought death to the Allied president. The ensuing weeks were taken up with the rearranging of Allied's affairs and the determination of a successor satisfactory to all of the Allied factors in Illinois. This was accomplished with the election of Jack Kirsch to the presidency.

Preparation of the actual complaint had been going on for months, in the hands of both Attorney Rosenberg and Mr. Saperstein, but with the interruptions of Mr. Saperstein's death and an illness suffered by Mr. Rosenberg late in August and early September, its completion was not accomplished until last week.

Finances, too, stood in the way of filing, but at a general Allied meeting, last week, this obstacle was also met, and expenditures necessary to proceed in the courts are understood to have been arranged. Independents controlling some 130 Chicago theatres were at that meeting.

(Warner Brothers), RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., United Artists Corporation, Columbia Pictures Corporation, Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., and Barney Balaban (of B. and K. and president of Paramount), John Balaban, operating head of B. and K., Walter Immerman, Abe Kaufman and Joe Kaufman. The Kaufmans are B&K film buyers and bookers. Walter Immerman is vice-president and general manager.

The suit was filed in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, with Rosenberg, Stein and Rosenberg, of the First National Bank Building, Chicago, as counsel of record.

Brought Under Clayton Act

Specifically, the suit was brought under the U. S. Clayton Act "against unlawful restraints and monopolies," and seeks to "restrain the defendants from further violations of the anti-trust laws."

The plaintiffs, consisting of 76 corporations, two co-partnerships and 11 individual exhibitors, own or lease and operate 101 theatres in Chicago, having a value stated at $5,000,000 in real estate owned in fee, leaseholds and theatre equipment. All are subsequent runs.

Paramount and B&K and their officers are cited as primary defendants; the seven other majors are cited as secondary defendants.

The complaint asks for relief for the plaintiffs by restraining the defendants and enjoining them Pendente lite from further engaging "in this District and elsewhere in the United States" from conspiring, monopolizing, restraining trade or imposing "unreasonable and discriminatory restraints" upon the independents, or coercing or compelling or attempting to coerce or compel the secondary major plaintiffs with the intent, for the purpose, or with the effect of accomplishing the performance of any of the aforementioned acts.

They seek relief from the double bill and the clearance situations also.

Self-Regulation Works On Coast, Halts Suit

First tangible proof since the industry has been talking self-regulation that this method of adjudicating trade disputes will work came Monday when 45 southern California independent owners called off a pending suit against Paramount for practices alleged to be discriminatory.

At the instigation of Charles Skouras, Fox West Coast executive, the California independents some three weeks ago indicated they would attempt self-regulation of the local industry, particularly in connection with their continuous disputes against FWC because of the clearance which the independents claim is accorded the circuit by the major distributors.

The independents accordingly named a permanent arbitration committee, and this week Albert Galston, president of the Independent Theatre Owners, recommended settlement of the owners' complaint against Paramount. The suit had originally been filed in October, 1937, but

United States District Judge Yankwich, in Los Angeles, ruled last month against the independents, expressing the opinion that the complaint can only be cured by Federal legislation. The independents filed an appeal, pending until the whole action was called off this week.

The complaint was made because of Paramount's action last year in holding over six 1936-37 features until 1937-38. The ITO now feels that the matter can be satisfactorily settled by each exhibitor, and that its arbitration will aid if necessary.

Gary Trust Suit Is Delayed to Sept. 30

Suit of the independent Gary Theatre Company against major distributors, pending in Federal Court in Chicago, has been set back to September 30th, by action of Judge Hollywood in granting defendants' counsel a 10-day stay to answer a bill of particulars.

Majors Granted Appeal In "Divorcement" Test

The legality of state "divorcement" laws by which Allied States hopes to force divestment of theatre holdings by major producer-distributors will be determined by the United States Supreme Court at Washington.

Specifically at issue is the Allied-sponsored divorcement bill in North Dakota, which was enacted at the last legislative session, but which was not enforced pending a court test. After lengthy legal skirmishes, and actual court airing, the case reached the point this week where an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court was granted in an order filed at Fargo, N. D., by a special three-judge Federal Court. This court had previously ruled the act constitutional.

Bonds fixed in the order include $1,000 for costs of the action and $1,000 for possible damages incurred by the State of North Dakota during the existence of a temporary injunction against enforcement of the law, allowed by a lower court and reinstated pending an appeal. Both bonds are to be furnished by the plaintiffs against the state, Paramount Pictures, Minnesota Amusement and American Amusement, these two being Paramount theatre affiliates.

Assignments of error cited in the petition for appeal to Washington included allegations of 20 specific errors in rulings by the court during the last hearing in June at Fargo.

Plan no Change in Connecticut Booking

The existing clearance setup for the White Plains-Port Chester-Greenwich area is of long standing and there is no reason for its being changed, it was said yesterday by William White, general manager of Skouras Theatres, in comment on threatened Federal court action by Prefect Theatres over allegedly excessive protection held by Skouras' Port Chester houses over the Pickwick in Greenwich.

C. D. Lowe, an official of the Prefect organization, says that unless the major distributors rectify the situation suit will be brought against them and also against Skouras "in two or three weeks."

For the past four years, says Mr. Lowe, the Skouras theatres have had protection ranging to 60, 90 or 120 days, whereas prior to that time Greenwich clearance was based on Stamford availability, which is the same as the national release date.

The Prefect Theatres, which is affiliated with Brownell Theatre Corp., operating eight film houses, has filed a formal complaint with the Department of Justice and has notified the distributors of the action which it has planned.

FIGHT OF ORGANIZED TALENT AGAINST PRODUCERS NOW IMPERILS ACADEMY

Guilds Demand Producers Resign from Academy; Labor Board Continues Hearings on Directors' Bargaining Agency

Hollywood's talent guilds expressed their feelings against Hollywood's producers in a new form this week when they virtually blocked reorganization of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, threatening the Academy's very existence with demands that the producers resign from Academy membership. Without mincing words, the Screen Actors, Screen Directors and Screen Writers Guilds said they "mistrusted" the presence of the producers in the Academy.

Meanwhile, the National Labor Relations Board in Los Angeles continued its hearings on the Directors Guild demands that it be named sole bargaining agency for directors, assistant directors and production unit managers, with employment demands for both Senior and Junior Guilds presented before N.L.R.B. Trial Examiner William Ringer. These demands previously had been stymied when the producers insisted that the Guild is not the proper bargaining agency for assistant directors and unit managers.

In the ranks of the Screen Writers and Screen Directors Guilds, both groups still were fighting for new employment contracts. The Actors Guild interrupted their bargaining activities long enough to elect Ralph Morgan to the presidency.

Dr. Towne Nylander, regional director of the NLRB in Los Angeles, fixed Thursday for the opening of hearings on the Screen Publicists Guild's petition to be named sole bargaining agent for studio publicity writers.

Guild's Charges Against Producers Start Furore

Copies of letters disclosed this week that producer-members of the Academy were asked to resign. Darryl F. Zanuck refused to quit and W. S. Van Dyke, second chairman of the reorganization committee, quit the Academy.

Also thrown into the fight were threats of Frank Capra, Academy president, and Howard Estabrook, to quit. The two, with Mr. Van Dyke, comprise the reorganization committee. Mr. Van Dyke, in a letter of resignation, declared his reason was the antagonism of the guilds to the Academy, and "I feel that my first allegiance is due my economic colleagues," he wrote.

It was revealed that on September 14th Mr. Capra reported to the board of governors that the guild leaders were opposed to reorganization because of the producers, and asked that producer members resign in a body within 10 days. Mr. Capra's letter said in part: "If the producers do not resign, Estabrook, Van Dyke and I will, and, I hope, every other member of the board and the reorganization committee will immediately resign in a body."

He said he saw no other way to preserve and advance the Academy. Later, if sentiment favors it, the producers may be invited to rejoin as associate members, he declared.

Mr. Zanuck, replying, expressed astonishment at the request, and refused to quit the Academy,

IATSE PETITIONS BEING CIRCULATED

Petitions expressing confidence in present International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees' leaders and striking at Jeff Kibre and the minority faction which filed charges against IATSE leaders before the NLRB are being circulated in Hollywood studios among members of the various locals. It is understood that several thousand signatures have already been obtained.

An informal hearing will be held next Wednesday on the charges. Mr. Kibre claims that IATSE executives had been paid $100,000 by representatives of producers to bring four IATSE locals under domination of producers. Producers and union executives have denied all of the charges, branding them as "ridiculous."

which he helped found. He said further that he would attempt to persuade other producers they are entitled to more consideration than "what amounts to an ultimatum to get out." He told Mr. Capra the Academy "is bigger than all of us and should continue to be. It must not be destroyed."

Mr. Van Dyke on September 17th replied to Mr. Zanuck, declaring his belief that the resignation of the producers would allay fears and suspicions. "You and your colleagues can save the Academy," he told Mr. Zanuck.

Messrs. Capra, Van Dyke and Estabrook have been working for several months preparing the Academy reorganization plans. Mr. Capra this year was elected head of the Screen Directors' Guild, now engaged in the NLRB action against the producers in the collective bargaining controversy. Donald Gledhill, executive secretary for the Academy, said that conferences of Academy leaders are continuing.

Directors Guild Demands Brought Up at Hearing

Harry Cohn, David O. Selznick, Hunt Stromberg, E. J. Mannix and Darryl Zanuck are to be called before the hearing of the NLRB on the Screen Directors' Guild controversy in Hollywood this week. Trial Examiner William Ringer says he will ask them to bring their employment contracts with them.

Copies of bargaining demands by senior and junior branches of the guild were introduced before Mr. Ringer. Demands made by the guild in the course of negotiations over a period of a year which were suspended by producers insistence that the guild was not the proper bargaining representative for assistants and unit managers in addition to directors were:

By assistants and unit managers. Guild shop, minimum pay $150 weekly first assistants, $80 weekly second assistants and unit managers. Each full length feature and each unit to have first and second assistants. Each short subject to have first and second assistant. Work week of 60 hours with one-sixtieth of a weeks pay each hour of work over 60 hours.

By directors. Permission to aid preparation of script and at least two weeks preparation for shooting. Permission to approve and or revise first cutting of film, staying on the payroll for minimum two weeks during cutting. Supervision over casting. Six day work week, 60 hours minimum, except on locations where company is not to work more than 14 continuous days. Twelve hour rest period between calls. One-sixth of weeks pay for holidays except on special contracts which stipulate director to do certain number of pictures in a set period. Setting up of conciliation and arbitration machinery to adjust grievances.

Gledhill Testifies

Mr. Gledhill testified concerning the setting up of an assistant directors section of the Academy some years ago and of a code of working conditions negotiated under Academy auspices. Frank Shaw, assistant director, told of his work.

J. P. McGowan, secretary of the Screen Directors' Guild, testified that Mr. Capra holds a contract with Columbia Studios calling for a salary of $400,000 a year, plus 25 per cent of all profits of his films. He said Mr. Capra's contract required that he direct three pictures annually for $100,000 each. An additional bonus of $100,000 is provided plus the percentage of profits. There was no indication at the hearing of Mr. Capra's income from his percentage of his pictures' profits.

A year ago, he filed suit against Columbia claiming breach of contract and asserted at that time he was to receive $100,000 for each picture he directed, or a minimum of $200,000 a year. The suit later was settled.

The studio reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission that for the fiscal year 1935-'36 he was paid $208,000. Another report to the SEC listed his 1936 salary at $208,000 and this year's treasury report showed that he was paid $208,000 in 1937.

Columbia's contract with director Leo McCarey also was read into the record. It showed he received $100,000 for each picture.

Status of Members

Answering producer counsel's demand for data on the status of members claimed to constitute majority of directors, assistant directors and unit managers employed by Hollywood studios, Mr. McGowan testified that 10 of 30 employed by RKO are paid up, while 20 are delinquent. Ten of 39 guild members employed at Warner Brothers are paid up, while the studio employs 12 directors, two assistant directors and six unit managers who are not Guild members.

Alfred Wright, Twentieth Century-Fox counsel, in cross-examining Mr. McGowan, brought out that Mr. Van Dyke and George Fitzmaurice, among others, had quit the group.

Mr. McGowan said that the schedule of dues is $25 yearly for associate members, $50 yearly for directors making up to $15,000, $100 for those making up to $30,000 and $250 for those over $30,000.

Abstract of Writers Guild Proposed Contract

Producers and Screen Writers' Guild are no closer to a definite opinion on the new writers' contract. At a meeting at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, last week, the contract was handed to the producers by the writers, and the producers promised to indicate their attitude toward its acceptance at a meeting last Monday night. This meeting, however, was postponed to Monday, when prospects for an agreement grew dim after a brief session which terminated when the guild negotiators walked out of the session without setting a date for the next conference.

No member of the guild committee would comment on the reason for the abrupt termination of the discussion but it is understood the producer refusal to grant a guild shop demand and to terminate the Screen Playwright contract immediately were the major causes.

The writers are expected to fight, in the courts or elsewhere, if the producers refuse to ratify the contract, inasmuch as their Guild has already been certified by the NLRB as sole bargaining representative for studio writers.

All To Be Guild Members

After defining the Guild as the exclusive bargaining agent for all persons who write material which is intended to be used in the making of a motion picture, the agreement provides that every writer employed by any producer and every writer who contracts to sell original, unpublished or unproduced material or an original idea to any producer shall be a member of the Guild and in good standing.

Arbitration of any disputes between writers and producers or between the Guild and producers is provided for by the establishment of a "Writers' Committee on Conciliation and Arbitration" and a "Producers' Committee on Conciliation" from which bodies a joint Conciliation Committee consisting of two representatives each of the writers and producers will be drawn. Such arbitration is to be initiated within five days after the filing of a complaint either by the producers or by the writer or writers. If no agreement is reached by the committee within ten days the disagreement shall be submitted to a board of three arbitrators, one named by the writers, a second by the producers and a third chosen jointly or appointed by the National Lawyers Guild.

Disciplinary Committee

A Writers' Disciplinary Committee is provided for to adjudicate and punish violations of the unfair practice code incorporated in the contract. Such unfair practices include: wilful malingering by a writer; employment by a writer of a ghost writer or acceptance by a Guild member of employment as a ghost writer; failure of a free lance writer to submit work on or reasonably near the date fixed in his contract; offer by a producer or acceptance by a writer of employment contingent upon repayment of part of the salary provided; wilful plagiarism; public or secret agreement by producers designed to condition competitive bidding for the services of a writer or writers; the establishment of a general booking office by the producers or any of them to employ or enter into agreements to employ writers or to negotiate the sale of material; prevention by the producers of representation of any writer by an individual agent or the barring of any writers' agent from a producers office, except where such barring may have been held warranted by the arbitration committee; employment of persons who are not Guild members to make changes in material worked upon by Guild members except that a director on a set may make minor changes; failure by a producer to immediately notify a writer that other writer or writers are working at the same time on material on which he is engaged; failure by a producer to grant a writer the minimum provisions of this agreement.

Money penalties are provided for the violation of any of these practices by producers, payable either to the Guild or individual writers depending upon the type of offense. Writers are liable to suspension from the Guild for violations.

FOUR TO ATTEND AFL CONVENTION

Executive Secretary Ralph Whitehead has been appointed a delegate from the Associated Actors and Artists of America to the annual American Federation of Labor convention to be held October 3rd at Houston, Tex.

The other AAAA delegates are Frank Gillmore, president of the AAAA; Kenneth Thompson, for the Screen Actors' Guild, and Leo Fischer, for the American Guild of Musical Artists.

Three-Year Contract Maximum

Contracts with writers shall not run for more than three years, including options.

Any person employed as a writer in any one studio for a period of six consecutive months or employed in the motion picture industry as a writer for any aggregate of twelve months shall not be paid less than $125 a week.

No writer employed by one producer shall be loaned to another producer without the consent of the writer. When the salary paid on loan exceeds that paid by the original employer the amount exceeding the writer's base salary shall be equally divided between him and the producer lending his services.

In any contract in which an option is granted the producer to lay off a writer without pay such layoff shall not be longer than six weeks in each consecutive 26 weeks' period of the contract.

If any writer is employed at a salary of $500 a week or less the producer must give the writer not less than one week's notice prior to termination of employment. Where the writer has been employed more than 52 consecutive weeks two weeks' notice must be given. Similar notice must be given by the writer.

Vacations with Pay

Vacations with pay are provided for writers earning less than $150 a week. Expenses to and from location for the writers must be paid by the producer.

The contract provides understanding and agreement of two primary distinct considerations in the sale of motion picture rights of a story for motion picture production: the money consideration paid at the time of purchase, and the prestige and economic value to be derived from the fact that the story is actually produced as a motion picture. In the event that a writer sells original material for the screen to a producer the writer shall retain the dramatic, literary, radio and television rights and rights in any further media to be developed; the right to repurchase from the producer the talking motion picture rights for a price not in excess of the original price provided the picture is not made within three years; and all other property rights except the motion picture or talking motion picture rights.

Any person who signs a contract as a motion picture writer shall not be asked to write for the radio, television, or a stage presentations without additional payment and a separate contract covering such services.

It is provided that options to suspend a writer's contract by reason of substantial hampering or interruption of production by fire, strike, unavoidable accident, riot, war, or act of God shall be incorporated only in contracts having a duration of three months or longer and are hedged with provisions limiting the length of time such interruption may continue without pay.

Screen credits are to be given only upon the terms included in the contract. They are to be worded: "Screen play by . . .," and may include not more than three names. The determination of those to receive screen credit in cases where more than three collaborate is to be made by the Guild along lines outlined in the contract. Credit also shall be given on all advertising issued by the producing and distributing companies.

With regard to free lance writers: No producer shall agree with a writer that the writer shall write on speculation or that payment shall be contingent upon the acceptance or approval by the producer, except that this does not limit the submission of original ideas or stories on speculation. Stories initiated by or suggested by the producer must be paid for one-third at the time of the execution of the agreement, one-third at the time of submission of the first draft and the final payment on submission of the completed story or screen play. In no event shall the aggregate compensation paid in a free lance contract be less than an amount which would be equal to $125 for each week consumed by the writer in the fulfillment of the contract.

Arbitration of Actors Guild Demands Delayed

Arbitration following American Arbitration Association rules for adjusting differences got underway last week between the Screen Actors' Guild and producers over adjustment of guild working agreement, with B. B. Kahane, representing producers, Murray Kinnell, guild, and Charles Baird, legal printing firm owner, as third person. The first session was adjourned after an hour's session to Monday, when it was discovered that independent producers did not have representatives present through a misunderstanding. At the opening session Kenneth Thomson, guild secretary, took the stand to establish need for arbitration.

Opposing the Screen Actors' Guild shop demands several advertising film companies in Chicago this week refused to sign Actors Guild contracts.

Actors Guild Defeats Douglas, Names Morgan

By a majority of four to one, Ralph Morgan was elected president of the Screen Actors' Guild, defeating Melvyn Douglas, it was disclosed this week. Mr. Morgan's election meant the overthrow of a move by a liberal faction inside the guild to overthrow the nominations made by a guild nominating committee appointed by Robert Montgomery, retiring president, and the executive board.

A total of 537 of the senior guild members balloted. The conservatives' victory was carried on down the line with the nominating committee's selections for other offices being placed in office. James Cagney was elected vice-president; Joan Crawford, second vice-president, and Edward Arnold, third vice-president.

Actors To License Agents For Closed Shop Movement

A nation-wide drive to license all theatrical agents in localities where the American Federation of Actors' shop prevails has been inaugurated. The AFA said that the license plan is intended to stabilize working conditions to protect the actor from chiseling and other impositions by requiring agents to book only AFA members and in conformance with the rules and wage scales established by the AFA.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

45 in Work

Approximately 45 productions were in work as of September 16th. Nine productions were started during the week which closed with that date; five were finished. In general aspect the work begun and finished is ordinary routine material. Nevertheless there are several important pictures in the various production stages.

Columbia started two films. "Blondie," based on a widely distributed cartoon feature, will present Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Sims, Gene and Katherine Lockhart, Ann Doran and Dorothy Moore. In "Revolt In The Sahara," a romance amplified by melodramatic action will feature Paul Kelly, C. Henry Gordon, Robert Fiske, Lorna Greya and Marc Lawrence.

Republic Starts Two

Two pictures also were started at Republic. Robert Cummings, Helen Mack, Lyle Talbot, Gordon Jones, Thomas Jackson and Thomas Beck will be seen in "I Stand Accused." The principal players in "Bengal Lancer Patrol" are Richard Cromwell, who was featured in "Lives Of A Bengal Lancer," Patric Knowles, Rochelle Hudson, Colin Tapley and Douglas Dumbrille.

At RKO-Radio work was started on "The Law West Of Tombstone." Its character identified by the title, it will present Jean Rouveral, Tim Holt, Alan Lane, Evelyn Brent, Clarence Kolb, Harry Carey, Esther Muir, Paul Guilfoyle and George Irving.

The Warner contribution to the new work is "Murder Plane," which will tell a story of romance, melodrama and excitement in the air. Ronald Regain, Morgan Conway, Irene Rhodes, James Stephenson, Rosella Towne and Joe Cunningham are the leading players.

Paramount started "Tom Sawyer, Detective." The youngsters Donald O'Connor and Billy Cook, featured in "Sons Of The Legion," will be seen with Porter Hall, Phillip Warren, Janet Waldo, Elizabeth Risdon, Ed Pawley, William Haade and Clara Blandwick.

Newly formed Colonial Pictures started "Little Orphan Annie," theme of which is based on a cartoon strip, with Ann Gillis in the title role.

Paramount Completes Pair

Paramount accounted for two of the five completed pictures. Leading players in "Escape From Yesterday," romance and melodrama, are Akim Tamiroff, Frances Farmer, Leif Erickson and Lynne Overman. The support includes Vladamir Sokoloff, Wade Crosby, Dewey Robinson, William Newell, John Bliefer, Slex Woloshin and James Flavin. "Frontiersman," a Harry Sherman Hopalong Cassidy story, will present William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden, Evelyn Venable, William Duncan, Clara Kimball Young, Charles Hughes, Dickie Jones, Ray Barcroft, Emily Fitzroy and John Beach.

"Annabel Takes a Tour" was marked off the active list at RKO-Radio. Four who were featured in the first "Annabel" production, Lucille Ball, Jack Oakie, Bradley Page and Ruth Donnelly will be seen again in their original roles. The cast also includes Ralph Forbes, Alice White, Pepito, Donald MacBride, Jean Rouveral and Chester Clute.

Though the chances are strong that more work will be done on Samuel Goldwyn's "The Columbia, one of the few studios which had not listed a "series" picture among its future releases, now joins the parade with "Blondie." The productions will be based on the characters created by Chic Young. The comic strip, syndicated by King Features, is serviced to 250 newspapers daily. It appears in color in many Sunday supplements. Ten millions is estimated as the number who follow the feature. Richard Flournoy wrote the original screen play and Frank Strayer directed. Penny Singleton will play the role of "Blondie." Other players who will be seen are Arthur Lake, Dorothy Moore, Larry Sims as "Baby Dumplings," Danny Mummert, Gordon Oliver, Ann Doran and Gene and Katherine Lockhart.

The use of continuing cartoon serials is not a new idea as a source of motion picture production. Three strips, "Flash Gordon," "Buck Rogers" and "Dick Tracy," have been made as serials. Some time ago Warners made a film based on the exploits and adventures of "Harold Teen." A while back RKO-Radio brought "Little Orphan Annie" to the screen. Colonial Pictures is now engaged in telling her story again.

Other studios have taken up the cartoon strip idea. Warners contemplates a series based on the "Jane Arden" cartoon. Universal has bought the picture making rights to several popular cartoons.

Lady And The Cowboy," announcement was made that for all intents and purposes the picture is finished. Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon are the stars. Walter Brennan, Patsy Kelly, Mabel Todd, Fuzzy Knight, Harry Davenport and Henry Kolker comprise the featured support.

Universal finished "Service De Luxe." Constance Bennett, Vincent Price, Charles Ruggles, Helen Broderick, Joy Hodges and Mischa Auer are the principal personalities.

Made in 1914

The other day Irene Castle invited your correspondent over to RKO-Radio studio to see "The Whirl of Life," made in 1914. The picture, a silent, of course, tells a part of the life story of Mrs. Castle and her late husband, Vernon, from the time of their first meeting until their first great dancing triumph at Castle by the Sea.

A picture done in that hectic flamboyant fashion of pioneer production that was financed on buttons, wherein everyone points, waves and the villains grimaces in terrifying manner, the supermelodramatic "The Whirl of Life" is today ridiculously comic. Funny as it is, Mrs. Castle's running comments during the showing were funnier. Witty, sometimes satirical, particularly amusing was her description of how their Negro butler saved them from starving in Paris by teaching his French friends how to shoot craps; her words anent the heavies who couldn't ride horses and the detail of the big thrill scene wherein in the same sequences the waters of Lake Michigan and Long Island Sound were used for the same scene.

However, "The Whirl of Life" is an important item in the preparation of RKO-Radio's forthcoming picture, "The Castles," which will tell the story of the famous dancing couple. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers will be featured and it is likely that Mrs. Castle who was engaged as a story consultant, style designer and technical advisor will also be seen playing the part of her own mother.

Puppet Shows

As a result of the popular success of "Marionette Moviettes" which exploited "Marie Antoinette," MGM will prepare similar puppet shows to publicize other productions, the first of which will be "Sweethearts" and "The Great Waltz."

Plans have been made for a two-year tour of the United States and European countries with the "Marie Antoinette" moviettes, a travelling studio which consists of a theatre of 23 30-inch-tall marionettes. Seven scenes from the picture are played with the action synchronized to the sound track voices of Norma Shearer, Tyrone Power and the other performers.

The puppet shows to be used for "Sweethearts," "The Great Waltz" and other important productions will be on the same and perhaps larger scale.

Universal Building

Outgrowing present facilities, Universal studios will start at once upon a building program to speed up productions of its important new season pictures. Upwards of $1,000,000 has been appropriated to finance the construction of new stages and to purchase new equipment.

In addition to the building of two large air-conditioned sound stages, most of the present structures will be modernized. A new six-story administration building is included in the construction program.

Itemized

With the addition of "Man Trap" (Paramount), "The Wizard of Oz" (M-G-M) and "Desert Song" (Warner), the total number of pictures in Technicolor scheduled for production or already produced is now 14.

* * *

Sam Zimbalist, producer of "The Crowd Roars" and "Navy Blue and Gold," has signed a new long-term contract with MGM.

Time Capsule for 5,000 Years From Now Has Ramsaye Article

Friday, as this issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD rolls off an acre of presses in New York's Lafayette street, engineers of the Westinghouse Company are to be a-burying on the site of the World's Fair, a message "to tomorrow's five thousand years" including a deal about the motion picture and a letter to be opened in 6938 A. D., maybe, by "Professor X", archeologist, from Terry Ramsaye.

The project is known as "The Time Capsule," an eight hundred pound, cupralloy tube containing some of the lore and mementoes of our alleged civilization for the information of the Distant Future. For sake of compression most of the records are microphotographs on acetate film, and motion pictures.

The Time Capsule goes fifty feet into the Flushing mud, and in five thousand years is expected to sink fifty feet more. The archeologist of the Far Tomorrow is expected to learn about the existence of the capsule through survival of published matter, including some five thousand copies of a booklet to be distributed to the libraries of the world by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, giving its precise location—as by United States Geodetic Survey—through measurements to the fifth decimal place, sufficiently close to locate a point on the surface of the earth no larger than a quarter of an American alleged dollar. When Professor X gets there he has but to dig, maybe a hundred feet, and a little sideways allowing for continental drift. Then with a hacksaw he will be able to open the capsule and imbibe information about Us and Now. This is, from the viewpoint of Westinghouse, supposed to be a favor to the Future.

The idea obviously has a certain kinship to the vault of archives which Oglethorpe University has been assembling for some such future date. While Westinghouse would not, to be sure, officially make comment, it has been pointed out that the Oglethorpe vault, which depends on the "sportsmanship" of intervening years, is likely to share the fate of Tutenkhamon's tomb at the hands of the first swashbuckler who comes along in sequel to our era.

Because of the photographic and cinema nature of much of the record, the Capsule Committee of Westinghouse called upon the editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD to supply directions, principles and diagrams calculated to enable the recipient of the message-to-tomorrow to make and operate a motion picture projector, and to seek to make clear to him the nature of the cinematographic art. In this endeavour, and cognizant of high technological responsibility, Mr. Ramsaye compiled an expository dissertation mingling optics, mechanics, chemistry and sex. Important assistance came from the staff, including Mr. George Schutz, editor of Better Theatres, and the writings of Dr. C. E. K. Mees, head of the Research Laboratories of the Eastman Company.

While the Westinghouse experts, engineers all, the Capsule committee being advised especially by G. Edward Pendray, assistant to the president in charge of public relations—5,000 years of them—expressed approval, they apparently desired to supplement the social and biological information and included a microphotographic recording of the last issue of Mr. Fawcett's magazine entitled "True Confessions." Another enclosure to Professor X, contributed through the offices of Frederic Ullman, Jr., of Pathe News, was a selection of outstanding events of the last quarter of a century, edited by Allyn Butterfield.

Mr. Ramsaye's letter to Professor X, F.O.B. Tomorrow, A.D. 6938, closed with a conveyance of assurances of high esteem and "hoping this finds you as well as it leaves us at present."

Hicks to England

John W. Hicks, Paramount vice-president and foreign manager, sailed this Wednesday on the Washington for England, where he will continue studying a proposal for expansion of the company's theatre interests in England. The proposal involves Paramount's acquisition of an interest in a large British theatre circuit.

Silverstone on MPPDA Board

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America's board met last Friday and elected Murray Silverstone, United Artists chief executive, to membership on that body succeeding Harry D. Buckley.

Will H. Hays, president, reported on studio developments, particularly regarding the "Greatest Year" campaign.

Cosmocolor, New Two Color Process Is Demonstrated

Cosmocolor, newest of the two-color film processes, was given a demonstration before a small trade audience, at the projection rooms of Wilding Pictures Corporation in New York Tuesday.

The material shown was chiefly industrial including a one-reel subject on the new Plymouth car, made by the Wilding concern in Detroit.

The amusement industry has heard slightly and almost casually of the Cosmocolor process in connection with an experimental version of "A Western Welcome," a two-part RKO singing cowboy production. RKO released the picture in black and white, however, because of trade reasons, said to be principally the impracticality of a separate special campaign for a lone two-reeler.

The RKO experiment is perhaps attributable to the fact that Floyd Odum, personage in the RKO financial picture, is one of several "downtowners," meaning Wall Street, interested. Other financial interests are in Chicago and Detroit. Norman E. Wilding, president of the concern bearing his name and specializing in industrial picture production, is said to be interested only as a user of the process. Cosmocolor originated in Hollywood, the invention of Otto C. Gilmore, who has worked in color many years. David Blankenhorn is president of the company.

The demonstration of Cosmocolor made favorable impression upon the technical and professional members of the audience.

"The process and product present all of the merits of best specimens of the prior two-color systems and appear to escape many, probably most, of their faults and manipulative shortcomings," observed Terry Ramsaye, familiar with production in Kine-macolor, Prizma, Kellycolor and related processes.

Cosmocolor is made with a standard camera, with a simple special optical system of lenses and prisms, recording its two-color separation images in the area of a single standard frame, which is split horizontally. Standard panchromatic negative is used. The spectrum is covered by the familiar cinema two-color pair, an orange-red and a blue-green. Flesh tints, foliage and sky colors are adequate. The inescapable deficiency in rendition of purples and pure yellows is to be noted, and is admitted by Cosmocolor. This is held to be an unimportant factor in many phases of color work, especially when weighed against special facility and speed of production.

Cosmocolor works under normal lighting of black and white conditions. Prints are made after the manner of Prizma and kindred process, on positive stock bearing emulsion on both sides. Projection is by standard machines, without special adjustments.

Cosmocolor's prospects appear to be in the less exacting areas of the amusement screen, where three-color capacity is not demanded, and in such recording functions as the news-reel and industrial pictures where time and price are important. Special advantages in the 16 mm. field are claimed.

Howard Dietz on the State of the Art, as Recorded by Broun

Wherein the Fable of the Ostrich Is Applied

A ringing defense of the creative and artistic merits of the Hollywood motion picture by Howard Dietz of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been promulgated through the attentions of Heywood Broun in his syndicated column entitled "It Seems to Me."

Although Mr. Broun does not give us the details, it seems that he sat in adjacency to Mr. Dietz at dinner the other night and came away full of copy.

While the editorial page of Motion Picture Herald enjoys an acute disapproval of Mr. Broun's radical philosophies and such of his utterances as "Will Hays falls into Hitler tradition," it still must be said that he is a competent reporter. The subjoined material is reproduced by permission of the copyright owners including the New York World Telegram.—T. R.

by HEYWOOD BROUN

The man who sat directly across the table levelled an arresting finger in my direction. "What city," he asked, "constitutes in your opinion, the cultural capital of America?" Naturally I knew there was a catch in it, and so I didn't venture to mention Boston, New York or Emporia, Kan. "The cultural capital of America," said the speaker of the evening, "is Hollywood, Cal."

"Are you by any chance connected with the motion picture industry?" I inquired mildly. "It happens by a coincidence," he replied, "that I am a scenario writer, a producer and a publicity man for films, but I don't see what that has to do with the problem which I have propounded. You probably know that when any dogmatic opinion crystallizes in America the precise opposite to that belief is always certain to be true. The general impression prevails that Hollywood is inhabited by a collection of dopes and nitwits. I offer that in evidence as proof that the motion picture industry has gathered into itself the smartest men and women of America and of the world. Great minds are always humble, and that is one of the reasons why the intellectual capacities of Hollywood are underrated."

"Producers Are Apologetic"

"Motion picture stars are forever saying off the record, 'Of course, I'm nothing but a Hollywood ham.' Except in press releases about super-colossal enterprises, producers tend to become apologetic, and explain to visiting novelists 'You understand the handicaps under which we must work.' Authors vacationing in New York all use the line about turning out potboilers for the sake of dough. But the truth is that motion pictures have given the creative artist more opportunity for the full scope of his or her talent than any other art form in America. Painters and sculptors have to scurry around to dinners or tea parties to find some wealthy patron who will buy their wares."

"Short story writers are compelled to mold their stuff to some tight formula which the editor insists is what the public wants. There is motion picture censorship, and there are rules and regulations more or less voluntarily adopted by producers, but I ask you to compare the six best native plays or novels of any season with the six best films."

"Audiences All Over the World"

"It is my contention that you find a greater variety of subjects and far more facile imagination in the pictures than in the plays. This isn't just theory. The American drama is parochial in its point of view. Very rarely does an American play say anything of interest, even to a country as close to us in tradition as England."

"But American films find eager audiences all over the world. Name me, if you can, any play which can be compared to 'Snow White' as a creation with worldwide appeal. Disney has done more to increase the artistic stature of America than O'Neill, Odets, Kaufman, Connelly, Moss Hart and Sherwood rolled into one."

"It is monstrous that we should go around being humble about the creative forces in America when we can so readily and justly point with pride to the real leadership which Hollywood has taken in the development of the form and substance of the motion picture."

"Can you name any actor of the so-called legitimate stage who has as clear a claim to the big word 'genius' as Charlie Chaplin? For years people have been talking about national art and cultural expression in the terms of mass appeal. Of course, the job hasn't been done yet upon the screen, but a real beginning has been made. The thing has happened so quickly that we don't appreciate it."

Here the speaker paused for breath and said, "I will conclude with a parable. The ostriches called a convention, and 601 delegates were chosen. The last one arrived a little late, and as he scurried across the desert to get to the meeting the 600 in attendance were frightened by the noise and stuck their heads in the sand. The latecomer looked around and said dejectedly, 'Oh, there's nobody here.' And the moral, my friend, is that as soon as we get the sand out of our eyes we will begin to realize that in the craftsmen and artists of Hollywood we really have got something."

New York University Resumes Film Course

New York University this week resumes its course on "The Motion Picture: Its Artistic, Educational and Social Aspects," in cooperation with the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures.

The course will be conducted evenings at the University's Washington Square center by Professor Frederick M. Thrasher.

"Frankenstein" and "Dracula" Doubled; Children Barred

When Hamrick-Evergreen's Blue Mouse theatre double-billed Universal's "Dracula" and "Frankenstein," the Seattle Board of Theatre Censors barred children under 15, on the grounds that the "intense excitement" was harmful.

Charging 25 cents, the theatre is attracting one of the greatest crowds in several years.

Grand National's Lineup Is Ready

New Grand National expects to have its initial production schedule completed and available for announcement in Hollywood this week. E. W. Hammons, president, said on arriving in Hollywood from New York this week for conferences with Jack Skirball and Edward L. Alperson, vice president. Mr. Alperson declared that the company will have 44 features, 24 feature westerns and 44 shorts for 1938-39. Mr. Hammons will return to New York over the weekend after announcing the complete product lineup.

The three conferred with Franklyn Warner, Fine Arts Pictures president, over the setting of release dates for 26 pictures. Mr. Warner is producing for Grand National. Mr. Alperson will leave Friday for San Francisco to conduct a regional meeting of exchange heads, going from there to Chicago and New York for similar regional meetings.

Arrangements for British distribution of the company's product also may be completed next week. Grand National's current contract with Associated British Film Distributors expires this month and a new deal will be discussed with that company before any other arrangements are made, it was said.

Indications are that the New Grand National company will be a member of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

The company's owners are still searching for a new name.

Fox West Coast Theatres in Bond Reorganization Accord

Providing for an increase in the interest rate from three to four per cent, and the payment of $50,000 cash for the retirement of bonds, the holders of Fox West Coast Theatres first mortgage 6½ per cent bonds have come to an agreement with Fox West Coast Theatres Corporation, after a year of negotiations. Bonds outstanding total $352,000, most of them held by Spokane residents. On the bondholders' protective committee are W. M. Marshall, chairman; T. E. O'Connell, and George P. Hardgrove.

Deposit of bonds to the amount of $265,000 with the Spokane and Eastern bank is required to make the plan effective.

Republic's Share Increases In New Franchise Deals

Fifteen of Republic's 17 franchise holders have signed new five-year contracts calling for an increase of the company's share from gross receipts. The other two are in negotiation. All pacts, retroactive to July 1st, provide for a decreased percentage to the territorial distributor.

The company has obtained better representation in important key cities and the larger circuits for 1938-'39 than since its organization, James R. Grainger, president, said this week before he left New York for the coast. After conferring with Moe J. Siegel, executive producer at the studio, Mr. Grainger will make a tour of exchanges, returning east about October 15th.

MORE PARADES AND PROCLAMATIONS, PUBLICITY AND ADS AID CAMPAIGN

Hollywood Tying In "Industry Fashion Salon" with Manufacturers to Place Displays in Stores in 2,000 Cities

The "Motion Picture's Greatest Year" campaign rounded out its third week on Wednesday with widespread reports of bolstered box office receipts, and entered its fourth week with new developments moving at machine-gun rapidity.

"Bigger and better" ideas to aid in the campaign are being turned out by the national headquarters in New York. More and longer proclamations, parades and publicity in the press are being obtained by workers in the field. Hollywood is developing an even greater enthusiasm than heretofore, pooling its talents in united production efforts for special campaign reels.

The first annual "Motion Picture Industry Fashion Salon" will be undertaken by Hollywood for the campaign, tying in with national fashion manufacturers to place displays in stores in 2,000 cities and towns.

Ads Placed in 2,000 Newspapers

With the placing of 11 three-quarter and full-page advertisements in 2,000 daily newspapers in the United States and Canada, the first phase of the campaign's newspaper advertising activity has come to an end. With a total of $600,000 of the $1,000,000 budget earmarked for ads in the daily press, the advertising committee of the drive, comprising Howard Dietz, MGM; Robert Gillham, Paramount, and Charles McCarthy, Twentieth Century-Fox, met on Monday with representatives of Donahue and Coe, agency handling the ads, to discuss the second phase of the national advertising.

The advertising committee is collecting reports on reactions to and benefits of the ads to determine future policy.

A new series of national ads will be begun immediately after October 1st.

Indications are that the ads will be of smaller size than those of the first series, but will emphasize "go to the theatre" messages and the "Movie Quiz" prize contest, rather than the institutional topics on which the first ads were centered.

Donahue and Coe have completed the preparation of sample ads for the new series.

Publishers Also Contribute

The opening advertisements, according to the committee, have been supplemented by free advertisements of from one-quarter to full-page length contributed by newspaper publishers "as a concrete example of cooperation with and support of the drive."

More than 500 newspapers in 350 cities and towns have carried editorials complimenting the industry, and dozens of clippings continue to pour into the campaign's new headquarters, in the RKO Building, Rockefeller Center, every day.

Printers' Ink carried the campaign's message to general business advertisers, inviting Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner theatres, to explain the drive, "on the theory that what benefits the motion picture industry benefits all American industries."

For the first time in its history, the West Chester (Pa.) Daily Local News, working in

EQUITY MAKES "A SUGGESTION"

Actors Equity Association is still intent upon rebuilding the road—the legitimate theatre, and this week repeated its plea that Hollywood do something—financially and otherwise—to encourage and develop stock companies as a new source of talent for the screen.

Equity this week comes forth with the suggestion that the industry earmark part of the $1,000,000 being used in the "Motion Picture's Greatest Year" campaign to enlarge and develop the dramatic stock companies of the country. "And encourage, if not order, the stars (of Hollywood) now destined to illuminate the motion picture houses by personal appearances, to devote at least some part of their time to appearances in these stock productions."

Equity admits, of course, that the idea would also greatly benefit the legitimate theatre — considered by many an exhibitor as a competitor.

conjunction with the Board of Trade, published a 32-page edition on the campaign, tying in with local merchants for a general "Fall Better Business" drive. Eight special pages with bannerheads proclaimed the motion picture drive. Tommy Mangan, Warner manager in West Chester, handled details for the film business.

Wilmington, (Del.) newspapers are running eight-page special sections in daily and evening editions, using "Trade Follows the Movies" as a keynote.

Los Angeles and San Pedro, Cal., papers have free advertising banner lines.

With the idea of "maintaining the momentum of the boom opening," national headquarters on Monday issued to all theatre operators a new program intended to continue "consistent and unremitting activity." Exhibitors are urged to cooperate on the new move with local promotional committees or act individually.

The announcement reported near-completion of the special drive short subject, "The World Is Yours," which will be issued free to exhibitors participating.

Also concluded were arrangements for a "National Music Week" dedicated to the campaign, on a date to be set.

New Procedure Outlined

The new procedure recommended by national headquarters for use by theatre managers follows:

1. Hearty cooperation with Regional Exploitation Committees.

2. Use the movie quiz seal in all advertisements in:

a—Daily Papers.

b—Weeklies

c—Heralds

d—Billboard advertising

*e—Radio programs

f—Spot "Movie Quiz" posters

g—Cooperative newspaper advertising

*Tie in with campaign.

h—Decorate the front of your theatres and lobby

i—Proclamations by governors and mayors

j—Endorsement by Chambers of Commerce and other business organizations.

If space is too small to use movie quiz seal use a line referring to the contest or to Motion Pictures' Greatest Year.

3. Use lobby displays in lobbies, available at accessory headquarters calling attention to the movie quiz and Motion Pictures' Greatest Year. We hope to place before the public the great contribution that motion pictures are making in every community by furnishing vitally needed, wholesome recreation.

4. Use trailers on screen as many audiences do not yet know the details of the movie quiz contest. It is important, however, not to saturate the screen with messages, so that audiences become impatient.

5. Enthusiastic and free distribution of movie quiz booklets is very important. It must be remembered that in addition to inducing people to enter the movie quiz contest and to come back to your theatre, time after time, to see pictures, this booklet is a splendid herald for future productions. Very few are thrown away. Most patrons take them home and study them and will undoubtedly be reminded to go to a number of pictures referred to. Some theatres seem to be making it very difficult for patrons to get these booklets. For example, the advertising manager of The Christian Science Monitor was put to considerable trouble in getting a movie quiz booklet from a certain theatre. Many theatres are equipping their ushers with a small canvas bag with the name "Movie Quiz Booklets" on the outside so that it is very easy for any patron to secure one of them.

6. When press departments send credits of current pictures to reviewers and editors of the daily papers, please have them include in these credits the line "A Movie Quiz Picture."

7. In preparing feature stories for program changes, include a line referring to Motion Pictures' Greatest Year as a part of the story. It can be done logically without seeming to be dragged in if a little ingenuity is exercised. By this means almost every feature story in the Saturday and Sunday papers can be turned into a feature story for Motion Pictures' Greatest Year.

Hollywood increased its activity this week when, for the first time, the major studios pooled their designing talent for the "Motion Picture Industry's First Annual Fashion Salon." If successful the plan will probably be sponsored annually by the industry "so as to arouse a consumer consciousness of the creativeness of Hollywood, highlighting American styles for American women."

One Manufacturer to a Field

The plan provides for the licensing of one fashion manufacturer in every branch of that field to provide merchandise for one store in each of 2,000 cities and towns, tying in with the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" and using as a basis for styling the designs of Hollywood studio stylists. Sidney Davidson, of the staff of Paul Gulick, national campaign coordinator in New York, is arranging for the fashion show and tieups.

The stores selected will present the merchandise in a cooperative campaign featuring the stars wearing the merchandise representing all of the producers in the drive.

Mr. Gulick said it is the first arrangement of its kind involving all studios and the fashion manufacturers. The clothing people and the stores, it is said, stand to benefit by a spurt of activity in retail sales. The manufacturers are now being lined up. The apparel and accessories will be ready in a month, along about the half-way mark of the drive. Theatres locally will tie in direct. A special campaign book will be issued. Special stories and features will be issued to the press so that they may tie in.

To complete arrangements, an official call will be made on the fashion experts of the nine companies in the drive to attend a meeting at the offices of the MPPDA.

Department Stores Cooperate

Independent of the fashion move, department stores throughout the country already are featuring studio styles in cooperation with the drive.

National campaign headquarters reported Monday that some 35,000,000 "Movie Quiz" booklets have been distributed to date in the U. S. and Canada. An additional 10,000,000 has been ordered.

Childs' 90 restaurants throughout the U. S., catering to several hundred thousands weekly, may aid the campaign by turning over space on all menus to the drive during November. Besides a photomontage of shots of "Nickelodeon" days and of a present-day studio, the publicity will announce "Cavalcade of America," the feature being made under supervision of the MPPDA as a gift to the 1939 World's Fair in New York.

Fans who have entered the $250,000 Movie Quiz sponsored by Motion Pictures' Greatest Year, need not be concerned about the five errors that a checkup has revealed in the contest booklet, the Committee advises exhibitors. These errors involve the answers on the following pictures, "Gateway," "The Texans," "The Crowd Roars," "Girls on Probation" and "Give Me a Sailor," and came about in various ways, some typographical, others because the pictures had not been completed at the time the booklets were published. The committee has decided that no matter what answers are made regarding these five pictures the answers will be adjudged correct.

Contestants will be informed by a screen announcement to follow the main titles of the five pictures. In addition, the committee is preparing a 22 x 28-inch lobby poster.

Registered Mail Accepted

National campaign headquarters announced Monday that contestants in the Movie Quiz can send their answers by registered mail, if desired. "By this method," it was said, "entrants are assured of positive delivery with no possibility of error, delay or slip-up." A receipt may be obtained at the Post Office.

Abraham Siegel, who has been connected with motion pictures for years, tied up this week with the campaign, through national headquarters, to sell to exhibitors miniature busts of leading players at ten cents, top, apiece. The idea is to give away the statuettes in place of the regular premium.

Labeled "Official souvenir of Motion Picture's Greatest Year," the busts stand four inches high and are made of marble dust in composition. Sidney Davidson, of the campaign staff, made the arrangement, to which Warners and Columbia have subscribed so far.

House Organs Aid

Organization publications of Columbia, MGM, Paramount, RKO, United Artists, Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner and Monogram hereafter will feature editorials and news-items on the campaign, under an arrangement worked out Monday by Louis Berg, of national campaign headquarters.

National headquarters has another publicity

HORWITZ WARNS OF FALSE CONTEST ADVERTISING

M. B. Horwitz, Motion Pictures' Greatest Year chairman in Cleveland, has had it brought to his attention that in some localities newspapers are accepting advertisements which claim to sell correct solutions to the Movie Quiz Contest questions. Mr. Horwitz has brought to the attention of local newspapers the fact that such advertisements are fake, and suggests that exhibitors in other territories contact their newspapers in order to forestall acceptance of such advertising matter.

aid in the form of a set of about 15 one-sheet posters, bearing the general title: "Story of the Movies," showing scenes from films of the olden days and of old theatres. These are for use in department and other store windows, later going to schools, libraries and the like, and opening first in Macy's, New York.

Copies of the campaign's electrically-transcribed 15-minute radio program, featuring the recordings of songs from musicals of the past few years, will be shipped to campaign exchanges this week. They also contain a brief introduction by Will H. Hays and announcements of the Movie Quiz. James Clark, in charge of physical distribution of campaign accessories, is in charge. The transcriptions are available to exhibitors at $1.50 apiece, for planting on local radio stations.

Radio Helps

George McCall, of "Hollywood Screen-scoops," film-news narrator on the Old Gold program over CBS, is now giving three minutes each Thursday night to boost the campaign, using stars to give the message. Gabe Yorke, of the Hollywood campaign staff, made this arrangement, which adds to the many radio tieups already effected.

Ross Federal Service this week instructed all of its field managers and staff to offer their services to local campaign workers.

Broadway heard this week that some 8,000,000 answers are expected on the Movie Quiz.

Quiz Booklets are being printed in French for Canada.

COUNCIL STUDIES PLAN TO ENTER "MOVIE QUIZ"

Any prize which might be won by a member of the Wilmington city council in the current "Movie Quiz" contest would be given to the needy families on relief, under a plan suggested by John J. Anderson, councilman.

Mr. Anderson urged that every council member enter the $250,000 competition and put forth his best efforts to win an award.

"Let's go to the pictures and, above all, don't forget to enter the quiz contest and maybe help those whom we have on relief," Mr. Anderson said.

participating in the industry drive, National Screen Service has devised a method of distributing trailers on pictures involved in the campaign.

Individual quiz seal trailers will hereafter be used, costing exhibitors 15 cents apiece, to be attached to the regular trailers where exhibitors are in on the campaign. Originally, it was planned to incorporate in the trailer of every picture included in the contest a seal reading: "This is a Movie Quiz picture," but the plan was abandoned because some exhibitors using National's trailers are not campaign participants.

First formal word from a major company head that the campaign is helping business came this week in a letter from John Balaban, head of Balaban and Katz, Chicago, controlled by Paramount, to George J. Schaefer, executive chairman of the drive.

Operating scores of theatres in the midwest, Mr. Balaban, whose brother, Barney, is Paramount president, wrote Mr. Schaefer that, "While the benefit accruing to our box offices because of the Movie Quiz is intangible, I am happy to say that not a few of our managers are of the opinion that the contest has stimulated their business."

Attendance Gains Cited

National campaign headquarters in New York still lacked official figures this week on the percentage of business increase for the country as a whole since the campaign started on September 1st. Last week the committee reported sporadic checks on some large territories which indicated that business was up in some places from 20 to 45 per cent. MOTION PICTURE HERALD, in an independent survey, estimated a general over-all increase of 10 per cent for the entire country.

Y. Frank Freeman, in charge of Paramount theatre operations, involving in excess of 1,200 houses, reported this week that attendance has shown a steady improvement since the opening of the drive.

Oklahoma City first run theatres reported that grosses during the campaign have jumped from an average weekly take of $17,200, to about $20,000.

The first weeks of the campaign have stimulated patronage at southern California theatres far beyond advance expectations, reports Charles P. Skouras, operating several hundred Fox West Coast and National Theatres.

He said that the campaign will have "permanent results" in creating interest for the screen.

Theatre attendance in the St. Louis territory has increased because of the drive, according to Fred Wehrenberg, president of the Missouri MPTO.

With some 200 community drives, involving exhibitors, merchants, press and others, now under way in behalf of the campaign, the week witnessed two outstanding promotions. By official agreement, Broadway this week was renamed Hollywood Boulevard, and Hollywood Boulevard in Hollywood was renamed Broadway, the stunt bringing out local government chiefs, and a satisfactory number of reporters, newspaper cameramen and newsreels, in both places. The proclamation effected the change for 24 hours.

In Hollywood, banners proclaiming the drive got equal representation with "Welcome Legionnaires" on the occasion of the American Legion's annual convention.

McFaul on Committee

Vincent R. McFaul of Buffalo Theatres, Buffalo, N. Y., is a member of the New York committee for the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign. The list of committees by states was published last week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

ENGLAND NOW LOOKS TO A "GO TO THE MOVIES" CAMPAIGN OF ITS OWN

But Move Advocated by Some Leading Exhibitors and Distributors Would Face Skepticism of Others; Problems Differ

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The glittering splendour of the U. S. box office drive—for that is what it seems to this side of the Atlantic—plus the stark reality of the long standing and present slump at the British box office, once again has stirred up in the minds of a sober trade minority the wonder whether what is proving sauce for the American goose might not very well prove a palatable sauce for the English gander. Succinctly, the idea of a "go to the movies" campaign is experiencing a sectional revival in Great Britain.

The idea of a national advertising campaign is not new. It experiences periodic phases of rebirth and dismissal, and is subject to a species of amateur midwifery whenever the ticket machines of the nation's picture theatres decelerate their material rhythms. Now, however, thanks to those twin factors already mentioned, it has come to the forefront of trade discussions, and it is not unlikely that once again endeavours will be made to bring it into the sphere of practical trade politics.

Though thus far the question of a natural trade campaign has not been placed on the agenda of the contemporary, somewhat protracted, and, so far, rather infecund talks of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and Kinematograph Renters Society, evidence is forthcoming that CEA circles once again will see a revival of an idea or principle long and frequently derided and dismissed.

Problem of Expense

Despite the backing of the more enlightened exhibitor circles, and an approval more than merely grudging from certain distributors, it is dubious whether any advertising campaign or corporate plan for ballyhoo will be achieved with united trade support.

The CEA already have dismissed a scheme submitted to them for the setting up a trade press and publicity bureau, on the grounds of expense. The same objection to spending even an infinitesimal amount of money on a project which does not immediately place a material exchange into the hands of the investor, plus a lingering conviction that anything which has the support of the renter should be shunned by the exhibitor, are likely again to sway the discussions in the now periodic direction of an inconclusive stalemate.

Rowson Urges Action

Not least important of the advocates of united action has been Simon Rowson, film trade statistician, who recently revived the proposal he placed before the Eastbourne Conference in 1936. More than ever convinced of the need of action by his 1938 examinations of trade statistics, Mr. Rowson, advocating the renewal of his plan, estimates the cost of a wholehearted advertising effort at the low figure of £100,000 ($500,000). Such a campaign, he avers, would bring into the regular box office fold two and half million new patrons every week, and swell the trade's exchequers to the tune of £5,000,000 ($25,000,000) per annum. Its cost, he has declared, would set the exhibitor back only a half-penny in every pound he receives, or, conversely, twopence in every pound he pays for film hire.

WOULD BAR JUVENILES FROM ALL "A" FILMS

Vast numbers of the public, suggests Mr. Rowson, who has gone deeply into the mathematics of the problem, stay away from the picture house. Sixty per cent of the population over sixteen years of age never attends cinemas at all. This untouched spending power, he contends, would provide the five million pounds which could and would be translated into box office takings.

Reflection of Conditions

Mr. Rowson's collected and mathematically reasoned plea has sounded readily on the ears of those students of trade affairs who see production costs rising and profit margins narrowing, who see the current redundancy wave and have financial record of the depleted and depleting box office returns which mark the average picture house budget, save in the case of the all too few outstanding presentations. The competition of football pools and greyhound tracks, of speedways and ice rinks, all-in wrestling and the multitudinous entertainment enterprises open to the working class patron, indicate that an effort to attract the wanderer in the fanfare of showmanship, might not only prove an investment well worth the expenditure of a reasonable sum, but is in fact overdue.

Among the more ready supporters of a trade campaign is Francis Harley, Twentieth Century-Fox chief in Great Britain, who has lent his weight and the backing of his corporation to any such campaign as might be launched by a united trade front. Mr. Harley agrees that what is good for the United States is equally good here, if not more so, in the face of an even more urgent trade situation. He has advocated, since it is his belief that both renter and exhibitor would benefit, the formation of a united trade committee to go into and organize the matter of a national campaign with the use of slogans aimed at stimulating picture house attendances.

Even the British Film Institute, uplift body sponsored with moneys extracted by the Government from the trade's Sunday cinemas, has not disdained to offer its modest if highminded contribution, and has declared its intention of making a campaign to encourage the appreciation of films, one of the planks on its new season's platform. The BFI already has declared its intention to form a statistical bureau, from which figures and takings and attendances would be available to assist the reading of a trade barometer.

Skepticism to Combat

None the less it remains dubious even with this variegated championship whether the cause will see its apotheosis. On the exhibitor side predominantly, skepticism mingled with complete indifference, is likely to sway the discussion, especially since if any backing is forthcoming for the renter partisans, it is most likely to be from the circuits.

Trade conditions here, of course, differ somewhat from those in the United States and any campaign would have to take a different form, to concentrate on boosting filmgoing in general rather than attendances at selected product. Ownership of the larger theatres by producer renters is not on the same scale this side of the Atlantic as on the other, and revenue from an advertising campaign would not go so directly into the lap of the investor. Flat rate bookings, too, are offered to the majority of clients by certain distributors, who, in turn, would not immediately benefit.

Circuit Campaign Suggested

A joint distributor circuit campaign has been suggested in certain quarters as a compromise, but no support obviously would be forthcoming from the great bulk of independents.

British trade interests have seldom been ready or willing to take the long view. The sectional battle over grading, which aimed at increase of rentals rather than of trade generally, the seeming inability of both sides to agree on joint action over redundancy, the constantly changing phantasmagoria of trade views and opinions manifest before, during, and even after the Films Act processes, the sharp and naked gap which exists in CEA circles themselves, separating circuits from independents, the recurrent disagreements and disunities, sectionally and generally, which make trade politics here, do not augur well for any joint trade campaign bent on increasing general goodwill and stimulating patronage as a whole.

National publicity campaigns have been waged here with marked and universal effect by the millers, the brewers, the railways and the dairy farmers, to mention but a few. The film trade yet shows no sign of willingness to follow in their footsteps.

FBI Considers Disbanding

A state of crisis faces the FBI Films group. A special meeting summoned September 26th will consider a proposal to wind up the group if further finances are not forthcoming. The withdrawal of important producers such as E. G. Maxwell, the apathy of others and the refusal of still others to pay the heavy subscriptions, plus a secession of short subject producers, have rendered the work of the FBI abortive.

A new influx of U. S. production, by concentration on triple quota films, reducing the requisite British film supplies, gradually is pushing British producers to the background.

Dean Leaves ATP Studios

Basil Dean, executive head of Associated Talking Pictures Studio, which he founded in 1931, has severed his connection with that organization, as well as with Associated British Film Distributors, Ltd.

British Lion Film Corporation last week reported profit for the year ended March 31, 1938, at £15,498 ($77,490), which compares with a loss of £14,016 last year.

Western Electric has announced a reduction in service charges this year in London.

ON FILM REVIEWS AND DOUBLE BILLS

FILM REVIEWERS AND FILM CRITICS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

Re your lead editorial, "Criticism," in the September 3rd issue:

You know, there is a certain amount of confusion that arises, in discussing the function of the film critic, out of the fact that the terms we begin with are ill-defined.

Is a film reviewer per se a film critic? Ought he be one? Do newspaper and magazine readers want one? In other words, do most readers want to read film reporting, film reviewing, or film criticism?

I'd suggest these definitions:

FILM REPORTER—One who reports on the arrival of a film and tells what it is about.

FILM REVIEWER—One who reports its arrival, tells what it's about, evaluates its entertainment quality, and discusses it as much as he likes, never forgetting that what it's about and how entertaining it is are the things Constant Reader wants to know.

FILM CRITIC—One who discusses a film or a group of films or a trend in film from a literary, artistic, technical or "intellectual" viewpoint—to the exclusion of its entertainment and story outline elements.

One man can certainly be all three, but with readers reading as they run, the reporting should be an advance notice of the film's coming, the reviewing its morning-after account, and its criticism reserved for the Sunday Supplement fans.

In the case of weeklies and monthlies, heaven help us—two and three must be combined.

From the letters we get here at Cue, from telephone conversations with readers, and discussions in and out of the office, we are pretty thoroughly sold on the idea that readers are mostly interested in reading film reviews, not film criticism. Readers who are interested in the technique of film-making, the artistic valuations involved, are definitely in the minority, and they can be satisfied in a weekly column set apart from the regular reviews.

The battle that rages along the newspaper front on Art vs. Entertainment in motion picture reviewing is too lively a fight to remain long confined to the critical gentry. The motion picture industry is vitally interested.

But has anyone heard yet from the guinea pig, most interested—the reader?

Until a few years ago, I was a "reader" instead of a "writer." Today, I am one of those eager reviewers bursting with a desire to find fault and criticize and go arty on pictures. But I am continually restrained from plunging into this delightful pastime by the fact that until quite recently I was the Man in the Street at whom the pictures were aimed.

I can't help it. Hollywood save me, I've still got the viewpoint and reaction of a cash customer.

For years I paid my way into movie theatres to be entertained. Occasionally, to be sure, I'd amuse myself by going arty and tearing a picture to pieces. But those things come secondarily.

Then came Artistic Reaction.

Then, a little later and more thoughtfully, arrived Erudite Criticism.

It was a great game. And in that same order, the movies still affect me.

I believe that is how they affect most other people—certainly those outside the immediate sphere of the film industry and its various sidelines.

And most reviewers, I have found, have a similar viewpoint.

For four years I have been reviewing pic-

PRODUCERS PLEDGE AMERICANISM AID

Homer Chillaux, director of the American Legion Committee on Americanism, was pledged the co-operation of Hollywood producers today by Darryl Zanuck, who presided over a luncheon given in his honor at the Cafe de Paree on the studio lot. Mr. Zanuck declared that a stubbed toe in the film industry is front page news.

tures for Cue. As its editor (now motion picture editor and film reviewer) I have maintained a balanced reporting viewpoint toward pictures which seem to meet approval and needs of our 40,000 subscriber-families. They are typical of better-income groups in the metropolitan district, and might normally be considered more finicky than average-groups. Yet our reporting formula seems to please them.

We feel here that if a picture fails to entertain, it is open to criticism. We judge it frankly as entertainment. If it slips up there, then, and only then I feel I have the right to investigate and uncover its faults—to see wherein and why it failed to do the entertainment job its patrons are paying their good money for.

Incidentally, good film reporting obviously should include an outline of what the story is about. Because . . . readers do not always agree with us. And a reader who disagrees need not be classified as a fathead, either. He may just like herring, while we like, well, tuna fish, or something.

Most readers prefer to make up their own minds.

Sound reviewing is sound reporting. We don't always attain it, but that is the standard we should aim at, space, editorial handicaps, and acts of God permitting.

Good taste and honesty are pre-requisites in any recommended picture.

Seeing as many pictures as we do is apt to make all of us film reviewers Art Cinema Conscious. But it is a synthetic and vicarious exhilaration. More dangerously, it is apt to build up a barrier between the professional film reviewer and the amateur movie-goer, The Man in the Street, which may make our reviewer's reports worthless as appraisals of films.

And that is what they should be.—Jesse ZUNSER, Motion Picture Editor and Reviewer, Cue, New York City.

DOUBLE FEATURES —AND SHEEP

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I have noted with a great deal of interest the general movement for boosting theatre attendance through national advertising, through contests and prizes, all of which does not seem of much sense to me.

I'm not an efficiency engineer who has a cure-all for businesses he knows nothing about and usually results in less efficiency and more expense. I've tried them myself to discover I would have been better off without them. I'm not a wizard either, but just claim to have common horse sense to analyze facts and try to find the answer.

By far the major trouble with the motion picture theatre attendance is that the public have been over-fed with poor or mediocre films, and possibly the greatest offense of theatre owners is the double feature, which to the average patron nauseates them whether they realize it or not.

When a person gets a job in a candy factory or store, the owner usually encourages the newcomer to eat all they want, and it won't be but a few days until the individual is fully cured to let the sweets alone. This is true of any diet also—forced idleness works the same way on an individual to a point where they rave to go to work. Too much of any sport or hobby works the same way.

Another boomerang against attendance besides mediocre pictures is the sameness of length. When you analyze it, it's really funny why and how every picture is made exactly six or seven reels when some of them would be fair subjects in one or two reels, but usually stimulate sleep when drawn out into double or triple the length they should be.

I know the excuse is that "the house next door does it and so we must follow suit," and consequently both are on the road to oblivion. Funny, how sheep follow the ram, even to the slaughter-house.—H. A. DeVRY, President, DeVry Corporation, Chicago, Ill.

Heimbucher Appoints Hunter

Victor G. Heimbucher, president of Screenland and Silver Screen, has appointed Paul C. Hunter, publisher and vice-president of both publications. Robert L. Johnson, of R. L. Johnson, Inc., who was formerly vice-president and advertising director of Time magazine, has been retained by Screenland and Silver Screen in an advisory capacity.

Sam E. Morris, Warners' vice-president in charge of foreign activities, sailed for London Wednesday on the Queen Mary, to supervise final arrangements for the opening of the new Warner theatre in London on October 12th.

Barney Ballaban, Paramount's president, and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, will leave for the coast on September 30th on their annual fall visit.

It was directed by Vyvyan Donner, with Ilka Chase doing the commenting. Called "Fashion Forecast," Truman Talley's Movietone News plans to make four each year.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Hollywood's version of a modern automobile, as conceived by Dave Selznick for scenes in his "Young at Heart," is a super-colossal, ultra-long streamliner that has no handles on the doors—they open at the press of a button; the roof lights up when the doors swing out; the dashboard is a solid mass of instruments, doodads and gadgets; there is room for five persons in the front seat, and in the back there is a mechanical refrigerator and a set of dishes for serving food. There is a radio and a phonograph record player. He calls it "The Flying Wombat."

Associated Press reports from Scottsbluff, Nebraska, that the Police Department bought a camera to take pictures for the Rogue's Gallery, but "mugging" six prisoners with the new equipment, broke it. The cops, added A. P., wailed about the toughness of their prisoners—and sent the camera back to the shop for repairs. It's the oldest joke in the history of photography.

Hollywood producers who occasionally blast off against star salaries might do well to take a look into conditions met by Twentieth Century-Fox Film when a number of players they had just signed objected to being paid in money for their talents.

When a Fox filming expedition penetrated British Tanganyika, in the wild African jungle, a year ago, the Masai tribesmen used in the scenes demanded that at least part of their earnings be paid in copper wire. The other day a shipment of copper wire was sent over to settle the obligation.

The Masai women use the wire for decorations, the men have numerous uses for it. Next to cattle, wire is the most valuable commodity in the community.

Mrs. Lillian Kelley, in St. Joseph, Mo., won a plate at a local movie house the other night and went to the hospital as a result. She fell, breaking the dish and severing an artery in her right arm.

Washington's Variety Club of motion picture and theatrical membership, has bought a baby incubator for the Capital's Sibley Hospital.

As the European war guns rumble around national boundaries in protection against possible invasion, we come across the trade headline of just 20 years ago which told of a Philadelphia exhibitor being fined $50 for switching on his out-front lights in violation of the U. S. war emergency "Lightless Night" order, which was so widely prevalent at the time to conserve fuel and protect large cities against sudden air raids on this side.

ADD TO the "Cub who couldn't see the story":

The city editor of the Lincoln Nebraska State Journal sent a cub in the amusements division out to cover an old fiddlers' contest at a local radio station. When the cub returned, he announced nothing newsworthy had occurred.

"But the funniest thing happened," he later volunteered. "One of those old fiddlers couldn't see very well. He mistook a plate glass window for the door and walked through it."

"Will it be too much to expect prohibition to come into vogue in entire India? asks the Journal of the Motion Picture Society, of Bombay. "Though not today or tomorrow," the editors continue, "it will surely come and that day will be the golden day for the films—not to say for Tea, which is getting popular wherever prohibition is practised."

"Some day," observes the St. Louis Times, "we'll be able to tell our grandchildren about the tough time we had balancing the budget and casting 'Gone with the Wind!'"

When Paramount's Hollywood studio sent word the other day to the home office that Mr. L. M. Crawford, 93-year-old Wichita, Kansas exhibitor, who started in the theatre business 58 years ago, was a visitor on the lot, we asked to see some photographs of the old Mississippi River pioneer for possible use in the pictorial section of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. It was Mr. Crawford's first visit to Hollywood, and a 93-year-old who has been in the theatre business for 58 years, and continues on with 40 theatres, is pictorial news.

However, when Paramount in New York telegraphed Paramount in Hollywood to rush on Mr. Crawford's photo, they received word instead that they hadn't known the exhibitor had been in the studio until days after he had left. A package boy from the mailing room had escorted him around the place.

National Broadcasting wasn't satisfied with neon for the lighting of their new Hollywood broadcasting studio now taking shape. Instead they hit upon zeon. It will run 300 feet along the terrace on Sunset Boulevard, and light in three different shades. That, they say, produces a magenta effect which is "designed to bring out the natural blush of a girl's cheek"—and in Hollywood.

Deviating a while from his duties of operating the Trimble and Tabb theatres at Mount Sterling, Kentucky, Nelson Ward discovered what he claims is a sure cure against mosquitos for those front-porch folk who like to sit and rock and rock.

Mr. Ward found that mosquitos, and all night bugs, are charmed into leaving one alone by colored lights. He has been striving for years to make his front porch safe for democracy against battling mosquitos and bugs that have high blood pressure.

The lights may be any color, green, red, blue, yellow or even lavender, for those who like lavender. Mosquito-enemy Ward explains that mosquitos and bugs are very moody creatures and only happy when in the dark or else around a white light. Colored lights make them become very depressed and they want to go away or just sulk in a corner. Some even go home.

Mr. Ward is now experimenting with flies and hopes to be able to drive them away, too. We'll report on his fly findings later.

S. A. Lynch and his Paramount Enterprises in Florida have a bill in hand for $15,000 for a single palm tree.

The tree had stood in front of the Ponce de Leon Hotel, in Miami, and when Mr. Lynch was having the circuit's Paramount theatre remodeled, nearby, workmen are said to have cut the palm down, for which the hotel management wants Mr. Lynch to reimburse them for $15,000.

B. Goodwillie has been appointed eastern manager of national advertising for Scripps-Howard newspapers. This business could use him for its "go to the movies" campaign.

Once Charles Laughton was cast in a play in which he had to wear smart clothes and go around the stage kissing the women. Wearing smart clothes was one thing for baggy-pants Laughton. Kissing the women was too much, and so, when he arrived home after the opening night in a state of despair—according to his own narrative in Atlantic Monthly—he said to Elsa, his wife: "They'll never stand for this. I have a face like an elephant's and in this play I have to do the big sex act." Elsa turned to him in a flash, like the proverbial tiger, and whipped out: "How dare you presume you are unattractive! Hold your shoulders back, keep your head up and smile, so that I can hold my head up among women." Laughton has been thinking he's a real goodlooker ever since.

Like the motion picture's distributor-circuits, manufacturers are rushing into print to the defense of the chain store system. Now if the chain stores rush to the defense of their customers that would be something.

John Nesbitt is using a bunch of rats as actors in his "Passing Parade" short for Metro, and, "since motion picture's hot lights might injure the tender albino eyes of the rats, if kept under the lights too long," says MGM, they have bought 72 rats, instead of the 36 required, and the additional number is to act as "stand-ins for their more fortunate brothers."

Bob Hope, Paramount funnyman, wagered a group of cronies in Hollywood that he could play 180 rounds of golf in a day. A good day's average would allow for about 54, playing an 18-hole round in the morning and 36 in the afternoon.

The skeptical golfers and a good sized audience arrived at Lakeside Country Club out California way, and when the stage was set, Bob walked to the first tee accompanied by 11 caddies and a sack of 100 golf balls. He used ten balls on each of the 18 holes. As each ball sped away a caddy went after it. The 11th caddy carried Hope's clubs. He played nine holes in the morning and nine in the afternoon, ten balls to the hole, rounding out 180 holes in just three hours, ten minutes.

But he did not collect the bets—his unorthodox method of playing causing such a yell on the course as to make it advisable for Mr. Hope to seek shelter elsewhere.

Girl's School

(Columbia)

Comedy Melodrama

Columbia offers here a distinct novelty in screen entertainment susceptible of no less novel exploitation. The title is accurately descriptive. The story deals exclusively with life as it is lived and learned by 'teen age girls in an upper middle class school, and the cast is preponderantly feminine. Unlike certain previous works in general kind, this one concerns itself with normal, wholesome emotions and makes a number of commonsense, legitimate points. There is no struggling for sensationalism, and exhibitor advertising representing the attraction as a faithful treatment of the titularly indicated subject matter should prove most profitable if carefully phrased to avoid association of this film with "Maedchen in Uniform" and things like that.

Anne Shirley as the scholarship student whose duties as monitor make her unpopular with paying classmates, and Nan Grey as the snobbish daughter of wealth whose night spent out of bounds she reports to the faculty, have the outstanding roles and handle them excellently. Gloria Holden, Marjorie Main and Cecil Cunningham portray distinct types of instructresses graphically without caricaturing them, Miss Holden achieving a classic bit during Ralph Bellamy's single sequence in the film. Noah Beery, Jr., Kenneth Howell and Pierre Watkin are the other men necessary to the romantic side of the story, which is formal.

Tess Slesinger's story, prepared for the screen by herself and Richard Sherman, is an intelligent recording of the small jealousies, story book ideals, mercurial joys and wracking heartbreaks that animate the senior class of a small college at graduation time. The girl who stays out all night is to elope with the young man in the case and the girl who reports her is brutally treated by her classmates in reprisal. She succeeds in bringing the other girl's separated parents together, and the understanding father squares things for his daughter by giving the school a new library, but gets the monitor in trouble again by sending her flowers, which his own daughter charges her with stealing. The matter is straightened out in a series of incidents which build up genuine audience suspense while depicting the maturing of adolescent understanding.

John Brahm's direction is accountable for complete coherency throughout all the involved story kinks ironed out by a screenful of characters. It is a Samuel Marx production and a shipshape job in every particular.

Mr. Doodle Kicks Off

(RKO Radio)

Football Comedy

They go about making these seasonal football pictures in two ways. Either they're deadly serious as the good old college try is interpreted or the fall gridiron sport and its willing or unwilling heroes are burlesqued. RKO-Radio's item on the schedule adapts the second type of technique. Most of it is funny; there are only one or two serious moments. There's a bit of love, a little music and a lot of action. Playing in typical Penner style, Joe Penner is the star.

Son of a football fanatic, "Doodle Bugs" is sent back to college under instructions to make the football team. "Doodle," preferring to be a swing band leader, wants nothing to do with such rough games as football. But the old man, "Elory," offers the school a big endowment if "Doodle" can make the team and be instrumental in beating its hated rivals. All connected with the institution, president, coaches, instructors, members of the team, student body and eventually fair coed "Janice," want the endowment and all are rung into the plot to make a football hero out of the unwilling victim.

Comedy reigns as he musses up the first game which, nevertheless, is won. Later, "Janice," resenting the deception to which the man she loves is being subjected, almost gives the plot away. She is prevented from doing so, but at the height of a crucial game, he discovers it himself. He walks off the field and the outlook is dark until, in the closing moments, "Doodle" gets full of the old school spirit, love and desire for personal vindication, returns to triumph.

The regularity with which football pictures, no matter what basis they adapt, come around, has given everyone who plays them plenty of ideas as to how to sell them. All the old stunts can be brought up for reuse and there is no limit to topical modernized versions that can be made of them.

Previewed in Pantages Theatre, Hollywood. The Los Angeles patronage, now warming up to the annual football hysteria, seemed to be favorably inclined towards this demonstration. It was heard on several sides that this was Joe E. Penner's most amusing picture.—Gus McCarthy.

Touchdown Army

(Paramount)

(West Point Comedy Melodrama)

A large part of this story about the smart guy made a man at West Point derives from the stock room and shows the Cadets at drill, in graduation and on the gridiron battling Navy. These constitute stirring material. Into and around them has been woven a fiction comedy melodrama that Paramount or somebody made in another year with other players under this or another title, although this is down as an original story and screen play by Lloyd Corrigan and Erwin Gelsey. It doesn't say when.

John Howard is given top billing but plays the suitor who doesn't win the major's daughter, played by Mary Carlisle. Robert Cummings plays the brash football hero who does. Most of the incidental content has to do with the smart aleck's conditioning treatment by fellow Cadets.

He wins the game in the closing seconds of play after being flown from quarters to the stadium in an Army plane when the girl convinces the commandant the boy didn't really cheat in exams. Into the whirlwind finish of the game is worked a new version of the half-back who ran the wrong way. This gets pretty exciting.

The film is the work of Edward T. Lowe, associate producer, and the staged portions directed by Kurt Neumann are adroitly matched with the stock stuff. Raymond Hatton achieves distinction in a comedy character assignment. Benny Baker is effective as the smart aleck's roommate. Timeliness and the West Point flavour are the picture's chief box office assets.

The Night Hawk

(Republic)

Melodrama

A fresh angle on the newspaperman racket-buster entertainment idea is developed in "The Night Hawk." As the paper must go to press no matter what is eliminated, the story concerns itself almost completely with the adventures of a reporter in his brushes with outlaw forces. While melodrama is the principal ingredient, romance and comedy are logically included and sequences making for exciting thrill action are given proper place.

This time the reporter, "Slim," does not embark on any city-saving crusade. When gangster "McCormick's" young brother is near death, "Slim" smuggles an "iron lung" off a liner and the boy's life is saved. Meanwhile an old friend whom he had interviewed is murdered, and "Slim" suspects "McCormick" as the influence behind the slaying. However, while pursuing a now-you-have-me-now-you-don't romance with "Della," daughter of publisher "Parrish," "Slim," trying to pin the guilt on "McCormick," is caught between the fire of his and his rival "Miller's" gang. Trying to save his own skin as well as protect "Slim," to whom he is grateful, "McCormick" is unable to quell a rebellion in his own mob. When an underling conspires with the captain of a rum running boat to land "hot" cargo, "Slim," sure that "McCormick" is the under-cover hand in the plot, boards the boat to attempt to prevent delivery of the cargo. While "Lefty" and a henchman rifle "McCormick's" papers for a customers list, brother "Bobby" overhears a conversation and contacts "Della" to warn "McCormick." He gets the message, goes to the boat where he is mortally wounded in a scuffle with "Lefty," rescues "Slim" from death as the police arrive to take charge. Dying, "McCormick" expresses his gratitude to "Slim" for saving his brother's life, warns him to steer clear of mobsters and advises him he can find plenty of excitement doing a straight newspaperman's job.

Skipping non-essentials and making no attempt to do any padding to prolong running time, "The Night Hawk" packs plenty of exciting action and amusing comedy into its footage. While the idea on which it is based may appear a little dated, fresh angles introduced give it an up-to-date appeal.

Previewed at the Fairfax theatre, Los Angeles. Following a comedy feature, the show seemed to be acceptable entertainment to the audience. Journeyman like the way in which the featured support players went about their work and held the interest continually.—G. M.

Wanted by the Police

(Monogram)

Melodrama

This is a soundly premised, well acted, directed and produced story. It blends the appeal of spectacular thrill action with human interest, presenting Frankie Darro in the first of a series for Monogram, "Wanted by the Police" not only should hold the interest of juveniles but also has much to engage adult patrons. Using the automobile stealing racket for a framework, it ties in romance, melodrama, suspense and sensationalism pointedly into plot and counterplot.

To relieve sister "Kathleen" of the burden of supporting her mother besides herself and permit her to go through with her plan to marry policeman "Mike," "Danny Murphy" gets a job in a garage. Before long the boy finds himself implicated in a car stealing racket. Fearing the vengeance of "Williams" if he tries to quit and inform the police of the real business of the supposedly respectable garage,

"Danny's" only solace is the comfort of his mother. Details amplifying the story elements, building suspense as the menace threatens the safety of "Danny" and the family, bitter fights carried on by rival racketeering gangs culminate in a stirring chase fight which winds up in a fiery crash. Driven to a point of desperation in which his own safety is disregarded, "Danny" lets his mother, sister, and "Mike" in on the real secret of the gang for which he works. Becoming the central figure in a crusade to wipe out the "Williams" mob and make cars safe for their owners, "Danny" leads officers to capture the mob.

Sound entertainment, devoid of extravagant theatricalism but loaded with punchy action and crisp dialogue, the show should please thrill action fans and be especially attractive to youngsters. There is plenty of potential exploitation material through which interest may be stirred up. Cooperative contacts with the police, auto clubs and insurance companies may be used to strengthen the importance of name values, of which Darro is probably the best known.

The College Girl

(Die Sextanerin)

(Henka Film Exchange)

(Adolescent Armour)

Marking the first Czechoslovakian production to be made by the Metropolitan Film Company of Prague with German dialogue and superimposed English titles, this foreign importation from the little country so tragically headlined in the daily news should prove of primary entertainment interest to those film patrons conversant with the language spoken in the film and, perhaps, be of some educational value to specialists concerned with certain phases of adolescent psychology. For the general run of film goers, outside the patronage of houses devoted to the exhibition of European screen offerings, the production will seem to hold little appeal, because of technical deficiencies in lighting and editing.

The acting is by far the most outstanding offering. Heading the cast is the attractive young player, Ellen Schwanneke. While not possessed of glowing good looks, Fraulein Schwanneke will remind American audiences, by the piquant expression and the emotional tension of her playing, of the more illustrious Elisabeth Bergner. Excellent support is given chiefly by Rolf Wanka as a handsome instructor in a girls' school, Iris Arlan as a fellow teacher, Hans Goetz and Gerda Meller as the heroine's parents, Halle Pit as a girlish confidante and by an unidentified collection of young and vivacious girls in the atmospheric roles of students.

Subtitled "Erste Liebe," or in translation "First Love," the theme is modeled after the formulated pattern which most film stories follow when they treat cinematically of an unhappy adolescent school girl. The young lady is the offspring of selfish, blind parents, the father too busy with his money making industries and the mother bent on her operatic career. In her search for affection, the girl fixes her attentions on the good looking person of a male instructor. Beginning as an innocent infatuation on the girl's part, the pair are involved in a serious situation when they become the target of pupil and teacher gossip. Forced to resign from the school, the girl is repulsed in her attempts to seek family solace by the petty bickerings of her parents, and in an agonized frame of mind attempts suicide, but recovers to find a happy life after all, while the other characters are the sadder and the wiser for the near tragedy.

The Mysterious Rider

(Paramount-Harry Sherman Prod.)

Action Adventure

"The Mysterious Rider" is based on a Zane Grey story. Douglas Dumbrille (in a dual role), Sidney Toler, Russell Hayden, Stanley Andrews, Weldon Heyburn, Charlotte Fields and Monte Blue are featured. All are seen in convincing characterizations. The screen play is credited to Maurice Geraghty.

The theme is rather confusing at the start. However, once the various identities are established, the basic plot isolated and the relationships and counter-relationships of those concerned are understood, it becomes understandable and entertaining. The picture was directed by Leslie Selander, who took advantage of the talents of his players, the appeal of the several story elements—melodrama, romance, comedy, suspense, mystery and action—and the quality of production values. Harry Sherman, producer, set the action against the beauties of natural desert and mountain backgrounds.

Despite an old murder charge, "Pecos Bill" returns with "Frosty" to the scene of the crime and holds up a stage. "Pecos" assumes the role of "Wade" and the pair get jobs on "William Bellound's" ranch. As a pause is made to establish eruptive romantic conflict between "Wils," ranch foreman, and "Bellound's" bullying ex-convict son, "Jack," for the favor of ward "Collie," cattle rustlers headed by "Folsom," with whom the "Bellounds" are secretly in league, raid the ranch. Mainly by illusion, audience come to understand that "Pecos" is "Collie's" father, a fact which she never learns. Actually they understand that the "Bellounds" and "Folsom" conspired to frame him into the murder charge years ago.

Thereupon the picture plunges into its real plot. That concerns "Pecos'" determination to avenge himself upon "Bellounds, Sr.," and "Folsom," break up the rustling gang, arrange things so that "Wils" personally can take care of "Jack," and return control of the ranch to "Collie."

Dumbrille alternates in the roles of "Pecos" and "Wade," while "Frosty" supplies comedy and his objective is accomplished in stirring fashion. Man-to-man fistic melees, mass gun battles, pistol duels and chases intensify the thrill. In the anti-climax, the "Bellounds" are slain by "Folsom" and his men, and that worthy,

With outdoor action films enjoying strong popularity, exhibitors may be assured that audiences will realize the entertainment values of "The Mysterious Rider." The many who have read Zane Grey's books and stories, and seen other pictures adapted from his work, constitute a group at whom preliminary exploitation may be directed.

Starlight over Texas

Adventure and Music

There is a lot of music in this production, which features Tex Ritter in solos and the Northwesterners on stringed instruments. There is also a lot of romance, comedy, melodrama, riding, fighting and shooting. Photographed almost entirely out of doors, which permits the introduction of beautiful backgrounds and makes possible some spectacular action shots, the plot adheres to the formula common to the majority of romance-adventure themes.

There is no law or order along the Mexican border when "Tex" sings his way into the picture. An American marshal has been slain, and a bandit leader, "Kildare," assuming his identity and office, is directing an orgy of stage coach holdups, cattle rustlings and munition smugglings. His minion, "Boston," makes sport of "Tex" until he suffers a first-class thrashing. Inspired by love of "Rosita" and the call of duty, "Tex" sets out to put things aright. His efforts, in which he is aided by "Ananias" and "Peewee," take him into plenty of peril, though they are interrupted by the musical and fiesta sequences. "Tex," ascertaining "Kildare's" identity, sets out to run him down. The chase-fight action is exciting. Eventually, after personally accounting for "Kildare," "Tex" breaks up the gang and there is time for romance.

The picture, which is Edward Finney's first Tex Ritter production for Monogram, is well mounted and gives evidence that more than customary care was given its preparation and making. Ritter sings three songs.

Juvenile Court

Melodrama

The theme and substance of "Dead End" told more baldly and with less sugar on the pill is the story and motivation of "Juvenile Court." Straightforward direction and a cast which compensates for lack of top name value by smooth performances make that theme and substance adequate. To the appeal of a story of juvenile development, an appeal that is never failing particularly when it tells sympathetically the story of the underprivileged, is added such practical exploitation material as the use of the Police Athletic League as the collective hero of the plot, and a proper mixture of gangsters, guns, romance and an auto chase.

The story is of the formation of a Police Athletic League in any large city for the reclamation of children of the slums. In this case the League is conceived and brought to success, despite obstacles, by a lawyer who himself rose from across the tracks and by the sister of a gangster condemned to execution. The obstacles arise from the obstinacy of a youth and his gang on whom adolescent years of neglect have made a deep impression. Reform and reclamation eventually are brought home to them after their first fall from grace in stealing the receipts of the League's first benefit athletic performance. For purposes of the plot the success of the League is made to hinge entirely upon reformation of the juvenile gang.

Properly furnished with sets and detail the picture lacks only a sprinkling of humor. Outstanding in performance are Paul Kelly as the lawyer and Frankie Darro as the youthful incipient gang leader.

Sharpshooters

(20th Century-Fox)

Newsreel Melodrama

It would appear that the newsreels have landed and the feature picture situation is well in hand. Last week Clark Gable was demonstrating to Hollywood preview audiences just how a crack newsreel man gets his footage. This week it's Brian Donlevy behind the camera. And Brian Donlevy's lens, like Clark Gable's, is trained upon fantastic incidents which do not seem fantastic at all because they so closely parallel factual incidents other lenses have recorded. Strange that it took the fiction camera a quarter century to discover the newsreel as a practically limitless font of melodramatic material. The Camera Daredevils series is off to a flying start.

"Sharpshooters" opens with "Steve," ace photographer of the Graphic Newsreel, and "Waldo," his sound man, shooting a royal assassination, in a place called Bellgarte, which closely resembles the assassination the real life newsreels did shoot a while back. From this lightning start the adventurers move into another mythical kingdom and get themselves in-involved in an intricate series of plots and counterplots which coil and uncoil with mounting rapidity, but always clearly, until "Steve" succeeds in saving the nation for the people and their king. It's a hair-raising sequence of incidents, none of them far from genuine precedent, and a copious larding of active comedy, effectively spaced, keeps audience tension at high pitch.

The film is a Sol Wurtzel number and one of his best. James Tinling's direction is forthright and forceful. Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, screen playwrights, and Maurice Rapf and Lester Ziffren, authors, could have turned out a 15-episode serial, a few years ago, with the same amount of story material.

The time is the present and the place is a mythical kingdom. Lynn Bari plays the girl the photographer doesn't get, Wally Vernon enacts a snappy sound man, John King does a self-effacing royal suitor for the girl's hand, and Douglas Dumbrille puts venom in the role of the dastardly prince who tries to kill the juvenile king and just about everybody else.

Avocate D'Amour

(Counsel for Romance)

(Regal)

Comedy

Last year the French importations were concerned mostly with historical subjects. Whether or not the marked success of the modern comedy melodramas that emerged from Hollywood studios in such abundance last season had anything to do with it, this first of the new season's importations from France is of this texture. It is also the first appearance this season of the French and now Hollywood star, Danielle Darrieux.

Miss Darrieux is wellknown to American audiences though the picture that brought her fame, "Mayerling," opened in this country only a year ago this month. In the intervening months Miss Darrieux added to her prestige with "Club des Femmes" and Universal's "The Rage of Paris," and the larger distribution that picture received has made Miss Darrieux's name a distinct marquee asset for American exhibitors.

"Counsel for Romance" is in its early footage a talkative picture that non-linguists probably will find wearisome, since the English titles cannot compete with the stream of words emanating from the players. The film hits a faster tempo with the appearance of Henry Garat, and from then on it is an enjoyable comedy with Miss Darrieux and Garat showing themselves a most capable romantic team.

Miss Darrieux portrays "Jacqueline Serval," whose father stipulates that unless she is successful in her practice of law she must marry the man he has selected. He arranges that she, after months of idleness, is assigned to defend "Pierre Meynard" (Garat), accused of burglary. When she wins the case and hires him as a valet-chauffeur, he leaves, ostensibly to return to a criminal career, but she finds him. "Jacqueline" is honored guest at a party where she is to meet her future husband. He's "Pierre." Careful direction keeps the ending in doubt until the final footage.

There are catchy tunes with both principals breaking out in song on occasion.

The English subtitles, by Mark Brun and Charles Jahrlum, call for a great deal of slang, in keeping with the French dialogue.

Western

A western story of so much action that with a little padding it might have been serial material is presented in less than an hour in a feature in which thumping riding, gun-play and fisticuffs are balanced with suspense, intrigue, loyalty and romance. It is a western that has practically everything, including the Three Mesquiteers.

Speaking of the Three Mesquiteers, let it be noted that although the personable Bob Livingston has been graduated to other roles his successor, John Wayne, not new to ridin'—shootin' pictures, handsomely fills the spot. Ray Corrigan as "Tucson Smith," Max Terhune as "Lullaby Joslin" and Wayne as "Stony Brooke" are a forceful trio. The girl is Doreen McKay, a newcomer.

A new chemical known as "Monium" and found only in the desert is being manufactured and transported out of the country by foreign agents. A dude ranch serves as temporary headquarters. Into this situation ride the Three Mesquiteers, and "Stony" almost immediately becomes innocently involved in a murder. Forced to flee, he tracks down the slayer, to discover that the man is a government agent.

When the agent dies from a wound received in the gun fight "Ann," another government agent, convinces "Stony" that he should enlist in the "cause." "Stony" gains entrance to the "Monium" plant and passes himself off as the slain agent. He informs "Tucson" and "Lullaby" of a planned shipment of the chemical and they make plans to intercept it. "Stony's" identity is discovered and he is held prisoner. "Tucson" and "Lullaby" free "Stony" and the three hold up the shipment at the border until the arrival of a detachment of cavalry.

Billy the Kid Returns

(Republic)

Western

This is the second of the Roy Rogers westerns. His first, "Under Western Stars," received excellent notices and in them Rogers was generally heralded as the biggest western star discovery of the year. He is equally good in his second film. He complements a pleasing personality with one of the best singing voices in westerns.

Songs in the picture are "Parade Song," "Born to the Saddle," "Sing a Little Song about Anything," "Dixie Instrument Song," "When the Sun is Setting on the Prairie," "Trail Blazin'," and "When I Camped under the Stars." The composers are Smiley Burnette, Eddie Cherkose, Alberto Colombo and Vern Spencer.

Like Gene Autrey, Rogers is fortunate in having as a sidekick Smiley Burnette, ace comedian and musician. The possible flaw in that situation, however, is that Burnette might appear too often. The supporting cast is excellent, Wade Boteler in particular. Lynn Roberts is the girl.

Rogers plays two roles. His first is that of "Billy the Kid," in what is practically a prologue. "Billy," murderer feared by the crooked cattle ranchers yet a friend of the settlers, is shot and killed by "Sheriff Garrett." The next morning, the shooting still unannounced, Rogers rides into town and is arrested because of his semblance to "The Kid."

Rogers is deputized to impersonate "Billy" in order that he may help the settlers. He and the sheriff hit upon the scheme of tricking the crooks into stealing army horses so that, if caught, they'll be brought before a federal court. A squadron of cavalry helps to highlight this sequence.

Gambling Comedy

There is a definite attempt here to relate motion picture entertainment to the life of the masses, with a broad comedy in a plebian setting about a tug skipper who thinks he has won a mighty money prize in a weekend football gamble. Football pools are an essential part of the weekly life of the working classes, and the picture knowingly exploits this against a familiar North Country background of Mersey shipping, fish and chips shops, and Lancashire dialect, erring no doubt on the side of broad comedy and romantic fiction, but reproducing none the less a recognizable picture of life as the working class picture patron knows it.

The comedy errs on the side of the comic rather than the convincing, but the Mrs. Grundyisms and gin bottle secreted behind the portrait of a widow's departed spouse are devices of sure working class appeal. The nature of the comedy and the strictly provincial setting and dialect of course restrict its extra-territorial appeal, which even from a British viewpoint is provincial rather than metropolitan, but directorially Carol Reed has made an interesting job of his material.

Edmund Gwenn has the role of the tug skipper who thinks he has won the £30,000 and, so to speak, spends it before he has got it. He registers a square shouldered portrayal. Betty Driver, a spirited young woman with a voice translated by either recording or reproduction into the accents of an electric saw, and a winsomely pathetic Irish comedian, Jimmy O'Dea, have the other lead roles. There are attractive glimpses of the Mersey and its shipping, the mellow sound of its sirens and the cry of the gulls, all adding happy streaks of realism to Reed's struggle with a subject matter which is not always substantial.

Previewed at a London trade show, the film was received without any uneasiness and exhibitor reaction was that its marketability lay in provincial appeal.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Paramount Pictorial, No. 3

(Paramount)

(Good)

Divided into three parts, the material found in this newest number from the Pictorial Group is interesting enough to find widespread appeal. The first portion is given over to a pictorial exhibition of some oceanic oddities. Next, the description, in superlative camera work and poetical color, of the breaking of dawn in the mountains, should bring audible appreciation. The final section reports on the training methods used to domesticate elephants in the Belgian Congo.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Propaganda Subject

This short subject is in the nature of propaganda for the Oxford Group, who produced it. The Oxford Group, says an announcement on the film, "is a spiritual movement now at work in over 50 countries. It aims to rebuild society on the foundation of changed human lives . . . to make qualities of unselfishness and honesty practical in daily life." The picture depicts, in a Canadian setting, how three young men, a cow-hand, a truck driver and a student, meet in one of the Oxford Group camps and there absorb the Oxford Group philosophy. The three join a group sent to England where they meet other Oxford Group devotees. The philosophy of the Group is expressed in the theme song, "Wise Old Horsey." Running time, 20 minutes.

Anglers' Bait

Running the gamut of salt water fishing from shore casting to shark harpooning, the piscatorial material offered in this number from the New World of Sports series makes interesting and entertaining bait for the exhibitor to angle after the sportsman-movie patron. The thrills are there in plenty and the variety of fishing is enough to interest the whole field of anglers. However, complete satisfaction is marred by the photography and commentary.—Running time, nine minutes.

11 EXHIBITOR MEETINGS IN NEXT SIX WEEKS

Tri-State and Oklahoma Units Meet with MPTOA in Oklahoma City, October 30th

Highlighted by the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, October 30th, in Oklahoma City, organized exhibition this week called five annual state meetings for the month, to be followed by two more in November. In addition, The Tri-State MPTO of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee and the Oklahoma Theatre Owners will also meet in annual sessions, in conjunction with the national MPTOA convention on October 30th.

Nebraska and Western Iowa

(Special Correspondence)

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Nebraska and Western Iowa convened this week, opening its silver anniversary on Monday at the Loyal hotel in Omaha.

The 40 exhibitors discussed the "divorcement bill" which originated in the North Dakota legislature, and decided to take no action until the United States Supreme Court has finally passed upon its validity.

Air conditioning of theatres is spreading rapidly throughout Nebraska and Iowa, exhibitor comment indicated. The showmen expect increased attendance to absorb the cost of installation.

The officers will continue in their posts for another year. They are C. E. Williams, Omaha, president and secretary; H. F. Kennedy, Broken Bow, first vice president; D. R. Goldie, Cherokee, Iowa, second vice president; and R. E. Falkenberg, Lexington, Nebraska, third vice president.

The Variety Club held its annual golf tournament, banquet and ball Monday afternoon and evening, at the Ralston Club.

Kuykendall Reelection Indicated

It appears certain that Edward L. Kuykendall, incumbent, will be drafted for the presidency of the MPTOA at its national convention in Oklahoma City. No candidate has been announced or indicated. Changes, however, are expected in the remainder of the official slate.

The Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce has provided Morris Loewenstein, national secretary of the MPTOA, with 1,000 lithographed letterheads with a blank front page and three other pages of information and pictures setting forth the virtues of Oklahoma City as a convention city. The letterheads, when mailed to exhibitors, will contain a letter of invitation to attend the eighteenth annual convention.

State Groups' Leaders Invited

The Oklahoma City Chamber, through its convention division, has written and seconded invitations of the national association to Frank Cassil, president of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association; Fred Wehrenberg, president of the MPTO of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois; Judge Roy Walker, president of the MPTO of Texas, and R. X. Williams, Jr., president of the MPTO of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee, to attend.

Allied of Michigan

Allied Theatres of Michigan will hold its annual convention in Grand Rapids October 10-12. General chairman is Allen Johnson, Grand Rapids theatre owner. Ray Branch is president.

The session is expected to attract between 200 and 300 Michigan theatre owners. Headquarters will be the Morton hotel. Business meetings and commercial displays will be held at the hotel. A dance will be given the second evening of the convention.

Arkansas Independents

The annual convention of the Arkansas Independent Theatre Owners will be held in Little Rock October 16 and 17. J. F. Norman is president.

New Jersey and New York Allied

Plans are near completion by committees of Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey and Allied Theatre Owners of New York State for the holding of their annual conventions jointly at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Atlantic City, October 19-21.

This will be the 19th annual convention of the New Jersey group and the first annual convention of the New York State group. Over 600 theatre owners and motion picture executives are expected to attend.

Allied of New York may hold another regional meeting in Buffalo next month.

Western Pennsylvania MPTO

The annual convention of the MPTO of Western Pennsylvania will be confined to one day this year. Originally announced for October 24 and 25, the second day has been dropped, according to Fred J. Herrington, secretary.

Indiana Associated

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana will hold its annual convention in the Antlers Hotel, Indianapolis, November 1-2. Marc Wolf, has been named convention chairman, assisted by Ernest Miller, Carl Niesse, I. R. Holycross and Don Rossiter, secretary of the association.

Ohio Independents

The annual meeting of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio is to be called the Sixth Annual Convention and Central Regional Conference of Independent Exhibitors. Invitations have been sent to non-member independents to attend the sessions at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel November 14-16.

"With the filing of the government's anti-trust suit and the important accomplishments on the Neely Bill and the North Dakota divorcement law, independent exhibitors are on the threshold of a new era," the latest ITO bulletin reads.

"By November 14th and the convening of our convention, events will have crystallized so that we will be in a position to know where we're going and how we're going to get there. Allied has traveled the straight, hard road for many years, without being lured or detoured on to inconsequential bypaths. Now the goal is in sight, and, if we want to achieve it and reap the maximum benefits, it is necessary for united action, for the interchange of ideas, information, and policies by independent exhibitors everywhere."

Allied of New Jersey lost a neighbor this week when the Independent Theatre Owners Association moved from the Lincoln hotel, New York, to the third floor of the Astor. For three years the two independent organizations have been neighbors on the same floor of the Lincoln, although sometimes they have not been so neighborly in their rivalry.

RKO Theatres this week closed a deal with Republic for half of its 1938-39 output, the other 50 per cent having been sold to Loew's. The arrangement is for the New York metropolitan area.

Briton Seeks Deals For New Company

A new English production and distribution company, which also will buy product in America and release its own product here, was announced last Friday in New York by Harry Curry, executive, before sailing for London. Mr. Curry said he was closing deals for a dozen pictures in this country and expected to increase the number to 20 for the 1939-40 season. The plans were announced at a luncheon meeting for the press at The Tavern.

J. H. Hoffberg, who attended the meeting, will handle American distribution for the new company, which has yet to organize its production schedule. Mr. Hoffberg has been assisting Mr. Curry in his negotiations here.

Mr. Curry, who has been in the motion picture business 34 years and formerly was associated with Warner Brothers and Columbia in Scotland, said the company will distribute and produce "B" product, with production starting in February or March at the Elstree studios. He said the number of "Quota pictures" would at least meet requirements.

The company, which as yet has not been given a name, has filed its papers with the registry, and financing arrangements were said to have been completed. A publicity announcement given to the press at the luncheon said Mr. Curry was prepared to enter into deals with American independent producers for the making of pictures both in England and Hollywood.

Mr. Curry said he planned to return to America in December to line up the 1939-40 distribution program, with the imports for the present to be rented out only in the United Kingdom.

Jubilee for Golden; Steffes Arranges Dinner

Edward A. Golden, pioneer in independent distribution, and vice president of Monogram Pictures, will celebrate his 25th anniversary in motion pictures next month.

To observe the occasion, production, distribution and exhibition friends and associates will attend a banquet October 14th in the Grand Ballroom of the Nicollet Hotel, Minneapolis. It is being given by Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, with Al Steffes, Allied president, taking charge of arrangements, having set up committee headquarters for the purpose in his own World theatre, Minneapolis.

Two Declare Dividends

Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., has declared an accumulated dividend of $1.75 on the seven per cent preferred stock, payable September 30th to holders of record September 20th. Hamilton United Theatres, Ltd., has declared a dividend of $1.50 per share on the seven per cent preferred stock, payable September 30th to holders of record September 15th.

Columbia Pictures Wednesday sold its entire 1938-39 output to M. A. Lightman for his circuit of 63 theatres in the south.

SMPE Sets Date For Fall Meeting; Election Slated

Detroit will be the scene of the 23rd fall, 1938, convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, October 31st to November 2nd, at the Hotel Statler. Meeting in this city for the first time, the motion picture engineers will view first-hand some of the great progress that has been made in industrial motion pictures. SMPE almost always meets alternately in New York and Washington.

A program of papers and technical presentations is being arranged by J. I. Crabtree, editorial vice-president, and Glenn Matthews, chairman of the papers committee. Karl Brenkert, of Detroit, is chairman of the local arrangements committee.

John Strickler and A. J. Bradford, of Detroit, are assisting W. C. Kunzmann, convention vice-president, in arranging details of the convention and the banquet to be held on the evening of November 1st.

Mrs. J. F. Strickler will act as hostess to the ladies, assisted by a committee.

Awards at Banquet

Features of the banquet, to be held at the Hotel Statler on November 1st, will be the annual presentations of the "Progress Medal" and the "Journal Award," respectively. The Progress Medal is awarded annually by the board of governors of the society, in recognition of any invention, research or development which, in their opinion, has resulted in a significant advance in motion picture technology. The Journal Award is similarly made by the governors to the author or authors of the most outstanding paper originally published in the Journal of the Society during the preceding calendar year. The names of award recipients will be announced at the banquet on November 1st. Previous award recipients were:

Progress Medal: 1935, E. C. Wente; 1936, C. E. K. Mees; 1937, E. W. Kellogg.

Journal Award: 1935, L. A. Jones and J. H. Webb; 1936, E. W. Kellogg; 1937, D. B. Judd.

Opportunity will be afforded to delegates, after the close of the convention, to visit some of the plants in and around Detroit.

Hollywood has been selected as the site of the spring, 1939, convention, and New York for the 1939 fall convention.

Nominees

Universal Holds Sales Meeting in Chicago

Universal's home office and coast heads met with the company's western branch managers Sunday in Chicago for a "get-together" discussion of the company's recent production developments. The meeting was sponsored by sales manager W. A. Scully. Nate Blumberg, president; Matthew Fox, vice-president; William J. Pierce has joined Mr. Rogers as his assistant in the latter's independent production company. The firm is taking space at General Service Studios to prepare for the start of a life of Gus Edwards. Arthur Caesar and Mr. Pierce will write the original script.

GB Acquires "Pagliacci" For American Release

GB has acquired the motion picture "Pagliacci" for distribution in the United States. The production will be distributed on a road show basis through the "art film" theatres throughout the country, and will be handled by a special department now being created by the company.

The production of "Pagliacci" is based on the Leoncavallo opera, and stars Richard Tauber with Steffi Duna and Diana Napier in the chief supporting roles. It was directed by Karl Grune for Trafalgar Films. The screen play is by Monckton Hoffe and Roger Burford, with lyrics provided by John Drinkwater. The musical sequences were under the supervision of Hans Eisler, and the music arranged and conducted by Albert Coates and Boyd Neel.

Gates, vice-president in charge of claims; Ruth Weisberg, vice-president in charge of welfare; Harry Mayer, vice-president in charge of entertainment; Stuart Aarons, secretary; Robert Salomons, treasurer, and Sam Wolowitz, assistant treasurer.

The executive committee of the club is composed of the officers and Phil Abrahams, W. V. Brooks, R. W. Budd, T. J. Martin, W. S. McDonald, Dave Newman, George O'Keefe, Paul Lazarus, Edward Savin, Harold Rodner, Marg. Victorson, Max Blackman, Jules Levey, Edward Hinchy, A. W. Schwalberg, H. M. Doherty and Arthur Sackson. Following the elections the club held a dinner-dance at the Casa Manana.

Rowland Joins Edward Small

Completing plans for an expanded production schedule, Edward Small, who releases through United Artists, announced Tuesday the appointment of Richard Rowland as his executive assistant in Edward Small Productions, Inc. Mr. Rowland assumes his new duties immediately with headquarters in Hollywood. (Picture on pictorial page.)

Small's current new schedule calls for production of five pictures for the 1938-39 United Artists program. He is now working out plans for further activity. His first picture, "The Duke of West Point," goes into production in a few days with Alfred E. Green directing. This will be followed by "King of the Turf," to star Adolphe Menjou. Both are originals by George Bruce.

Director James Whale is under contract to make "The Man in the Iron Mask," from the novel by Alexander Dumas, with production to start in January. Howard Emmett Rogers is completing the original, "South of Pago-Pago," and Cameron Rogers is adapting "Kit Carson, Avenger," from the newspaper serial written by Evelyn Wells.

Rowland, as executive assistant, will share with Mr. Small the responsibility of administration. J. J. Milstein has been appointed by Small as New York representative and he will leave Hollywood to open offices there after he completes studio conferences.

Mr. Rowland's experience covers many phases of the motion picture industry. He started in 1905 as one of the first distributors in the business. He organized and was first president of Metro Pictures Corporation and later became general manager of First National and vice-president and New York production executive of Fox Film. More recently he was associate producer at RKO-Radio and then an independent producer releasing through Paramount.

Motor Company To Use Films

In presenting Plymouth's 1939 cars to 500 dealers in Chicago this week, H. C. Moock, vice-president in charge of sales of Plymouth division of Chrysler Corporation, indicated that extensive use of sound motion pictures and direct mail will supplement the company's advertising in newspapers, magazines, radio and outdoor advertising in the coming year.

The films, which will be furnished to local dealers for showings to prospects, will tell an institutional story of automobile manufacturing techniques.

Dana Named District Manager

Pete Dana, Universal Buffalo manager, has been promoted to district manager for Kansas City, St. Louis and Omaha. Mr. Dana's headquarters will be in Kansas City.

SEC Reports Changes in Monogram and Universal

Disposition of 800 shares of Monogram Pictures common stock in July by Pathe International Corporation is disclosed in the semi-monthly report of the Securities and Exchange Commission, made public this week.

At the close of the month, Pathe International held 65,867 shares of Monogram common stock and 6,017 options for common, the nature of the ownership (whether direct or indirect) not being disclosed by the company.

The only other July transaction in film stocks reported by the SEC was the disposition of 20 shares of Pathe Film common by T. P. Loach, New York, director, who held 11 shares at the close of the month.

The commission's summary of stock transactions by corporation officers and directors included April, 1936, reports on Universal Pictures showing that in that month R. H. Cochrane, New York, by exchange or conversion, disposed of 22,746 shares of common, his entire holdings, and Carl Laemmle, Sr., Los Angeles, officer and director, disposed of 168,867 shares of common, leaving him with 7,016 shares, and 15,707 shares of second preferred, his entire holdings.

Hudson County Unit Will Censor Films and Plays

Since New Jersey has no censorship board, the Hudson County Holy Name Federation in that state is going to act as a voluntary censorship group to prevent the showing of "immoral pictures and those of foreign origin creeping into the county and state."

Representatives of Holy Name societies will visit theatres in their parishes once or twice a month and request cancellation on any films not coming up to Legion of Decency standards.

Russell Reserves Decision On "Birth of a Baby"

In special term Supreme Court at Troy last Friday, Justice Pierce H. Russell reserved decision on a motion to submit "The Birth of a Baby" to a court and jury. The motion was made by former Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Staley, counsel for the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, and Sam Citron. Opposing this was Charles A. Brind, Jr., director of the Law Division of the Department of Education, who held that Judge Russell could either dismiss the proceedings or hold that its merits be determined by the Appellate Division.

Judge Russell's decision, which is expected within the next fortnight, will doubtless be of great importance to the future of motion picture censorship in New York State.

To Narrate "Going Places"

Graham McNamee, NBC announcer, will henceforth be heard in the narration on Universal's "Going Places" short series. Commentary on Universal's "Stranger Than Fiction" series will continue to be supplied by Alois Havrilla. Mr. McNamee does the narration for Universal Newsreel.

EXHIBITORS IN VICTORIA STUDY PRICE INCREASE

Sliding Scale Tax on Admissions Adds Problem Not Existing in Other Australian States

by CLIFF HOLT
in Melbourne

Victorian exhibitors are debating the advisability of increasing admission prices. At present a minimum price of one shilling exists throughout Australia. In Victoria this price carries a tax of 1 penny and there is an additional half-penny tax for every sixpence or part thereof by which the price of the ticket exceeds 1/— . Accordingly, if the price of a shilling ticket is raised to 1/1 the cost to the public becomes 1/2½.

There is some difference of opinion as to whether box-office grosses might not be affected adversely rather than improved by the half-penny increase on a low-priced ticket.

Exhibitor organizations in other states declare that they have not considered the question of increased prices; and the Distributors' Association states that so long as exhibitors observe the minimum price which is specified in all contracts, price fixation is a matter for themselves to decide.

Supporting the proposal to increase admission prices, Robert McLeish, president of the Victoria Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, said that exhibitors had recently been faced with a tremendous load of increased expenditure, to balance which there had been no corresponding increase in theatre admission charges. On the contrary, they were lower than for many years past.

"We are faced, for example, with a higher burden of film hire owing to the unfortunate fact that American producing companies are now debarred from selling their product in such countries as Germany, Italy and Japan," he said.

Other factors contributing to an unprecedented situation were the shortage of paper, which added to the cost of printing; the new award, which required staffs to be paid for annual holidays; the higher cost of equipment, and the higher salaries brought about by the increased cost of living.

In addition to a general discussion on prices, the Victoria CEA is also preparing draft legislation for the licensing of theatres. This will be submitted to the Government at an early date in the hope that the necessary bill will be passed during the coming session.

The proposed legislation provides for yearly licenses to be issued and controlled by a committee appointed by the Governor-in-Council.

Spokesmen declare that this is the only way to prevent uneconomic competition and exploitation by distributors.

Test Match Trouble

As Autumn's mild temperatures gave way to the chilly blasts of winter, theatre business throughout Australia started its annual decline. This early-winter set-back lasts only until such time as the theatre-goer accustoms himself to the cold snap that heralds the coming of winter in June; and by mid-July box-offices return to a normal activity.

This year, Australian theatres had not only the early weeks of winter to contend with, but an opposition that recurs every fourth year, and one which is peculiar to theatre business in this country.

How much do the Test Matches between Australia and England, when played in England, cost box-offices here? Nobody can supply the answer, but it would run into several figures. Cricket is an institution in the British Empire second to no other sport; the fate of Test Matches is more important than the fate of Governments.

When a Test Match is in progress in England, it is safe to say that more than half the population of Australia at that time is seated around a radio listening to a ball-to-ball description of the play. Through the science of short-wave radio, Australians can know the score instantaneously, they can practically hear the crack of the bat upon the ball. Owing to the difference in time between Australia and the United Kingdom, play takes place in England according to Australian clocks between 8:30 and 3 a. m., and few Australians leave their radios during those hours.

The effect that this has upon theatre attendances can be easily imagined. Play occupies a minimum of four days, and there are five Tests. So that during the Test Series in England, there are 20 nights upon which Australia theatre-owners can reckon on their receipts being reduced by a good 50 per cent.

The Australia theatre-owner's weapons against this form of opposition are impotent to say the least. On a special score-board constructed at the side of the screen he posts the scores during his performance. By advertising this service he feels he is at least doing something to offset the effects of the cricket broadcasts; actually he is not doing much more than to please those of his patrons who are present in spite of the radio and hearth, and to intermittently divert their attention from the picture.

Church Films Considered

The Australian Methodist Conference, sitting in Adelaide, has given its opinion that the aid of cinematograph films should be extensively used in connection with church work. The debate was led by the Australian Chief Censor, Cresswell O'Reilly, who said that churches should use a type of film not too remotely related to ordinary dramatic films. It had been found possible, he said, to use films originally made for entertainment purposes which had a morally uplifting effect at the end.

Visual Education Studied

There are evidences that the Australian States will cooperate with the Federal Government in the establishment of a Visual Education Bureau. Already the New South Wales Premier, Mr. Stevens, has expressed his Government's willingness to proceed with the establishment of such a Bureau, the object of which would be to build up a national library of films in cooperation with other libraries in State education departments, to initiate and cooperate with other States in the production of such films, and to act as a central buying agency.

New Zealand Production Poor

New Zealand's retiring film censor, W. A. Tanner, believes that there is little hope of building up a film producing industry in the Dominion. Apart from scenic films, New Zealand's film output consisted of failures, chiefly because they were of only local interest, he says.

Mr. Tanner said that the chief impression he had gained in the course of his duties was the rapid advance made in the technique of color photography, and he believed that before long every big picture would be in color.

Tent Shows in South Replace Old Showboats

by PHILLIP G. MUTH
in New Orleans

Scores of tent shows are carrying motion pictures to isolated communities of Louisiana's coastal section which otherwise would never see them. Very seldom do the inhabitants visit the larger towns and cities.

Mild weather most of the year permits use of tents with seats for 150 to 200 in communities too small to support a permanent theatre and owners of these, booking films through New Orleans exchanges, are doing a lively business this summer.

The tent shows have supplanted the picturesque showboats which once supplied entertainment along Louisiana's bayous and at settlements on the Mississippi river.

Louis Carlos of Houma, with his wife and daughter, comprise a typical family tent show group. Mrs. Carlos sells tickets, the daughter is usher and general overseer in the 65x35 foot tent while Mr. Carlos operates the projector and handles the numerous other details. The tent is pitched and usually remains in one location from two weeks to three months, depending on the patronage.

Jack Terry and "Dad" Wells also are operators of circuit tent shows. These say the small boy with his nickel or dime is the best customer in the usual $8 or $10 a night which the tents gross.

Most of the tents exhibit sound films, but a few still use old silent. One exhibitor said he found this an advantage in some of the coastal sections where French is the general language and English is not readily understood.

The tent show operators map regular itineraries, usually managing to arrive at particular communities during a harvest, arrival of the shrimp fleet or some other occasion which brings moderately large groups together.

Yaeger To Manage Theatres

C. U. Yaeger, Bank Night distributor, is taking over the management of several southside Denver houses from A. P. Archer and Joe Dekker. The houses include the Gothic, Santa Fe, Jewel and the Pioneer. The Alameda, also in the partnership, has been leased to R. W. Wooldridge of Denver. The Alameda and Pioneer are closed with the former scheduled for September reopening. Mr. Archer and Mr. Dekker will continue to operate their five houses in north Denver as well as retain their interest in the other houses.

"Idiot's Delight" Shelved

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has abandoned plans for production in the near future of the play, "Idiot's Delight," written by Robert Sherwood and intended as a starring vehicle for Norma Shearer, as a result of possible international complications in Italy, where the story unfolds. It is reported that MGM may replace the Sherwood play with Clare Boothe's "The Women."

Heart of the North

(Warner)

Melodrama

As were the recent Warner features, "The Adventures of Robin Hood" and "Valley of the Giants," "Heart of the North" is being filmed in color. The locale is Alaska. Practically all the action takes place out of doors. The backgrounds are all natural.

The principal players are Dick Foran, last seen in "Boy Meets Girl," Gloria Dickson, now in "They Made Me a Criminal," five-year-old Janet Chapman, who had an auspicious start towards a screen career in "Little Miss Thoroughbred," Patric Knowles, Anthony Averill, Allen Jenkins, Arthur Gardner and Russell Simpson. Also important in the general scheme are James Stephenson, Alec Harford, Gordon Hart, Pedro de Cordoba, Jack Mower, John Harron and Joseph Sawyer.

The story basis is a novel by William Byron Mowery, author of many widely read books that have Far Northwest backgrounds. The screen play is the work of Robert Rossen, Vincent Sherman and Lee Katz. It is being directed by Lewis Seiler, maker of "Unlawful" and "Crime School."

Thematically the picture will tell a story of adventure, romance, conspiracy, danger and duplicity in the rugged wilds of Alaska. Its hero is a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The villains are a slick and ruthless band of thieves of gold ore and fur. The principal suspect happens to be the father of the girl whom the hero loves. When he is suspended from the force, he is saved from lynching by a couple of friends, and the trio combine, after a sensational airplane chase, to apprehend the real criminal.

Release date: To be determined.

St. Louis Blues

(Paramount)

Musical Melodrama

"St. Louis Blues" will be a story of a showboat. There will be music in it with Dorothy Lamour, Tito Guizar, blues singer Maxine Sullivan, Matty Malneck and His Boys and The King's Men. Substantially, however, as comedy, romance and melodrama are blended, the production will tell a story of showboat folk, an entertainer who wants to be an actress and not just a glamorous mysterious wearer of sarongs as her small time carnival manager has been flaunting her about the Mississippi River Country, and the exciting happenings when she joins the traveling troupe, falls in love with its owner, runs away when she feels he was in danger, only to return to give a "singing for her own pleasure" performance that saves the showboat.

The picture also promises to be unusual in action, as the script calls for the refloating of the boat which has been stuck in the mire, a rousing battle with a rival carnival crew, the girl's unhappy wanderings and the big finale showboat performance.

Lloyd Nolan, who took the role when George Raft rejected it, will be featured with Miss Lamour, whose latest picture is "Spawn of the North." Jessie Ralph has been seen many times, as have William Frawley, Jerome Gowan, Victor Kilian and Cliff Nazarro. Guizar was last in "Tropic Holiday." Dusky singer Maxine Sullivan has been featured on the radio, as have Mary "Punkins" Parker, Malneck's Band and "The Kings Men."

Not all the writing or music composition credits for the Jeff Lazarus production have been decided. However, it is coming to screen realism under the direction of Raoul Walsh, whose musical film credits include "College Swing," "Hitting a New High" and "Artists and Models."

Release date: November 18, 1938.

The Last Express

(Universal)

Mystery Melodrama

"The Last Express" will be a number in Universal's Crime Club series. It will be produced by Irving Starr, the man who established the idea and made "The Westland Case," "The Black Doll," "The Lady in the Morgue" and "Danger on the Air." Otis Garrett, who directed the two last mentioned, will function similarly on this picture. The story is based on a novel by Baynard Kendrick, rated by literary critics as one of the topmost authors of melodramatic mysteries. The screenplay was prepared by Edmund L. Hartman, credited recently with "Law of the Underworld," "Hideaway" and "Behind the Headlines," all RKO-Radio.

Kent Taylor, last in "The Jury's Secret," "A Girl with Ideas" and "Prescription for Romance," and Dorothea Kent, prominent in "Youth Takes a Fling" and "Having a Wonderful Time," are to be starred. The principal supporting players will be Don Brodie, Greta Granstead, who appeared in "Marie Antoinette" and "There Goes My Heart," Paul Hurst, who was lauded for his work in "Alexander's Ragtime Band," and the oldtime vaudeville team of Shaw and Lee, who were seen in "The King and the Chorus Girl" and "Ready, Willing and Able." Others are Edward Raquello, Robert E. Keane, Charles Trowbridge and Addison Richards.

The story is complex murder mystery with bewildering ramifications which will accentuate the suspense, but with a thread of romance and comedy. The locale is New York City and the time is the present. The tale concerns itself, in novel ways, with melodramatic elements which have been liked by general audiences.

Release date: October 21, 1938.

Dawn Patrol

(Warner)

War Aviation

When released in 1930 by First National the first "The Dawn Patrol" made screen history. Then the principals were Richard Barthelmess, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Neil Hamilton, William Janney and Frank McHugh. Then Seton I. Miller and Dan Totheroh adapted the John Monk Saunders story, "The Flight Commander." They are doing the same job again. They have made some changes but none affects the basic plot. It is a "men without women" story of a unit in the Royal Flying Corps. Its action takes place during a critical time in the World War.

The squadron gets only the dirty assignments.

It is continually decimated, and untrained recruits are slaughtered. Two veterans, miraculously, always come back. When the commander, who considers his job only as that of an executioner, is transferred, one of the brothers-in-arms succeeds him. He must send the brother of his pal to his death, and his order transforms a great friendship into a vicious enmity. An order comes through for a dangerous mission. The commander must send his erstwhile pal. Instead, he gets him drunk and takes the job himself. In sensational style, besieged on all sides, above and below, with anti-aircraft shells bursting all about him, he destroys an enemy ammunition dump and prevents a drive on the Allied lines. Death is his reward and his pal succeeds to his duty.

Now Errol Flynn, David Niven, Basil Rathbone, newcomer Morton Lowry and James Burke will be seen in the roles. They will be supported by Donald Crisp, Melville Cooper, Barry Fitzgerald, Michael Brook, Carl Esmond and a score of personalities of lesser prominence.

Where Howard Hawks directed "The Dawn Patrol," Edmund Goulding will handle "Dawn Patrol." He did "White Banners" for Warners a short time ago. Before the original "Patrol" was made he had directed Barthelmess in "Tol'able David" and Gloria Swanson in "The Trespasser."

Release date: To be determined.

Peck's Bad Boy

With the Circus

(RKO Radio - Lesser)

Comedy

Eighteen years ago, Sol Lesser first brought to the screen the impish mischievous character "Bill Peck," created by author George W. Peck, in "Peck's Bad Boy." Like the Mark Twain stories, it had been a juvenile American literary classic. Jackie Coogan then was the star. Four or five years ago, Lesser remade the story with Jackie Cooper in the title role. Now comes a brand new version which Al Martin, David Boehm and Robert Neville wrote. Tommy Kelly, who made a successful film debut and was widely publicized in "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," is the inheritor of the Coogan-Cooper role. Edward F. Cline again directs. The extended Lesser-Cline association, as it concerns the story property and its entertainment and commercial potentialities, demonstrates that the producer thinks well of the property.

It is a story of an American boy in trouble of his own making. To be frank, it merely takes advantage of the entertainment value of old gags. A boy, working around a circus for admission passes, is denied that bonanza and must pay the admission for himself and his gang. He puts sleeping powder in the food of a lot of lions, which is very embarrassing to their trainer. Then he is talked into substituting for a little girl bareback rider. The action makes use of a standard vaudeville gag. There is a cross country chase in a circus chariot after which the youngster wins a boys camp obstacle race.

For support, young Kelly will have the services of Ann Gillis, who was with him in "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," Edgar Kennedy, who is given much opportunity to indulge in his

"slow-burning," Benita Hume, Grant Mitchell and Nana Bryant, who are Tommy's parents, William Demarest, Wade Boteler, Harry Stubbs, Fay Helm and Mickey Rentschler, who is appearing in "Boys Town."

Release date: About Oct. 15, 1938.

Disbarred

(Paramount)

Legal Melodrama

Long ago production found in the ethics of the legal profession and the unethical practices of some of its members a fertile source of screen material. Practically every exhibitor knows the technique, reality welded to imagination, all the devices of modern pictorial story telling summoned to amplify the premise, in which plots which concern shady maneuverings resorted to by some lawyers are brought to screen realism. Generally, besides the names values of the personalities, all know what to do about it from the standpoint of exploitation.

The attorney in the case makes big money by selling legal protection to racketeers. He discovers a bright young woman lawyer and, as he carefully conceals from her the real nature of his operations, she wins case after case. Clashes with her prosecuting opponent lead to mutual fondness. Yet, at the big blowup, the prosecutor is convinced that the girl is innocent and she helps the man she loves to expose the unethical lawyer and trap the criminals he has been protecting.

Based on a story by Harry Sauber, for which Lillie Hayward and Robert Presnell did the screen play, "Disbarred," is being directed by Robert Florey. It will feature Gail Patrick as the Portia, Otto Kruger as the shady lawyer, and Robert Preston as the prosecutor. Supporting players include Sidney Toler, Helen MacKellar, Clay Clement, Edward Marr, Olin Howland and a varied assortment of gangsters and courtroom hangers-on.

Release date: January 20, 1939.

Thanks for the Memory

(Paramount)

Romantic Discord

When Bob Hope and Shirley Ross made a hit singing the song "Thanks for the Memory" in "The Big Broadcast of 1938," Paramount executives decided that they would make an appealing starring team.

Their first production will not be a musical, though the meaning associated with the title might suggest it. Rather it is a story of how the ship of happy married life goes on the rocks temporarily because of too many friends—all as odd and interesting characters as the figure in the yarn. But it is the husband's bull headed determination to be both housekeeper and provider for all as he tries to finish a novel that effects the real rift. Divorce is imminent, though the more than fair weather friends scurry back and forth with all manners of flags of truce between the spatting pair. But it is the advent of an heir that brings the couple together again. The principal musical number in the piece will be a new topical version of the title song.

The picture comes under the direction guidance of George Archainbaud, who made "Her Jungle Love," previous to which he was credited with "Thrill of a Lifetime" and "Blonde Trouble," both of which were more or less concerned with romantic problems and conflicts.

The cast in support is made up of experienced players, among them the whimsical comedian Charles Butterworth, Otto Kruger, Hedda Hopper, playing a newspaper columnist role which is also her extra curricular job in real life for the Los Angeles Times, Laura Hope Crews, Roscoe Karns, Elizabeth Patterson, Eddie Anderson, Ed Gargan and Jack Norton.

Release date: November 18, 1938 (tentative).

Devil's Island

(Warner)

Melodrama

Although it has been eliminated, almost everybody knows or has heard something about Devil's Island, the penal colony off the South American coast to which France sent its most dangerous criminals. Innumerable books, stories, articles and several pictures have seen to that.

The story to be told in "Devil's Island" is that of the colony, a doctor sent there for the crime of administering to an escaped convict who had been wounded, and the horrors, inhuman injustices and cruelties that were practised on the condemned prisoners by the island's heartless ruler. Sensationalism will be the keynote of all that is said and done.

Even though everything possible to make life miserably hopeless for the doctor is done to him, he performs an operation which saves the life of the keeper's daughter only to have the keeper break his pledge of clemency and send the doctor and his mates to worse punishment. Escaping, undergoing harrowing hardships in a small boat on the tropical seas, he is picked up by a convict transport and returned to the island. Sentenced to death, as the wife and daughter of the commandant attempt to intercede for him, he is saved from the guillotine by the arrival of the French Minister of Justice, who, upon arresting the commandant, gives the doctor his release and allows him to return home.

Based on the original screenplay by Don

Ryan, Ken Gamet and Anthony Coldeway, "Devil's Island" is being directed by William Clemmens. Boris Karloff, James Stephenson, Nedda Harrigan and Rolla Gourvich will be featured. The lengthy supporting cast includes Adia Kuznetsoff, Will Stanton, Frank Reicher, Stuart Holmes, Egon Brecher, Leonard Mudie, Pedro de Cordoba, Charles Richman, Paul Panzer, Sydney Bracey and George Lloyd.

Release date: To be determined.

Vacation from Love

(MGM)

Comedy-Romance

The story to be told in "Vacation from Love" follows the path of excitement, comedy and romance. In tone it is breezy, flippant and sometimes daring, yet underneath it deals with the social problems of what to do when love gets fed up with itself.

The story starts off with a gag that breaks up a wedding and leads to another which has for its vows love, honor and have a good time, with such emphasis on the third that, following misadventures, the romance goes on the rocks. There's a spat and out come knives. Things can't be patched up and the knives are supplanted by bayonets. The groom deserts his bride and divorce threatens, but the pair fall in love again in Paris. Another clause is written into the marriage pact; a three months' vacation from love every year.

Dennis O'Keefe, featured in "Bad Man of Brimstone" and "The Chaser," and Florence Rice, of "Navy Blue and Gold," "Beg, Borrow or Steal" and "Fast Company," are featured. The principal support includes Reginald Owen, June Knight, Edward Brophy, Andrew Tombes, Herman Bing, George Zucco and Matthew Boulton. A newcomer, Truman Bradley, will be presented in an important part.

John W. Considine, Jr., who was executive in charge of "Too Hot to Handle" (previewed in last week's issue) is the producer. The film is being directed by George Fitzmaurice, long experienced in handling pictures that have a comedy romance premise.

Release date: October 7, 1938. (tentative).

Illegal Traffic

(Paramount)

Action Melodrama

Screaming sirens, speeding automobiles, night flights of mysterious planes, battles between G-men and desperate criminals will be the action background of this melodramatic story.

To all appearances the business of a nationwide transportation company is legitimate. Actually it provides service for escaping convicts, bankrobbers, jewel thieves and others who seek to put as much distance between themselves and the law as possible. It is not until an undercover G-man gets a pilot's job that the head of the company meets his match, the organization is broken up, and of course romance is possible for the hero and heroine.

Louis King has directed many crime melodramas, numbers in the "Bulldog Drummond" series, "Prison Farm" and "Tip-Off Girls" recently. Likewise the trio of authors who prepared the original screen play are long experienced in developing this kind of screen material. Stuart Anthony and Robert Yost collaborated on "Prison Farm" and "Tip-Off Girls." Lewis Foster did "Armored Car."

Melodramatic characterizations are J. Carroll Naish's specialty. Though she occasionally moves into more romantic productions, Mary Carlisle has been seen on the screen often with tough guys and tough cops. Robert Preston is a comparative newcomer, but he helps carry the brunt of the story. The trio will be supported by Judith Barrett, Eddie Marr, Broderick Crawford, George McKay, Richard Denning, Regis Toomey, Dorothy Howe, Sheila Darcy and Dolores Casey.

Release date: October 21, 1938.

THEATRE CONSTRUCTION SHOWING INCREASES

Most New Houses Seat 600 to 1,000; Slow in Large Metropolitan Centers

Theatre construction and remodeling is taking a new fall spurt throughout the country. The majority of new theatres will have seating capacities ranging from 600 to 1,000, in contrast with the 1,200 average of several years ago.

In relation to the entire construction program, there is comparatively little activity in the large metropolitan centers, according to Motion Picture Daily, reporting on the results of a national study.

However, newsreel theatre construction is spurring in New York. Newsreel Theatres, Inc., will open a new 455-seat house this week at 72nd Street and Broadway, and will have another of like capacity in the new Associated Press Building in Rockefeller Center, to open in December. Recently a newsreel theatre was opened on 34th Street, opposite Pennsylvania Station, and plans are being drawn for another newsreel house on Park Avenue at 53rd Street. Trans-Lux is building a house in Boston.

It is noted by architects, also, that the trend continues strong toward rejuvenation of old houses, with substantial amounts being spent to bring outmoded theatres up to date. In many cases this virtually amounts to reconstruction.

Middle West Active

Ohio, Wisconsin and the Kansas-Missouri area report an upturn in new building and modernization.

In the New York metropolitan area the Century Circuit is building a 1,000-seat house at Flatbush and Nostrand Aves., Flatbush, at an estimated cost of $200,000, to open about Thanksgiving; also a theatre to seat 600 on Nostrand off Kings Highway, Brooklyn, to open about Jan. 1. The circuit has remodeled the Albemarle, Brooklyn. With the two new theatres, Century will have 31 houses under direct operation.

The Interboro circuit is building a 600-seat theatre at Linden Blvd. and 218th St., St. Albans, L. I., to open about Nov. 1.

Loew's is remodeling the State, White Plains, at a cost of about $100,000, increasing the seating capacity. Walter Reade will open the new 800-seat Warren Theatre about Oct. 15, construction costing $125,000.

Among major remodeling projects in the New York metropolitan area are the Lane, New Dorp; Adelphi, Brooklyn, costing $45,000; Little Carnegie, Manhattan; Essex, Newark; Central, Pearl River, N. Y., and Liberty, Irvington, N. J. Frank Moscato recently opened a new theatre at 93rd Street and Polk Avenue, Jackson Heights, L. I.

The first of six theatres being built for Warners was opened in Silver Springs, Md., last week. Under construction for the circuit are a 2,000-seat house in Wilmington; the Lane, with 1,000 seats, in Philadelphia; the State, State College, Pa., with 1,000 seats; and the Beverly and Kenedy, on the outskirts of Washington, each with 1,000 seats. Warners' Cameo, Bridgeport, was recently reopened after extensive remodeling.

RKO has no new theatre plans, but is remodeling Keith's in Lowell, Mass., at a cost of $20,000 for opening early next year. The

IT'S "IRISH THEATRE" NOW, BOOKING IRISH PICTURE

The Miami theatre, 47th Street and 6th Avenue, New York, has changed its name to the "Irish Theatre," to be "devoted exclusively to Irish pictures," opening early in October with the "Rose of Tralee."

The "Rose of Tralee" is being distributed in this country by Dublin Film Company. The company also will release "The Mountains O'Mourne" and plans to release two or three additional Irish pictures this year.

Benjamin Brodie is president of Ben-Mir Amusement Company, operating the theatre, and Nat Goren is manager.

circuit spent about $35,000 on modernizing the Orpheum, Kansas City, and converting it to a film theatre.

New Theatres in Ohio

New building is gaining in the Ohio territory. A 1,300-seat house is going up near Mt. Union College, Alliance, costing $90,000. At Mansfield a new $150,000 house has been opened by Interstate Theatres. The Schine circuit is spending $15,000 to modernize the Schine, Ravenna. Ada Amusements is building a 500-seat house in Cincinnati costing $60,000. The new Chakeres Colony Theatre, which cost $75,000 and seats 800, was opened in Hillsboro September 15th. The Mozart, Canton, has been reopened after remodeling.

A number of new theatres are going up or slated for construction in the Milwaukee territory. H. L. Miller is erecting a 300-seat house at Waterloo; Fred H. and William Smith are building a 780-seat house in Menomonee; N. A. Anderson has started construction on a $30,000 house at Arcadia; Frank Milavetz has announced plans for a new theatre at Hurley, and Henry Ringling will remodel a store building at Baraboo for a theatre.

Dickinson's Carlton, Manhattan, Kan.; O. H. Gregg's Gregg, Sedan, Kan.; Dubinsky's Hollywood, Leavenworth, Kan., and a George Hartmann theatre at Mound City, Mo.

In addition, M. A. Summerour is designing a $50,000 theatre for Overland Park, Kan., to seat 700; Dickinson is building a house near Kansas City, and Gus Diamond is remodeling a Salina, Kan., building for a $30,000 theatre.

Miner Named President Of Century Circuit

Henry Clay Miner, chairman of the board of Century Circuit, Inc., was elected president of the company at a meeting of the board this week. He succeeds Abraham H. Schwartz, who died recently. Fred J. Schwartz, son of the late circuit president, was elected a director to succeed his father. No other appointments were made and no changes are anticipated, a company official said.

Active executive direction of the circuit of 50 theatres in the New York metropolitan area will be in the hands of Mr. Miner and Albert A. Hovell, vice-president and general counsel of Century. Mr. Miner will continue as chairman of the board, a post to which he was elected three years ago when he retired as active head and Mr. Schwartz was elected president. Prior to that time Mr. Miner had been president of the company since its inception upwards of 25 years ago.

Mr. Miner has been in the theatre business some 50 years. His father, Henry Clay Miner, Sr., was identified with Miner's Bowery theatre and a number of early-day houses.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

In Full Swing

Activity at the Denham Studios of London Film Productions will shortly reach its highest peak for several months, with the floor taken by at least five pictures which will be in full swing.

"Four Feathers," the adaptation of A. E. W. Mason's yarn, is still in full production on one of the stages, with the exterior lots, meanwhile, occupied by the recreation of the Nile and its surrounding territory.

"Goodbye Mr. Chips," the new MGM picture, is scheduled to start during the next few weeks. Location shots have already been taken at Repton School.

Due to launch forth into production activity is the first Irving Asher picture for Columbia release, "Q Planes," in which it is expected that Ralph Richardson, Valerie Hobson and Laurence Olivier will have leading roles, and which is to be directed by Tim Whelan.

A new Herbert Wilcox production, not yet titled, is scheduled for early shooting, and by November 1st work will have started on a new Technicolor production of "The Thief of Bagdad." Meanwhile away in Burma Michael Powell will be shooting sequences on location for his production of "Burmese Silver," in which Sabu and Conrad Veidt are to play.

"Citadel" Completed

The shooting of central London exteriors concluded actual production work on "The Citadel" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British.

With the aid of cameras concealed in G. P. O. telephone repair tents, or perched perilously thirty feet above ground, and with the assistance of apt timing on the part of the unit, and six cars, scenes were shot in the vicinity of the British Broadcasting Corporation headquarters in Langham Place and around the shopping districts of London's West End. Despite precautions, the stars, Rosalind Russell and Robert Donat, were mobbed several times by fans, but at the end of the week the location material was in the cans.

The film has been shot in sequence, and Robert Donat has worked over 690 hours on the production, which was directed by King Vidor.

Elstree Resumes

With the vacation period over and executives, producers and technicians now back from their annual holiday, work has been resumed at the Elstree Studios of Associated British. Three pictures are now on the floor under the aegis of producer Walter Mycroft.

They are, "The Outsider," a new screen version of the stage play, a Russian story directed by Herbert Brenon entitled "Black Eyes," and the current production now in its fifth week "Luck of the Navy."

This last is a spy drama with a comedy vein running through it. In it a new Elstree discovery Geoffrey Toone has the lead, with the support of Judy Kelly and Kenneth Kent, and a noted stage comedian Edmond Breon has the role of a retired Admiral.

Recent sequences have included the reconstruction of gas mask drill at an Air Raid Precautions class.

Jessie Matthews and her new leading man, Michael Redgrave, inspect the rushes of their new Gaumont British picture, "Climbing High," now in production at Pinewood.

Balcon Plans

Plans have been completed by Michael Balcon for the production, following the conclusion of work on "The Gaunt Stranger," of several other pictures all of which will be made at the Ealing studios of Associated Talking Pictures.

Work is reaching a climatic stage on the latter film, which is being directed from the Edgar Wallace story by Mr. Walter Forde.

Next on the floor, and to follow the Wallace film immediately, will be a new version of "The Ware Case," the celebrated play associated with the late Sir Gerald du Maurier. The play has been adapted for the screen by Robert Stevenson and Roland Pertwee, and among those who have collaborated with additional writing are E. H. V. Emmett, Gaumont British News commentator, and on the famous trial scenes, Edward G. Hemmerde K. C.

The film will be directed by Robert Stevenson and produced by Michael Balcon. The cast is a distinguished one and includes many front rank artistes of British screen and stage. Clive Brook plays lead with the support of Jane Baxter, Barry K. Barnes, Edward Rigby, C. V. France, Godfrey Tearle, Athene Seyler, Ernest Thesinger and Frank Cellier.

Following "The Ware Case" is a comedy which will bring to the fore a new comedian Jimmy O'Dea. The film is to be directed by Walter Forde.

Also on the tapis are an original story by Robert Stevenson—sentimental comedy with music, in which Anna Lee is to star—Edgar Wallace's "The Four Just Men"; "There Ain't No Justice" by James Curtice; "Epitaph for a Spy" by Eric Ambler, and a film with the ballet as a background.

Cooperative

Two major British studios, Pinewood and Ealing, are to join forces in a venture for the production of films on a co-operative basis. The new organization will be known as "Capad" (Co-operative Association of Producers and Distributors).

Plans include the production of pictures by a combination of resources on a co-operative basis and distribution in a similar manner. It is further hoped to bring in another British studio under the Capad banner.

Directors of the new group are: Capt. Richard Norton of Pinewood and Reginald Baker of Associated Talking Pictures, on the executive side; producers Anthony Havelock Allan and Michael Balcon; and financiers Arthur Rank and Stephen Courtald, the men behind Pinewood and ATP respectively.

Presumably the formation of this group will not interfere with the lending of stages of each studios to outside producers.

Captain Norton is a pioneer of co-operative production through his Pinebrook Limited.

Premiere

Despite the crucial international situation and the potential imminence of an armed conflict, the major battalions of Fleet Street went, on Wednesday night last and during the more rush hours of newspaper production, to the Carlton Theatre, there to see, on the invitation of Paramount, the new Pinewood production "This Man Is News," for Paramount release.

The film, with a British newspaper setting, was witnessed by leading feature and gossip writers, art editors and special correspondents, and was accorded an enthusiastic reception by the journalistic illuminati.

David Macdonald directed, Anthony Havelock-Allan produced, from a story by Roger MacDougall and Allan MacKinnen.

Personalities

Brought back from Hollywood by Jerome Jackson, Eric Blore, Hollywood's "perfect butler," is to star in a new comedy for Warner Brothers First National at the Teddington Studios, entitled "A Gentleman's Gentleman," the cast of which also includes Marie Lohr. The script has been written by Austin Melford in collaboration with Elizabeth Meehan.

* * *

Robert Newton, whose performance in "Yellow Sands" has impressed most of the leading critics, has the leading romantic role in the Welwyn production "Dead Men Are Dangerous," and in which John Warwick plays the heavy role.

* * *

Following a short provincial tour of the music-halls—his first love—Will Fyfe will return to the screen in an adaptation of Barre Lyndon's stage success "They Came By Night," in which he will play the part of a nervous little jeweler.

* * *

George Formby, leading British comedian, is to star next in "Forging Ahead," an original by Angus McPhail and Michael Hogan, and to be directed by Anthony Kimmins.

BOOK REVIEW

EDISON'S OPEN DOOR, by Alfred O. Tate, his secretary. Cloth. 320 pages. Indexed. E. P. Dutton & Company, New York. $3.00.

The first time this reviewer came across the name of A. O. Tate, it was that gentleman's signature to an expense account memorandum among a jumble of miscellaneous papers of Thomas A. Edison's first motion picture ventures, "The Kinetoscope Company."

Mr. Tate in that year of 1894 had been, it seems, looking up and down New York for motion picture material, and had spent a matter of a dollar and sixty cents the night before at such places as the Eden Musee and Koster & Bial's. Variety acts were the favorite fodder of the camera at the peep show film mill over at West Orange.

Now comes Mr. Tate, with a surprisingly interesting book about the life and times of Thomas A. Edison, and with astonishingly little about the inventor's labors in bringing forth the motion picture. In fact, Mr. Tate's book makes no reference at all to his functions as a scout of talent and material for the dawn era of the art of the screen.

To the student of the motion picture this book will, however, serve more accurately to orient the status of the motion picture—likely to be Edison's greatest attainment in terms of popular fame—in his actual life and career. Obviously Mr. Tate did not think much about the movies—and Edison was not overwhelmingly impressed with them, either, although Mr. Tate's generally illuminating book does not say so. Mr. Tate says that it was he who rented the space for that first Edison Kinetoscope peep show "parlour" at 1155 Broadway in New York, opening in April of 1894, but he makes no reference to Andrew M. Holland of Ottawa, who was the concessionaire. Also Mr. Tate forgot how to spell the name of the late Frank R. Gammon, of Raff & Gammon, who was so much a factor in what went on in the little world of the films of their natal year.

Showmen will enjoy, though, Mr. Tate's telling of his notion, along with a somewhat blithe party of Edison employees, that night of April 14, 1894, while preparing for the grand opening the next day, that they would give some window shoppers a preview and collect money for dinner at Delmonico's. The boys got the premature show open, but the crowds came so fast that they could not get it shut, and they never did get to dinner that night.

For the first time, in Mr. Tate's book of lively memories, there is a telling of some aspects of the rise of the late Samuel Insull, some insides of the electrical industry and how Edison was maneuvered out of the Edison General Electric Company, some curious phases of the phonograph trade, and how little Edison cared for the amusement business.

More important still, in the large, is an excellent close-up picture of many phases of the upbuilding of industrial America. A pageantry of human and industrial adventure sweeps through the pages. Mr. Tate saw and dealt with important events, and was never dazzled, even by Mr. Edison.

TERRY RAMSAYE.

MODERN PHOTOGRAPHY 1938-39, The Studio Annual of Camera Art—eighth annual edition. Edited by C. G. Holme. Studio Publications, Inc., New York. Cloth. $3.50.

To the pictorially minded the arrival of Modern Photography is an event, comparable with the blooming of the first crocus of the springtime or the burgeoning of the bock beer signs. This volume, arriving annually since 1931, is habit forming.

The present issue, fresh from the presses, records and reflects the increasing vitality of the camera work of the day, with a showing of a freer technique and indications of a new order of adventurousness among the photographers, without, one is happy to record, abandon to the manipulations of the painful ultra modernists. No doubt the editor had plenty of that to deal with among the offerings, too, but he has served the more substantial progress of the art by his constructive selections. Any picture editor these days has many temptations if he is vulnerable to sheer sensationalism.

Modern Photography is competently comprehensive in its presentation of some 110 reproductions, including eight plates in color and eight in monochrome, under an enamel which gives an effect amazingly like an original glossy print. Eighteen countries are represented, including America, Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Hungary and Japan. The array of classic nudes, discreetly presented, indicates that there are several pretty girls who have not yet gone to Hollywood.

One of the best pictures in the book is of a Kansas wheat farmer, under the title of "Prairie Squint"—only the revealed fact is that the subject was a Great Lakes sailor pictured by flashlight in a Detroit studio. The still camera is getting to be as terrific a dissembler as the cinema. Another landscape entitled "Dune Dawn," credited to California, looks very much like a bit of that eternal Mojave desert that has served so many motion pictures since "Beau Geste."

The book includes an excellent article on "Cameras of Today" and a comprehensive tabular presentation of detailed particulars pertaining to the instruments now on the market. The job is of high professional caliber.—T. R.

National Decency Legion Classifies 11 Pictures

Of 11 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were approved for general patronage, four were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Black Bandit," "The Renegade Ranger," "Room Service," "Sons of the Legion," "Too Hot to Handle," "Wanted by the Police." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Avocate D'Amour" (French); "The Edge of the World," "Road to Reno," "Solo per Te" (Italian). Class B, Unobjectionable in Part: "Paroled from the Big House."

Strip Tease Films Showing in Chicago Under City License

Scantly clad women who cavort capriciously on the beach, spicy smoking room stories illustrated with fair actresses, strip tease contests and various other "unusual" screen subjects are now to be seen in film form in Chicago—under license.

"Turn on the Heat," "Nature in the Raw," "Tease for Two" and the "Silk Stocking Series" are some of the titles of these screen productions which can now be seen on Chicago's South State street at the Sportland Arcade. The films, on 16 mm. stock, are shown in automatic "peep-hole" machines that offer approximately 100 feet of film for five cents. The films are usually in two or four episodes and one must see the entire group to grasp the idea of what the story is about.

Films Licensed

The films are all licensed by Police Commissioner Allman, at least the attached "pink" permits, so state. The fees run from $1.00 to $3.00 a reel.

Although the films get little attention aside from a consistent play at the Arcade, film men protest having such films licensed when oftentimes films of legitimate intent are censored for local consumption.

The films shown at the Arcade and other places leave nothing to the imagination. For example, consider two of the pictures, "Wife Vs Secretary" (not to be confused with the MGM feature of that title) and "Turn on the Heat."

The first picture opens with a secretary receiving dictation from her employer. She keeps raising her skirt to attract his attention. It goes on from there.

"Turn on the Heat" starts out with several comely girls engaging in a bridge game. Protesting that the room is cold they call the janitor and ask for more heat. They get it, with the result that they have to disrobe to be comfortable.

"Art Studies"

Others of the films are so-called "art studies" and that's about all they are.

The licenses for the machines are made out to one Charles E. Timroth, who, it is reported, obtains his films from "out-of-town producers." From the locale of some of the films they seem to be from Hollywood or its environs.

About a year ago similar films were to be found on South State street along with the strip-tease burlesque theatres and wide-open night spots. A cleanup of the street closed the penny arcades, burlesque shows and night spots, and not until the last sixty days has the street again been "wide-open." Reputedly ruled by "Bathhouse John Coughlin," political figure, South State street is probably the "Barbary Coast" of Chicago.

WEST OF CHEYENNE: Chas. Starrett, Iris Meredith—Did as much business on this single feature as I've been doing on a double bill. Pleased my farm trade. They liked it. Running time, 53 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown, Jane Wyman—One of those "A" pictures: "A Mess." It drew extra business, but will they come back?—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown, Jane Wyman—A typical Joe E. Brown picture which seemed to please. This, doubled with "Prison Nurse," did above average Sunday-Monday business. Second day surprisingly good. (I've always wanted to take a crack at writing for your column, so I am taking this opportunity while my Dad, J. E. Stocker, is on his vacation.)—Seymour Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

First National

ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Was very agreeably surprised at the business this picture did. Knew it was a swell picture, but hardly expected small town patronage to go for it. But it did! It is a beautiful picture with a thrilling story and the costume effect was soon worn off. Played August 21-22.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CRIME SCHOOL: Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page, "Dead End" Kids—Very good. Humphrey Bogart swell in a role other than that of the gangster. Okay draw. Played August 5-6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan—We dusted this one off and it was swell b. o. Edward G. Robinson turns in an unusually good performance, ably assisted by a top-notch supporting cast. Played September 7-8.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Summer patronage.

Gaumont British

KING SOLOMON'S MINES: Roland Young, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Paul Robeson—The picture, story and acting ok. Business was not so good. The ones that came liked it. Played September 6.—Oaty Elmore, Best Theatre, Charleston, W. Va. General patronage.

NINE DAYS A QUEEN: Nova Pilbeam, Sir Cedric Hardwicke—"Nine Days a Queen" is a picture that should not go by unnoticed. No box office but let's forget that for a minute. In the first place the stars were picked carefully and settings were selected with the utmost care. The story is portrayed in its highest beauty and is handled with great technique. Not only acting was superb but directing and costumes were, I think, faultless. Many people told me afterwards that it stayed in their minds for a long while afterwards. Yes, we must have funny pictures, romantic pictures, but for a change it is great to see a picture that is real life and not covered with a sugar coating to soften it for people who do not want to think. I showed many foreign pictures when I ran the Owl theatre in Grand Rapids but never have I seen a picture such as this. It was one of my poorest nights but I gained by creating good will among my clergy, teachers and women's clubs. May Gaumont British be proud of their masterpiece; may it live forever.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 2-3.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

Grand National

RENFREW OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED: James Newill, Carol Hughes—As good a western of the Royal Mounted as we have ever played. I lost a bit on this. Mr. Irving Cohen, you get your tie. It did more business than "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

UTAH TRAIL, THE: Tex Ritter, Adele Pearce—An excellent western with enough action to suit anybody's fancy. The plot is different and well made for the satisfaction of any western fan. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WALLABY JIM OF THE ISLANDS: George Houston, Ruth Coleman—Played on double bill. The picture was good but was not as good as anyone would think. Did fair. No kicks. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 3.—Oaty Elmore, Best Theatre, Charleston, W. Va. General patronage.

WHIRLWIND HORSEMAN: Ken Maynard, Joan Barclay—We need good westerns. Universal needs a good western star. Maynard needs better production. How about it? Remember "Strawberry Roan"?—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLOCKHEADS: Laurel and Hardy, Patricia Ellis, Billy Gilbert—For slapstick I guess this is about as good as you'll find. Kids loved it and though adults had little comment, they laughed long and heartily.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

BLOCKHEADS: Laurel & Hardy, Patricia Ellis—Without a doubt the best in some time from these boys. Sorry to hear it'll be their last. The house was in one big uproar from start to finish and everyone went out laughing. Finish of picture rather abrupt, otherwise fine for us little town boys. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice, Claire Dodd—Very nice and clever with no draw, but must say it pleased those who came. Melvyn Douglas is very good in part. Same to Florence Rice, but that gal Dodd sure made a guy sit up and take notice. How that girl played her part! Running time, 75 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice—A good picture and very well liked. Everything about it was entertainment. Let's have more like this. Running time, 74 minutes.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. General patronage.

HOLD THAT KISS: Mickey Rooney, Dennis O'Keefe, Maureen O'Sullivan—Not the draw we expected but a darn good picture, nevertheless. Cast is all good and Mickey perfect. Played August 12-13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOLD THAT KISS: Dennis O'Keefe, Maureen O'Sullivan, Mickey Rooney—Three cheers for that Irish trio, Dennis O'Keefe, Maureen O'Sullivan and Mickey Rooney. Give the small town more features like this one and the key cities can have the colossal, stupendous, magnificent extravaganzas. This is my idea of a perfect cast. George Barbier, Jessie Ralph, Frank Albertson, Phillip Terry and Edward S. Brophy are all outstanding. My patrons are beginning to ask when I will have another Dennis O'Keefe picture. Plenty good, and pleased. Even the big St. Bernard came in for a lot of praise. Running time, 79 minutes. Played September 2-3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY'S CHILDREN: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker—Splendid. Well liked by everybody. Lots of good comments from the cash customers. Running time, 77 minutes.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. General patronage.

LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Judy Garland, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner—Easily the biggest draw since "Test Pilot." What's more, every customer was a satisfied one and will bring more quarters back to the B. O. when other Hardy pictures arrive. A natural. Played August 28-29.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

PICK A STAR: Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley, Rosina Lawrence, Mischa Auer, Lyda Roberti—Beat "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" at box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal—An excellent picture in any spot. Beery is still the draw he always has been and, although the theme is one that is not especially adapted for the younger patrons, it is handled with such delicacy that it is not offensive. Morgan steals the acting honors and O'Sullivan is again a washout. Running time, 81 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal—Frank Morgan and company put on a pretty good show. I didn't see Beery.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal—The story is the thing and this picture has it. Excellent.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SHOPWORN ANGEL: Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Walter Pidgeon—An excellent picture for any spot. MGM certainly is finishing their contract with knockout productions, "Swiss Miss," "Woman Against Woman," "The Crowd Roars," "Port of Seven Seas," "Love Finds Andy Hardy." What more could any exhibitor ask from a company. Miss Sullavan is wonderful in her role and James Stewart continues on the high plane he has established in the past few pictures. We consider him one of the ace draws in pictures. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THREE COMRADES: Robert Taylor, Margaret Sullavan, Franchot Tone, Robert Young—Good but not tops. They tried too hard for the unhappy ending. A more agreeable last reel could have been written without sacrificing the plot, in our opinion. Fair draw. Played August 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THREE LOVES HAS NANCY: Janet Gaynor, Robert Montgomery, Franchot Tone—A good picture, but not colossal by any means. I enjoyed it, and most of my patrons enjoyed it. A light picture that should stand up fairly well under ordinary circumstances. Montgomery always plays his part extremely well, and Tone and Miss Gaynor do exceedingly well. To small single feature towns, I don't advise playing it for over two days at the most. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 4-6.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN: Virginia Bruce, Herbert Marshall, Mary Astor—Very good marital story. Pretty short running time for rental classification. Suppose argument would have it, quality not quantity. Running time, 63 minutes. Played August 17-18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Finds 2 Troubles; Show Hits Sheet in Less Than Hour

UTICA, N. Y.—"At 3:30 P. M., during a matinee recently, I lost sound completely," said W. T. MacNeilly, manager of the Uptown Theatre here.

"I at once put in a call for Jack Sanford, the Altec man. He was in Rome, 16 miles away. He got me on the phone in less than five minutes and correctly diagnosed the trouble over the phone. Driving the 16 miles from Rome, Sanford himself arrived in the theatre 20 minutes later.

"He connected up his emergency amplifiers, cleared two separate troubles, and in a few minutes the show went on as usual—all told, less than an hour from the time the sound went dead."

The Altec Service Agreement takes worries about sound off your shoulders. Let the Altec man in your neighborhood explain why he gives you greater protection.

YELLOW JACK: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone, Henry Hull, Charles Coburn—O. K. but Montgomery had too much to say. Others had very little. But business was the best on this day than in a month. Running time, 83 minutes. September 2.—Oaty Elmore, Best Theatre, Charleston, W. Va. General patronage.

YELLOW JACK: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone—Very agreeably surprised with the attendance on this picture. Business was good both nights. The picture was very good although a little "talkish" at times. Swell cast. An interesting sidelight for our community was the fact that the Dr. Reed played by Lewis Stone was the same doctor who took care of "Old Jules" at Fort Robinson when he was taken there after falling in the well and breaking his leg. "Old Jules" locale was just 13 miles from our town and many of its characters are still living here. Played August 28-29.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

YELLOW JACK: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone, Henry Hull, Charles Coburn—Very good. Fair box office. Played August 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

BULLDOG DRUMMOND IN AFRICA: John Howard, Heather Angel—A fair picture as the co-feature on a double bill program. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 7-8.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

DANGEROUS TO KNOW: Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff, Gail Patrick—Very good picture and how that boy Tamiroff can act. But as usual with these pictures built for duals, the box office was 'way off. Played September 2-3.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PROFESSOR BEWARE: Harold Lloyd—Too long off the screen. Younger folks would not come to see him. Picture much along the lines of former ones. Can well continue to stay off the screen. Business poor. Running time, 90 minutes.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. General patronage.

TEXANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett, May Robson, Walter Brennan—Local interest sold this one more than quality of the product. It can be said that it is a good western, although nothing like "Wells Fargo," "Bad Man of Brimstone" or pictures of that calibre. An effort was made to recreate authentic settings, on which score Paramount failed miserably to the amusement of oldtimers here. Played August 31-September 1.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—Very poor. Could all be in a two-reel short. A few more like this for Burns and he will be a has-been. No business. Running time, 75 minutes.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. General patronage.

Republic

ARIZONA GUNFIGHTER: Bob Steele—Average Steele western. Average business. OK.—C. E. Fisher, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

MAN FROM MUSIC MOUNTAIN: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—One of the best of the Autrys and deserves your best playing time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PRISON NURSE: Henry Wilcoxon, Marian Marsh—Here is a prison story with a different slant. Plenty of thrills and patrons enjoyed it.—Seymour Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BLIND ALIBI: Richard Dix, Whitney Bourne—Good even if a little draggy and lacking somewhat in story. Dix is always so sincere; his acting is liked. Played August 12-13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BREAKING THE ICE: Bobby Breen, Charlie Ruggles, Dolores Costello—I believe this tops anything Bobby Breen has done before, and I am one exhibitor who is glad to see him pick up again in his pictures. This carried very good audience reaction and it will make money in any theatre. Irene Dare, the five-year-old skater, who is prominently cast in the picture, can be looked upon to be one of the future's box office personalities. Played September 9-10.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Summer patronage.

CAREFREE: Fred Astaire, Gingers Rogers, Ralph Bellamy—A great show and enjoyed by everyone.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GUN LAW: George O'Brien, Rita Oehmen—Swell. Not a kick in the whole six reels. Most any western goes over big but O'Brien's go over bigger. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 4.—Oaty Elmore, Best Theatre, Charleston, W. Va. General patronage.

SKY GIANT: Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Joan Fontaine—A very good aviation picture that pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, May Robson, Charles Ruggles—Very good comedy which set well with those who attended. Plenty of empty seats but played between two big pictures. Not a big picture but a satisfactory one. Played August 30.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—The biggest box office disappointment of the year.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Special Pictures Corp.

BIRTH OF A BABY, THE: Well, we hesitated a long time before booking this picture. Now that we have played it, we are glad. Drew a nice business from adjoining towns but lacked our own farmer trade. Our town people attended quite freely. Think it is all right to show. Many parents brought their younger children and we have heard no regrets from them for having done so. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 30-September 1.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Spectrum

RANGERS ROUNDUP, THE: Fred Scott—Fred Scott has a good singing voice and this is a better than average western. Given good material, he should go places. Business average.—Seymour Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS GOODBYE: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall, Ian Hunter, Binnie Barnes—Excellent. Stanwyck and Marshall are such topnotch players and the story is good in this one. Result a good attraction. Played August 10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

I'LL GIVE A MILLION: Warner Baxter, Marjorie Weaver, Peter Lorre—The poorest top allocation picture from Fox this year unless it was "Ali Baba Goes to Town." No drawing power in spite of the fact that Baxter is popular here. Believe Baxter should be kept in roles which do not require him to play romantic leads with young girls. Played September 4-5.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PANAMINT'S BAD MAN: Smith Ballew, Evelyn Daw—A very good western. Better than average and pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RASCALS: Jane Withers, Borrah Minnevitich and his Gang—Our Jane is growing up, but we should worry while she keeps growing better. In this one she is ably assisted by Borrah Minnevitich and his Gang, and an all-around good cast. Hilarious entertainment from start to finish. Running time, 77 minutes. Played August 31-September 1.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

RAWHIDE: Lou Gehrig, Smith Ballew, Evalyn Venable—Satisfactory western. Played August 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SAFETY IN NUMBERS: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington—"Jones Family" series. Enjoyable, although this series doesn't compare with the Hardy Family series. Everyone, however, is sure to enjoy it. It's a strictly family picture, and should be billed in a like manner. Book in appropriate shorts and co-feature, if you have two features, to round out the program. Running time, 55 minutes. Played September 9-10.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glenn Morris, Eleanor Holm—From the reports I had read on this picture, I dreaded the date on which I was due to play it. However, by the use of some good shorts, I managed to please my crowd. In fact, the kids thought the feature was swell. Some of the adults told me that it was "corney." I agreed. Running time, 73 minutes. Played August 1st.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Small town patronage.

THREE BLIND MICE: Loretta Young, Joel McCrea, David Niven, Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Weaver—Good comedy drama. Played August 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TRIP TO PARIS, A: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington—Typical "Jones Family" fare which is always liked by our patrons. Will not draw extraordinary business, but usually draws somewhat above normal. Played August 24-25.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ACTION FOR SLANDER: Clive Brooks, Ann Todd—Only fair. It cannot overcome its English atmosphere which is so alien to Hollywood product. The idea was okay but too dragged out in this telling. Played August 9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER: Tommy Kelly, May Robson—Playing against a festival and a carnival did an exceptional business, which was most gratifying. Was a very fine picture and all that has been said about it is true. Played August 26-27.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

32ND STREET: Kenny Baker, Leo Carrillo, Pat Paterson, Zasu Pitts—This is some mixup. The songs fair. Leo Carrillo was at his best but always is in any picture. But no one understood this picture. Too mixed up. Business no good. Running time, 81 minutes. Played September 7-8.—Oaty Elmore, Best Theatre, Charleston, W. Va. General patronage.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES, THE: Adolphe Menjou, Ritz Bros., Andrea Leeds, Edgar Bergen and "Charlie McCarthy"—An extravaganza in color. Certain scenes are breath-taking, but it is too long and much of it is too high-brow for our neighborhood patronage. The ballet dancing and opera singing were not appreciated. Scenes of inside Hollywood very interesting. "Charlie McCarthy" is always good, but his part is not very large. Heard some comments complimenting Kenny Baker's voice. With all its name cast, color and production, it failed to draw and hardly did average business.—Seymour Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Joan Bennett, Henry Fonda—A good romantic drama with no drawing power.—Seymour Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Universal

BOSS RIDER OF GUN CREEK: Buck Jones—Old release. Good print. Swell business.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Warner Brothers

FOUR'S A CROWD: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Rosalind Russell—A good, screwy comedy that pleased our audiences. Played September 4-6.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Summer patronage.

LITTLE MISS THOROUGHbred: Janet Chapman, John Littel, Ann Sheridan, Frank McHugh—The little girl is good, even if the story is pretty stale. Small draw. Played August 16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

VARSITY SHOW: Dick Powell, Fred Waring, Rosemary and Priscilla Lane—Here is a big, long, peppy college musical. It has the kind of music, dancing and comedy that our patrons enjoy. Double billed with "The Port of Missing Girls," which helped. Business above normal.—Seymour Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING SERIES: Think this series is building up for us as Don Grayson is getting a following from our western fans.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

COMMUNITY SING SERIES: Good. These shorts can be worked to advantage if advertised in the proper manner. See some of my other reports on "Community Sing" shorts for further information. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

OH, WHAT A KNIGHT: Herman Bing—A fair comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANAESTHESIA: Pete Smith Specialties—Very interesting. Had enough humor to hold interest of all. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

CANARY COMES ACROSS, THE: Musical Comedies—Very poor; no music; no laughs; no good.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

COUNTY HOSPITAL: Laurel and Hardy Reissues—A riot and pleased very much and drew additional business. Wish Metro would reissue more of them.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

COUNTY HOSPITAL (Reissue): Laurel and Hardy—Still tops. When better comedies are made, Laurel will be back with Hardy, only in shorts. This one was an uproar from title to end. Sat through it twice myself.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

COURTSHIP OF A NEWT, THE: Robert Benchley—For those who like Benchley's humor this picture is excellent. His wit, however, is too subtle for the majority of our small town audiences, so would say no go for the average fan. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FEED 'EM AND WEEP: Our Gang—Saved the day. We played it with "An Optical Poem" and without Our Gang the shorts for that show would have been a washout.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHAT A LION! Captain and the Kids—This is a real cartoon and the first real good one of this new series by Metro.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WHAT A LION! Captain and the Kids—Drew its share of laughs. Good. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

WHAT PRICE SAFETY: Crime Doesn't Pay—Interesting. Any Crime Doesn't Pay series goes over good here. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

HALL'S HOLIDAY: George Hall and His Orchestra—A better Headliner but poorer than most we have run from this company this season. Just average. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE GLIMPSES: Paraphraphics—For a reel that was taken in some zoo this is a fairly entertaining reel except for the poor color. It is very apparent that this was not taken in the jungle. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: O. K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

PLUMBING IS A PIPE: Popeye the Sailor—An extra good Popeye.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS SERIES: In color and very unusual. Sure to please the whole audience. An excellent short. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

RKO Radio

JITTERS, THE: Leon Errol Comedies—A dandy Leon Errol two-reel comedy. Audience in an uproar. Errol intoxicated and with the rubber legs is a riot.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MAIDS AND MUSIC: Nu-Atlas Productions—A very good girl band act.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MAIDS AND MUSIC: Nu-Atlas Productions—The girl leader of the band tries to steal Ina Ray Hutton's stuff and is terrible. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MICKEY'S TRAILER: Walt Disney Cartoons—One of the best Disney cartoons we had this season. Excellent in all respects. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

UNDERWATER: RKO Pathe Sportscope—An excellent sport reel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHRIS COLUMBO: Terry-Toons—A very fine black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FOX MOVIE TONE NEWS: O. K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

WHAT EVERY BOY SHOULD KNOW: Lew Lehr—Fairly good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

United Artists

DOG CATCHER: Skippy Cartoon—Poor. We'll not want any more like this one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES, NO. 54: A very interesting reel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LATIN HI-HATTIN': Mentone Musical Comedies—A would-be singer wrecks this one. Without her it is okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS JUG: Oswald Cartoons—Okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SOMEWHERE IN PARIS: Mentone Musical Comedies—Why do they do it? Looks like somebody tipped over a theatrical boarding house and spilled out a lot of vaudeville, good, bad, indifferent. No direction, just a jumble.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION, NO. 49: This single reel average for this series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

YOKEL BOY MAKES GOOD: Oswald Cartoons—Okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

BOLTED DOOR, THE: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—Just a fair thrill reel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DANGER—HIGH VOLTAGE: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—An average Floyd Gibbons single reel. Some like them and some do not.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FREE AND EASY: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—Not so hot. These reels will do "Charlie McCarthy" no good.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ISLES OF ENCHANTMENT: Colortour Adventure—The color was so washed out in our print that the entire effect of the reel was lost. An excellent subject. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JOE PALOOKA IN "CALLING ALL KIDS": Broadway Brevities—A poor comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MY LITTLE BUCKAROO: Merric Melodies—A good colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RAINBOW'S END: Eddie Leonard—Bert Swor, Lou Lubin, Gus Van and the rest give this all they've got and they scored admirably, so much so that I hope Vitaphone gives us more of these subjects.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Summer patronage.

SWING CAT'S JAMBOREE: Louis Prima and His Orchestra—Bad. Very bad. Prima can't sing and his facial distortions are terrible. When they go into swing, it is so over-emphasized that it spoils the reel and leaves a bad taste in your mouth. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

MAN MADE STEEL (Jam Handy): An excellent colored reel on the making of steel. A very high class reel and very interesting.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

IN COURTS

Court Grants Warner Motion

The first court attack by the major distributors on allegedly illegal practices of the poster rental exchanges resulted in a temporary decision in favor of Warner Brothers this week in federal district court in New York.

In a four page opinion granting Warners a temporary injunction against the Behrend Motion Picture Supply House, Inc., New York, Judge Francis G. Caffey ruled that the defendants infringed the distributor's copyright material by rearrangement and unauthorized reproduction of star photos.

"I do not think there is any merit in the objection that some of the complainant's articles have on them the name of First National Pictures. The proof is satisfactory that this is merely a trade name belonging to Warner," the judge stated.

Counsel for Behrend has decided not to appeal the temporary injunction obtained by Warners. The Behrend company will take its chances on the trial for a permanent injunction, which may be heard in two months if calendar preferences can be obtained. Otherwise, it may not come up for a year or more. Percy Freeman, attorney for Behrend, said an appeal on the temporary writ would be useless because no law exists covering the case.

The ultimate outcome of the case will probably affect 40 poster renters throughout the country. Other major distributors are following the action closely.

Seeks More Defendants In Sam Fox Music Suit

Application was to be made this week to New York Supreme Court Justice Samuel I. Rosenman by Sam Fox and Harry Fox, partners in the Sam Fox Publishing Company to bring in Twentieth Century Music Corporation, Leo Feist, Inc., and Miller Music, Inc., as additional defendants in the $1,500,000 damage suit now pending against Loew's, Inc., Robbins Music Corporation, Jack Robbins, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and Movietone Music Corporation.

Sam Fox Publishing Company, the plaintiff, seeking damages for, it is claimed, breach of a contract for the exclusive privilege to exploit the musical compositions of Twentieth Century-Fox states in its application that the defendants assert they are entitled to assignments of the musical compositions owned by Movietone, and which the plaintiff claims under its contract should be exploited by it. An injunction against the additional defendants, restraining them from allegedly interfering with the plaintiff's contract, is sought.
